Manton Quits U. S. Bench In $400,000 Loan Inquiry

Jurist Resigns With Denial of Improper Conduct; Murphy, Dewey Press Probes

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 30.—Martin T. Manton, senior judge of the second U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Nation's highest-ranking jurist next to the justices of the Supreme Court, resigned today amid a broadening investigation of accusations that he accepted more than $400,000 in loans from persons interested in cases which came before his bench.

He categorically denied any wrongdoing, but said he preferred to step down rather than to be "the central figure in a controversy, no matter what its outcome, that could be seized upon by malicious minds to cast reflection upon the court . . . or to weaken public confidence in the general administration of justice."

His resignation—transmitted to President Roosevelt to be effective no later than March 1—will not end a three-sided inquiry into the charges brought against him.

Tax Records Studied

In Washington, Attorney General Murphy made clear that a "thorough investigation" by the Justice Department would go on; here, New York County District Attorney Dewey said he was considering a "possible criminal prosecution under the income tax laws of the State," and U. S. District Attorney Noonan said any evidence indicating criminal violation of Federal statutes would be put immediately before a grand jury.

Deputy Commissioner Spencer Bates, head of the special investigating bureau of the State tax department, said tonight he had turned over to Dewey records and returns dealing with Manton's personal income taxes.

Bates said the bureau had been making an inquiry for several months.

Appointed by Wilson

"I am told," he added, "that there are between 25 and 30 companies (in which Manton was interested) involved, and we will have to unscramble all those."

Judge Manton, who is 58 and was appointed to the Federal bench by President Wilson in 1916, and to the Circuit Court in 1918, made known his decision to quit after it already had been stated in Washington by Attorney General Murphy and by Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, that he would do so.

Forgets Cares in Long Night of Merrymaking as Its Share in Fight Against Infantile Paralysis

Washington paused last night in its business of running the Nation, to hold out a hand to the Nation's helpless.

Washington found it a job entirely without pain. It packed 10,000 people into seven hotels, danced, dined, goggled at nine bright stars from the Milky Way of the Movies, listened to three top ra-king masters of swing.

From 9 p. m. to 2 a. m., Washington bought itself a high old time with dollars which will go to repair the ravages of infantile paralysis. And, if it needed greater impetus for an earth-shaking fling, yesterday was the fifty-seventh birthday of President Roosevelt, himself one who has won the fight against paralysis.

Big Night for Everyone

It was a fine big night for everybody, except perhaps the stars who scurried from hotel to hotel with little rest, autographed themselves arm weary, and talked themselves hoarse into seven greedy microphones.

President Roosevelt, speaking from the White House at 11:37 and surrounded by the celebrities who interrupted their work and play to come here for his birthday, thanked the Nation's millions for their support of the fight against infantile paralysis.

Police Guard Celebrities

That the celebrations were on his birthday, he said, he considered "only an incident and not a very important incident at that . . . The really important thing is the work itself."

The Capital's seven-fold celebration was only one of thousands in

Court Throws Out 14 Utilities' Attack on TVA

Denies Franchises Set Up Monopolies Against Public Competition

By Robert C. Albright.

Without passing on constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority act, the Supreme Court yesterday dismissed a sweeping test of the law by 14 utility companies which a majority of the justices said failed to prove illegal competition and damages.

"In no aspect of the case have the appellants standing to maintain the suit," ruled Justice Roberts in the 5-to-2 decision. Justices Butler and McReynolds in a vigorous dissent protested the court's failure to decide the constitutional questions raised.

Roberts said the contesting utilities have no property right to be free of competition and that damage alleged to have been suffered from public power invasion of the private field does not follow violation of any right recognized by law. Roberts said injuries claimed "will

19 Die as Winter's Worst Snowstorm Grips 12 States

By the Associated Press.

Blinding snowstorms swept across a dozen Northern States yesterday in the most furious onslaught of the winter.

Transportation was slowed or stopped in many districts between Missouri and New England by snow scaling up to almost 15 inches. Hundreds of schools were closed.

In the North, 16 deaths were reported. Most of them were attributed to exhaustion and overexertion. Wind and lightning caused three fatalities in the South.

Chicagoans floundered through the city's worst storm in seven years. A blizzard piled up 14.8 inches of snow in 14½ hours.

Three rear-end collisions on the elevated railroad lines sent at least 45 passengers to Chicago hospitals, several injured seriously.

Chicago and street car company officials pressed 5,000 men into snow-clearing service. Mayor Kelly asked for 3,000 additional WPA workers to meet the "extreme emergency."

The Chicago Motor Club warned auto traffic was at a standstill in parts of northern Illinois, northern Indiana and southern Michigan.

Drifting snow measured 4 to 10 inches in western New York and an even foot in Syracuse. It mounted to 3 feet in depth between Rochester and Buffalo. Roads were blocked in some sections.

Plane and bus schedules were canceled in many parts of lower Michigan.

Whales Weighed Without Scales By New Formula

You don't need scales to weigh whales any more.

The newest method requires only a mathematical turn of mind, the Smithsonian Institution announced yesterday.

Dr. Leonard P. Schultz, curator of fishes for Smithsonian, has worked out a whale-weighing formula. He said a "constant relationship" exists between a whale's weight and length. It is only necessary, therefore, to estimate the length of the whale and then apply the formula—a constant multiplied by the length raised to a certain power.

The new formula is expected to furnish valuable data on growth rates of the deep-sea creatures.

Lehman Asks Tax Boost, Puts Budget At $411,700,000

Albany, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Gov. Lehman submitted his 1939-1940 State budget of $411,700,000 to the Republican-controlled Legislature tonight with a message urging continuance of existing taxes and imposition of new levies because of the "mounting relief burden" and the decline in tax revenue resulting from the business recession.

Lehman said that unless additional revenue is obtained, the accumulated deficit would reach $37,900,000 at the end of the 1940 fiscal year.

Board Sees Peril in Idle Bank Funds

Inflation Lurking In Vast Reserves, Congress Is Told; Remedy Sought

The present record total of idle bank funds may lead eventually to an unhealthy inflationary condition, the Federal Reserve Board yesterday warned Congress in its annual report for 1938.

Moreover, if such a development should threaten, the board said, it would not be in a position, with its present powers, to prevent it.

This warning was part of an outspoken statement by the board of its views regarding the monetary and banking situations. Although no specific recommendations were made for legislation, the board, in effect, "laid its cards on the table."

It emphasized that there was no immediate danger of inflation. Idle funds, or excess reserves, of Federal Reserve member banks, however, it explained, now total about $3,600,000,000—a figure never attained until recently.

Fear Speculation

"It is clear," the board said, "that the present and prospective volume of excess reserves may at some time become the basis of an injurious credit expansion.

"The ability of the banks greatly to expand the volume of their credit without resort to the Federal Reserve Banks would make it possible for a speculative situation to get under way that would be beyond the power of the system to check or control. The Reserve System would, therefore, be unable to discharge the responsibility placed upon it by Congress or to perform the service that the country rightly expects from it."

Caused by Credit Easing

The present volume of excess reserves is largely the result of the Administration's double-barreled credit-easing move of last April 14. At that time, $1,392,000,000 of gold held by the Treasury in its "sterilization" or inactive account, was released for spending purposes. The Reserve Board reduced reserve requirements by $750,000,000.

By pouring this flood of money into the banking system, the Administration opened its recovery drive. Resumption of spending and lending followed. Idle bank funds were further augmented by the tidal wave of foreign gold that swept into this country as a result of the September war scare.

Fought by Harrison

The board disclosed that George L. Harrison, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, had fought, as vice chairman of the Federal Reserve open market committee, for a policy of applying the brakes on expansion of excess re-

Latins Cool To Naziism, Sheehy Finds

Lima Conference Big Boost for U. S. And Democracy, Educator Reports

By Edward T. Folliard

Returning yesterday from an 18,000-mile airplane tour of South America, the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the department of religion at the Catholic University of America, told The Washington Post that Nazi Germany is experiencing a "growing unpopularity" in that part of the world.

"We underestimate the amount of Nazi propaganda down there," he said, "but we also are inclined to overestimate its efficacy. South American people are too intelligent to be fooled by such a bombardment of broadcasts and literature. Even so, that doesn't justify our sitting back and doing nothing."

He said that President Roosevelt, thanks to his good neighbor policy, enjoys a "tremendous personal popularity" in South America. Secretary of State Hull and former Gov. Alf M. Landon, he added, also were extremely popular.

Will Report to President

Dr. Sheehy traveled to South America as the companion and aide of the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, D. D., Bishop of Omaha, Nebr. They left here December 29, after a conference with President Roosevelt at the White House, and, although their good will tour was unofficial, they will report to the President and to Secretary Hull.

Dr. Sheehy laughed off attacks made upon Bishop Ryan and himself by Der Angriff, the newspaper of Joseph Goebbels, Nazi propaganda minister.

"Goebbels suggested that we were 'paid propagandists' of President Roosevelt," he said. "We plead guilty to the charge of telling everyone we met in South America what we thought of Nazism, but we are still 'strictly amateur.'

U. S. Arming Gladdens Latins

"We know that, on our tour of South America, certain German agencies were most inquisitive about our program. However, we do not claim any credit for the growing unpopularity of Naziism in South America today. Mr. Hitler and Mr. Goebbels deserve all the credit for that."

Dr. Sheehy, who left Bishop Ryan in Miami, where the latter will rest a few weeks, summed up his impressions on the tour as follows:

The good neighbor policy of the United States, particularly since the Lima Conference, has done much to effect a united democratic front in the Western Hemisphere.

South American countries are glad to see the United States

Chile to Conscript Workers, Fearing New Earthquake

Santiago, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Chilean cabinet today conscripted all able-bodied men in Tuesday's earthquake zone for emergency relief work as new temblors menaced survivors.

Men in cities and the country throughout the devastated region, where an estimated 25,000 to 30,000 persons lost their lives, were ordered registered according to occupation. The men will receive regular pay for aiding volunteer relief workers.

The interior minister was given supreme authority over military and civilian authorities in South Central Chile, where the quake was worst.

Earthslides in the shafts of the Swager Co. coal mines at Lota, 35 miles south of Concepcion, last night brought damage but no casualties.

Medical science, in its third attempt, yesterday removed a ¾-inch-long lead fishing sinker from a Washington man's lung, where it had lodged for at least 35 years.

Shortly after Christmas, Harry Duchaine, 44, of 1235 Evarts street northeast, a Soil Conservation administrative employe, entered Mercy Hospital, at Baltimore, where X-ray revealed the sinker penetrating the tip of the lung and surrounded by a mass of fibrous tissue.

Dr. Waitman F. Zinn directed the operation, performed with a bronchoscope and X-ray instruments.

Policeman Loses $1,000 in Blaze Caused by Radio

Fire last night swept the second-floor apartment of R. S. Montgomery, private in the Tenth Police Precinct, at 516 Fourth street northeast.

Firemen said the blaze apparently started when a radio short-circuited. Loss was estimated at $1,000.

Montgomery and his wife were out. Two other occupants of the building escaped.

2 Killed as Blast Rips Cement Plant, Demolishing Office

Fort Collins, Colo., Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Two men were killed and several injured at the Boettcher cement plant, a unit of the Portland Cement Co., near here today when frozen dynamite, being thawed for blasting, exploded.

Walter Hammet, chief clerk at the plant, was injured critically.

The blast rattled windows in Greeley, 20 miles away, and destroyed a $25,000 office building.

Challenges U. S. Drive For Americas' Trade

U. S. Discounts Talk As Answered in Advance by Welles; Italy Is Jubilant

The United States sees in Chancellor Hitler's address to the Reichstag determination to press with greater vigor his drive, in competition with this country, for a greater share of the trade of Latin America.

Italy is jubilant over his promise to fight for that country if a war of ideologies should be begun against that Fascist state.

Britain and France are relieved that the address was comparatively free of the threats that had been feared in advance, but former Prime Minister Baldwin warned that if war should come, "we will fight with a unanimity never seen before."

Thus was summarized here the reaction of the four world powers most vitally interested in the eagerly awaited pronouncement on Nazi accomplishments and plans.

Welles Replied in Advance

State Department officials declined to make any comment until they had carefully read the complete text. But little concern was shown over as much of the address as had been scanned or heard on the radio.

No officials at the department listened to the full broadcast, which was cut short before Hitler had finished speaking. Some circles, however, pointed out the speech raised no new issues for this country and that it largely had been answered in advance by the New York address last Friday by Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State.

At that time Welles declared that, while the fundamental objective of officials here is to "keep the United States at peace," the Government and the people "assert the right to protest the cruel and inhuman treatment of human beings wherever such brutality occurs," and, "if need be, challenge the foreign policy of any other nation which threatens the peace or security of the United States or which results in the violation of the treaty rights of the United States or one of its nationals."

Italy Sees Carte Blanche

Special dispatches to The Post from Rome said Italians delightedly interpreted the Hitler address as giving Italy carte blanche to push her campaign for fulfillment of her "natural aspirations."

High Fascists were reported by the United Press to hold the view that the issue now is clear cut—that France must meet Italy's claims and Germany must be given colonial satisfaction or Europe will face the possibility of another war.

At the same time, the Associated Press from London said that capital and Paris interpreted Hitler's emphasis on economic difficulties as an indication Germany needed peace to consolidate the territorial gains she made in 1938 through annexation of Austria and Czecho-Slovakia's Sudetenland.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to be influenced by the address in his own statement on international affairs to be delivered before the House of Commons today.

Earl Baldwin, former prime minister, speaking at the same time as Hitler, warned it would be a "dangerous illusion" to imagine England was afraid to fight.

Delivering a speech in which he admitted the parts deploring the

Developments In World Affairs

REICHSFUEHRER HITLER in his speech to the Reichstag pledged support to Italy in any war against her, demanded return of Germany's prewar colonies and warned the United States not to meddle with Nazi trade with South America.

ITALY BELIEVED France would grant Fascist territorial demands because of Hitler's pledge of support and rejoiced accordingly.

SENATOR PITTMAN, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared if Hitler's future actions "are as tolerant as his Reichstag speech there will be no fear of any immediate war."

FRANCE REGARDED Hitler's speech as unexpectedly pacific. Prime Minister Chamberlain of Britain will discuss the speech before the Commons today.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, it was reported, will invite Senator Sheppard, Military Affairs Committee chairman, to a conference at which the President will explain the study of American airplanes by a French government representative.

FRENCH AUTHORITIES sought to aid Spanish loyalist refugees trapped and dying amid snow and sleet of mountain passes.

President May Outline French Air Aid

Roosevelt Reported Ready to Call Sheppard To Discuss Plane Deal

President Roosevelt may outline to Chairman Sheppard of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, in the privacy of a White House conference, the part he played in the French military plane deal, it was learned yesterday.

The President, it was reported, intends to call in Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, to talk over efforts of the committee to obtain a copy of a letter which he is said to have sent to Government department heads asking them to cooperate with an official French mission seeking to buy 600 latest-type American planes.

Nazi Helicopter Described

Sheppard revealed that some action had been taken with regard to a demand in the committee that the letter be produced. But he would not say what it was.

The committee, meeting behind closed doors for two hours yesterday, heard G. Grant Mason, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, describe as a spectacular advance in aviation the new German helicopter, a machine capable of going directly upward and coming directly down, moving from side to side or remaining stationary in the air.

Inquiry to Continue

Mason revealed that Germany and Italy had trebled their sales of military and commercial airplanes to Latin-American countries in the last year or two, while sales by the United States had varied little. Germany, he pointed out, is far ahead of this country in plane production.

Sheppard said the committee called Mason in connection with an

Fuehrer Demands Return of 'Stolen' Colonies in Bristling Reichstag Address

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—Adolf Hitler tonight pledged German support for Italy in any war against her, demanded return of Germany's prewar colonies, and warned the United States to keep her hands off German trade with South America.

To a world tensely waiting for an indication of how he would next use his power and whether Germany would support Italian claims against France, Hitler declared Germany and Italy were "determined to give common support to common interests."

Nazi Policies Bristle

In a bristling outline of Nazi policies to an enlarged Reichstag summoned on the occasion of the sixth anniversary of Hitler's rise to power, the Fuehrer also:

Warned the Western powers against interfering "in matters concerning us alone with the purpose of preventing natural and sensible solutions;"

Raised the possibility of the use of force to get back the 1,000,000 square-mile colonial empire "stolen" from Germany unless redistribution of colonies was made on a basis of "fairness and common sense;"

Repudiated "any American intervention in German affairs" and said German relations with the United States suffered from "a campaign of defamation carried on to serve obvious political and financial interests";

Ickes "Apostle of War"

Launched a bitter attack against bolshevism;

Hailed insurgent success in Spain as another "valiant defeat of the newest universal attempt to destroy the European cultured world";

Assailed United States Secretary of Interior Ickes and three British statesmen who frequently attack Nazi policies as "apostles of war";

Proclaimed that Europe could not "come to rest" until the Jewish question was settled;

Disavowed any German territorial demands upon England and France "except that of the restoration of our colonies"; and

Envisaged the possibility of a trade war by which Germans "either live—meaning export—or die," but warned that German leaders were "ready for everything."

Austrians, Czechs Seated

Hitler spoke to a Reichstag of 855 brown-shirted deputies which in its larger size symbolized his greatest achievements—annexation of Austria and the Czecho-Slovak Sudetenland. For the first time 73 Austrian and 41 Sudeten deputies took their places with their German colleagues.

He drove to the Kroll Opera House, where the Reichstag met, through banner-decorated streets. He started talking at 8:03 p. m. (2:03 p. m., Eastern standard time) and did not finish until 10:20 (4:20 p. m., Eastern standard time.) In the closing passages he was bothered by a slight cough.

The Fuehrer boasted of Germany's progress despite restrictions of postwar treaties, spoke scornfully of attacks on Germany by speakers and the press of certain democracies, and declared despite troubled

1,500 Refugees Snowbound In Pyrenees; Hundreds Frozen

By the Associated Press.

Perpignan, France, Jan. 30.—French authorities today sought means of saving more than 1,500 refugees reported trapped in the snow northeast of Puigcerda in Col De Tosas, a mountain pass. About 20 inches of snow fell in the mountains last night and today.

The rescue was made more difficult since the refugees were on the Spanish side of the mountains. French border guards reported finding many refugees frozen to death in the mountain passes.

Heavy snow and rain along the frontier checked the flood of homeless persons today. Physicians pushed into Spain to distribute clothing and care for thousands who spent last night without shelter.

The snow along the deep inland frontier and rain elsewhere in the border region blocked roads with drifts or transformed them into quagmires, adding to the misery of the refugees.

Authorities said that of the more than 80,000 refugees estimated to have crossed into France since the fall of Barcelona, only 250 elected to be sent into insurgent Spain.

Meanwhile the Spanish government at Figueras, principal seat of the Republican regime after abandoning Barcelona, was reported to be planning eventually to transport 20,000 of its Catalonian army to Valencia.

Several hundred soldiers who crossed into France returned to the ranks of their comrades today.

Morgenthau, Douglas Face Bank Quizzing

Transamerica Charges SEC Probe Into Its Affairs Will Ruin It

The $1,400,000,000 Bank of America, battling to prevent a public investigation of its condition by the Securities and Exchange Commission, may call Secretary Morgenthau and SEC Chairman Douglas to District Court for cross-examination today.

The bank's counsel studied subpenas for the Government officials last night, after an all-day struggle against the investigation before Justice O'Donoghue yesterday. Sharp exchanges between Government and bank attorneys punctuated the proceedings, the court refusing to require SEC to produce Morgenthau and Douglas.

Inquiry Hurts Bank

SEC charges of dilatory tactics and false statements by Transamerica Corporation—heaviest Bank of America stockholder—were countered by claims that the proposed public inquiry would ruin the bank, no matter how sound it might eventually be shown to be.

The SEC summoned the bank to reveal its condition at a hearing January 16 into the right of Transamerica to keep its stock listed for exchange trading. Transamerica owns 42 per cent of the bank shares and at one time owned more than 99 per cent, before it distributed part of the shares to Transamerica stockholders.

Reputation Its Asset

The day the hearing was due to open, the bank sued for an injunction to keep the SEC out of its books. Attorney William Stanley, of Baltimore, in explaining the bank's case to Justice O'Donoghue yesterday, said the bank already is subject to regulation by the Comptroller of the Currency and by the Federal Reserve Board. He asserted that this supervision is exclusive and that no other agency has the right to conduct inquiries in the bank's affairs.

The SEC order for the Transamerica hearings and the subpenas for the bank's books to be produced, Stanley said, already had injured the bank. He pointed out that the institution holds $1,400,000,000 belonging to 2,200,000 depositors, in its 490 branches, which are situated in 300 communities. The bank's most valuable asset, he said, is its reputation, which would be impaired by the proposed inquiry.

The SEC charges against Transamerica, he said, criticized the loans and the reserve policy of the bank and implied that it was guilty of other irregularities. Should the hearing be allowed to proceed, he argued, the bank would be helpless in the hands of SEC officials, who would be judges as well as prosecutors.

By the same theory, Stanley said, the SEC could scrutinize the loans and practices of every bank in the country, thus duplicating the supervision performed by the Treasury.

False Statements Charged

Chester T. Lane, general counsel of the SEC, said the object of the SEC was to present the public with a truthful picture of the assets of the holding company. The statements filed by Transamerica with SEC, he said, were suspected of containing false and misleading statements, which had not been corrected by amendments filed by Transamerica.

Thurman Arnold, assistant general in charge of the antitrust division, told Justice O'Donoghue he wished to make clear that there was no dissention among Government agencies and that the Department of Justice would back SEC to the limit.

Stanley called E. H. Gough, an aide of the Comptroller of the Currency, to explain the routine of the office in examining banks and the powers exercised over them by the Comptroller. Gough said the Comptroller had three ways of disciplining a bank, to publish its reports, to cite it to the Federal Reserve Board or to file suit to cancel its national charter.

Gough said, however, when cross-examined by Rogge, these powers were used only in grave cases and that there was no way to force a bank to correct many practices except to write it a letter pointing out what was objectionable.

Letters Offered in Evidence

The SEC counsel placed in evidence the statements filed by Transamerica when it applied to have its stock registered for trading and then offered a series of letters between Douglas and Morgenthau. The first letter was from Douglas, on November 17, 1938, asking Morgenthau for the reports of the Comptroller of the Currency for use in the public hearing. Morgenthau replied, on November 19, 1938, sending the reports for "confidential" use.

Douglas wrote again, November 23, 1938, asking permission to use reports publicly. Morgenthau replied the same day, giving the permission. Stanley protested vigorously against introduction of the letters.

This Chap Has a Birthday, Too

Two-year-old Thomas Clarke Edwards, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Edwards, of 6815 Laurel street, Takoma Park, had a birthday party yesterday, too. While the Nation celebrated President Roosevelt's birthday, Thomas, a great-great-great nephew of President Tyler, blew out two candles on his cake—with the help of relatives. Before disposing of the cake, Thomas saw that his father sent his dime to the White House for the fight against infantile paralysis.

Chairman Doughton Names Committee To Handle All House Tax Legislation

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday named Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of a subcommittee to handle all tax legislation.

REP. COOPER

Other members are Representatives McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Disney (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Buck (Democrat), of California; Duncan (Democrat), of Missouri; Boehne (Democrat), of Indiana; Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts; Crowther (Republican, of New York; Reed (Republican), of New York; Woodruff (Republican), of Michigan.

Philadelphia, Jan. 30 (AP).—Representative George P. Darrow (Republican), Pennsylvania, who represents a Philadelphia district, has left a hospital after recovering from an illness that kept him away from the opening of Congress. The oath of office was administered to him in the hospital.

Senator Norris, advocate of a third term for President Roosevelt, expressed doubt yesterday that the Chief Executive could control the 1940 Democratic convention.

He said that while Mr. Roosevelt "undoubtedly will have great influence" at the convention, a drive by anti-New Deal forces might prevent him from rounding up a majority of the delegates.

"Of course," Norris added in an interview, "there are powers a President can exercise to gain support in a convention, but I don't know whether the President would use them."

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved the nomination of Otto Kerner, of Illinois to be a judge of the Seventh United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The seventh circuit embraces Indiana, northern, eastern and southern Illinois, and eastern and western Wisconsin.

Representative Cannon (Democrat), Missouri, came out yesterday with his third edition of what amounts to the House of Representatives' book of etiquette—"Cannon's procedure."

It sets members straight on parliamentary rules and precedents. It also tells them that they can't:

Arbitrarily insert "laughter" or "applause" in speeches which they have printed in the Congressional Record but which they did not actually deliver.

Introduce distinguished visitors sitting in the gallery. They have to bring them on the floor.

Speak disparagingly of any State of the union.

Refer to any Senator by name, even to compliment him.

The House voted to recreate a special committee on wild life conservation for the duration of the Seventy-sixth Congress. Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, is chairman.

The claim of George L. Berry, Tennessee, for a Senator's pay for the period between his successor's election and his subsequent qualification, drew an adverse recommendation from the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Berry, appointed by former Gov. Gordon Browning to succeed the late Senator Nathan Bachman, was defeated in the August Democratic primary by Tom Stewart who was elected November 8. Berry's name was removed from the pay roll on that date. He contends his appointment entitled him to serve until the qualification of his successor on January 3.

High Court Permits Suit Against Pearson, Allen

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court ruled yesterday that the Washingtonian Publishing Co., Inc., had a right to prosecute a copyright infringement suit against Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, newspaper columnists, and Van Rees Press, Inc., of New York.

The company contended Pearson and Allen had included in their book, "More Merry-Go-Round," a chapter which appeared in The Washingtonian, December, 1931.

Hopkins Aide Offers 2 Plans To Aid Business

Lower Taxes for New Firms, 'County Agent' Systems Suggested

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 30.—A new system of lower taxes to encourage industrial expansion was advocated today by Dr. Williard L. Thorp, personal economic adviser to Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins.

It would be applied only to new enterprises.

As long as these "business babies" are struggling for a foothold, their tax rates should be below those of established industry, Dr. Thorp said in an interview. After they are securely on their feet and the speculative hazards of innovation removed, their rates should rise to the same level as their older competitors.

Would Revamp Department

Dr. Thorp advanced the experiment as an example of what might be done to carry out Secretary Hopkins' promise of better relations between business and Government. He stressed, however, that he was speaking only for himself and without Hopkins' approval.

The young economist also outlined what he considered a feasible program for reorganization of the Commerce Department to bring it into more intimate understanding of the day-by-day problems of business.

Patterned after the county farm agent plan adopted successfully by the Department of Agriculture, this program would call for creation of a staff of "traveling salesmen" in the Commerce Department. It would be the job of these men—each expert in his line—to keep in constant touch with the particular industry to which he was assigned. On the one hand he would keep individual businessmen informed of the situation in business as a whole; on the other, he would keep Government informed of the current problems of business.

Digging Facts for 20 Years

The machinery necessary to this system of taking business apart to see what makes it tick is already largely existent in the Commerce Department, Dr. Thorp said. But it is directed to the study of foreign trade. He would merely divert it to domestic consideration.

As director of research for Dun & Bradstreet, familiar with the problems of 2,000,000 businesses throughout the country, he is confident that it would work—that business and Government will cooperate to mutual advantage if only they know the facts. And he has been digging out the facts for 20 years.

Court Bars Return Of Alien Property Taken in Wartime

Justice Edgerton of the United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld a District Court decision that "alien enemies" during the World War cannot now recover property seized by the Government during the war.

In a bill of equity filed in 1931, Aron, Emil, Seigfried and Siegmund A. Hirsch attempted to recover property seized by the alien property custodian.

The District Court ruled that "so long as Germany is in arrears" with its obligations alien property returns "shall be postponed."

Archives Hours Are Extended

The National Archives, beginning tomorrow, will extend the hours of the search rooms, Archivist R. D. W. Connor, announced yesterday.

Chavez's Name Brought Into WPA Trial

Workers Sent Home After Election Victory, Witness Testifies

By the Associated Press.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Jan. 30.—The name of Dennis Chavez, New Mexico's junior Senator, was injected today early in the mass trial of 35 persons charged with conspiracy against the Federal Government for political use of the WPA in the State.

Earl Bowdich, building superintendent at the University of New Mexico, testified for the Government that WPA workers on a university grounds project were told to "go home" the day after the Albuquerque city elections in April, 1938, marked by a political clash at the polls between Senator Chavez and Clyde Tingley, then Governor.

On that occasion, Bowdich testified, Salamon Chavez, a cousin of the Senator and project supervisor, was "jubilant."

United States Attorney Everett Grantham outlining the Government's case, charged WPA workers had been moved about New Mexico's political stage like puppets.

The Government swore in 133 witnesses after dismissing charges against ten of the original 45 defendants charged in the one blanket indictment with conspiring to defraud the Government through fraudulent use of the Works Progress Administration.

Among those cleared were Joe Martinez, personal secretary of Senator Chavez, and former WPA Zone Supervisors W. R. Poor and E. A. Rose. Five of those dismissed were immediately subpenhed as Government witnesses.

Amlie to Appear For Hearings on ICC Appointment

By the Associated Press.

Thomas R. Amlie, Wisconsin Progressive, announced yesterday he would appear in person before a Senate sub-committee to answer questions as to his fitness to serve on the Interstate Commerce Commission, to which he has been named by President Roosevelt. He had received an invitation from Senator Johnson (Democrat), Colorado.

Representative Bolles (Republican), Wisconsin, now representing Amlie's Wisconsin district in the House, recently criticized Amlie on the House floor as an "extreme left winger."

Amlie said yesterday he and Bolles had "been fighting for years . . . His attack is just another phase in a long series."

Conferees Meet Today On WPA Bill

May Compromise All Issues at One Sitting To Speed Final Vote

By the Associated Press.

The relief appropriation bill moved into the semifinal stage of Congressional consideration yesterday and leaders predicted it would be sent to the White House before end of the week.

Since the bill passed by the Senate differed, in some particulars, from that approved by the House, a joint committee was appointed to bring the two versions into conformity.

The principal dispute in connection with the appropriation—whether it should be $875,000,000, requested by President Roosevelt, or $725,000,000 urged by Congressional economy leaders—had been removed when both House and Senate approved the $725,000,000 figure.

These are the major differences for the committee to consider:

The Senate wrote into the measure a provision that not more than 5 per cent of the present enrollment of WPA workers could be discharged before April 1.

The Senate adopted its own version of what should be done to keep politics out of relief.

The Senate made changes in a House provision forbidding application of civil service to the administrative personnel of WPA.

The Senate eliminated a provision, added in the House at insistence of Southern members, requiring that WPA wage scales be so adjusted that there be no more than 25 per cent difference between the rates in the highest paid and the lowest paid sections of the country.

Representative Woodrum, chairman of House conferees, said his group would agree without discussion to the ban on cutting WPA rolls.

On the other questions, he added, there would have to be discussion. He foresaw no difficulty, however, in reaching agreement.

"The conferees will meet tomorrow," he said yesterday, "and we ought to finish up at one session."

SEC Split Over Safeguard Needs In Reorganizations

By the United Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission was disclosed last night to be split over the extent of safeguards to holders of utility preferred stocks to prevent them from being made the victims of "squeeze plays" by holders of common stocks in financial reorganizations.

The dispute centers about permission which the SEC gave the North American Co. to simplify corporate structure of its holding company system.

The reorganization calls for the elimination of the North American Edison Co.; the amendment of its certificate of incorporation to change various provisions of its outstanding preferred and common stocks; the issuance of 896,500 additional preferred shares; calling of its outstanding debentures and issuance of new debentures in the amount of $70,000,000.

The Washington Railway and Electric Co. was not affected by the reorganization scheme.

The commission imposed certain restrictions about the stock issues which Commissioner Jerome Frank held in a minority opinion did not go far enough.

Wheeler Would Reorganize ICC to Assist Railroads

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, recommended tonight a program of legislation to aid railroads. Among the steps he urged were reorganization of the Interstate Commerce Comission and speeding up reorganization of roads needing it.

Addressing the traffic division of the Chamber of Commerce, Wheeler said that "without a large scale business advance, nothing that we can do for the railroads would really meet their needs.

"But even if business improves, and continues to improve," he added, "there are many steps which can be taken to help the railroads, steps which will help them in good or bad times."

He urged an "even-handed regulation" of competing forms of transportation and an inquiry to determine whether they are being unduly favored by the Government.

He expressed belief that the ICC would function more efficiently by leaving decisions to a smaller group of men. All of the present 11 commissioners participate in cases which come up on appeal and each also works in the commission's lower divisions.

The Montana Senator said he favored legislation to provide minimum standards for railroad reorganizations.

Postalized Rates Urged

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said yesterday he would introduce a resolution asking the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate the feasibility of "postalized railroad rates. Under "postalized" rates the couptry would be divided into zones, with a low passenger fare on a flat rate for eacn zone.

Court Aide Fined For Tardiness

Richmond, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—Tardiness is costly, agrees Henrico Circuit Court Clerk Matt Puller.

As Puller arrived in court 12 minutes late, Judge Julien Gunn looked up and frowned:

"You have kept the court waiting for more than 10 minutes, Mr. Puller. This must stop.

"I order that you shall be fined $5 for contempt of court, and I instruct the Commonwealth's Attorney to collect the fine."

Processing Tax Favored by Wheat Growers

Rail Rate Adjustment On Farm Products Also Urged on Wallace

By the Associated Press.

A group of wheat growers recommended to the Agriculture Department yesterday that processing taxes be re-enacted and freight rates on farm products "adjusted."

The recommendations, considered at a conference of 50 growers from a score of States last week, were addressed to R. M. Evans, agricultural adjustment administrator.

Both President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau have said recently that they opposed imposition of a processing levy, but Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has advocated the tax.

"It is not anticipated that loans and conservation payments will enable the grower to achieve parity income at all times," the recommendation said.

"Therefore, it will be necessary that parity payments be provided in years of low prices. It is recommended that in order to provide sufficient funds for parity, a processing tax be levied so that the commodity will pay its own way."

Freight rate adjustments were suggested to correct "faulty distribution."

Continuance of export subsidies "as long as other nations are using the same means" also was advocated.

The wheat growers recommended that "acreage allotments be the tool to be used in solving the surplus problem."

Crop insurance also was indorsed.

Sheriff Who Faied in Effort To Hang Slayer Dies Here

Death Revives Strange Tale of Will Purvis Who Prophesied He Would Outlive His Jury—He Did

The final chapter of the strange tale of Will Purvis was written yesterday with the death of former Sheriff Ivin O. Magee, of Marion, Miss., who succumbed at 81 in the home of a son here, Otho Magee, of 1630 Van Buren street northwest.

I. O. MAGEE

In 1894, when Magee was sheriff of the Mississippi community, he sprung the trap at the hanging of Will Purvis, whose conviction for murder stirred Nation-wide protest. On the fateful day that the jury had found him guilty, Purvis turned to the jurors and, pointing his finger at them, prophetically declared: "You will all die before me. I will outlive every one of you."

As sheriff it was Magee's duty to place the rope on Purvis' neck and carry out the hanging. He sprung the trap, but when doctor's examined the executed man they found him very much alive. The rope knot had slipped.

Magee believed that Purvis' escape from death was an act of God, and refused to repeat the walk to the gallows. Agitation to save Purvis grew, and his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

During the years that passed, Purvis' curse came true. In 1911 Purvis was given an unconditional pardon after the real murderer had confessed. One by one the jurors died, the twelfth man October 13, 1938. Four days later Purvis himself succumbed.

Magee often told friends that Purvis, whose life he saved through reluctance to hang him a second time, had never included him in the omnious prophecy.

Four years after the "hanging" of Purvis, in 1909, Magee and a deputy were ordered to halt the 75-round bare knuckles world championship fight between John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain at Richberg, Miss. They compromised with a belligerent crowd and accepted ringside seats instead.

Magee leaves his wife, Ella; five daughters, Dimple, Jewel and Kathleen Magee, Mrs. Kathryn Jones and Mrs. Donald O'Bryant, all of Washington, and three sons, Otho, jr., of Washington, Rex B., and Earl, of Jackson, Miss. Private services will be conducted at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, tomorrow at 10 a. m. Burial will be in National Memorial Park.

Court

not support a cause of action or a right to sue"

The ruling, dealing private utilities their sharpest setback in three years of litigation to overturn the TVA, was announced a few moments after Felix Frankfurter, Harvard University's former law teacher, took the oath of an associate justice and stepped to a seat at the extreme left of the bench.

Justice Frankfurter, in crisp, clear phrases, repeated after clerk Charles Elmore Cropley his pledge to administer justice to rich and poor alike, without respect to person. Previously he had received the constitutional oath from Chief Justice Hughes in an adjoining conference room. All of his colleagues save Justice Brandeis, who is ill, heard the oath.

High ranking Government officials were present, and the small courtroom was packed to capacity. Mrs. Frankfurter sat in the reserved section with a party of friends. Justice Black clasped Frankfurter's hand as he took the seat just to the Alabaman's left.

TVA's Hands Untied

It was court "decision day" and a long line of opinions immediately followed the brief ceremony. Only seven justices participated in the TVA opinion by Roberts, Justice Reed taking no part. Since death of Justice Cardozo, the court has been functioning with only eight justices.

Other action, on a busy docket, included rulings upholding validity of the Federal tobacco inspection act, affirming the right of the National Bituminous Coal Commission to disclose cost data of coal companies, and sustaining State laws for taxing and regulating truck operations. A challenge of the status of the child labor amendment was set for reargument on February 27.

The TVA decision was received without comment by utility spokesmen, who declined to indicate their future course of action. Informally, some TVA officials expressed the hope that the ruling ends the litigation stage of the agency's stormy life. Lacking further challenge, the TVA could proceed with construction of 11 dams and sale of surplus power.

Monopoly Rifts Denied

The utilities had argued that their local franchises constituted property which was being taken away from them or injured by TVA competition.

"The vice of the position," said Roberts in his majority finding, "is that neither their charters nor their local franchises involve the grant of a monopoly or render competition illegal. The franchise to exist as a corporation, and to function as a public utility, in the absence of a specific charter contract on the subject, creates no right to be free of competition, and affords the corporation no legal cause of complaint by reason of the State subsequently authorizing another to enter and operate in the same field."

Roberts said the case record justified the lower Federal court finding that the TVA "has not indulged in coercion, duress, fraud or misrepresentation in procuring contracts with municipalities, co-operatives or other purchasers of power; has not acted with any malicious or malevolent motive, and has not conspired with municipalities or other purchasers of power."

The court ruled that TVA action in the States where the authority now operates is "consonant with State law," but "if the fact were otherwise the appellants would have no standing to restrain its continuance."

To the utility argument that TVA activities were tantamout to Federal regulation of purely local matters reserved to the States, Roberts answered that this was "nothing more than an incident of competition; it is but a method of seeking and assuring a market for the power which the Authority has for sale, and a lawful means to that end."

"The sale of Government property in competition with others is not a violation of the tenth amendment. As we have seen there is no objection to the authority's operations by the States, and, if this were not so, the appellants, absent the States or their officers, have no standing in this suit to raise any question under the amendment."

The court also overruled the utility contention that the TVA and Public Works Administrator Ickes co-operated illegally to intimidate companies into selling their power systems and to force municipalities to buy TVA power. He ruled that co-operative action of TVA and PWA "does not involve unlawful concert, plan, or design, or co-operation to commit an unlawful act or to commit acts otherwise lawful with the intent to violate a statute."

Other action of the court:

Refused to pass upon a California Supreme Court decision that activities of a San Francisco health organization violated the State medical practices act.

Refused to review constitutionality of the Federal alcohol control act.

High New Dealers Watch

An interested spectator at his own first session, Justice Frankfurter listened closely while Roberts read the TVA decision, smiling slightly as Roberts finished.

His induction into office was accomplished with the usual court briskness. Black-robed like his colleagues, his right hand held high, the man who came to this country as a 12-year-old Austrian immigrant and rose to high distinction as a professor of law, in the brief interval required for the oath became the third justice to take a seat on the bench under President Roosevelt.

Washington Jams Birthday Balls to Aid In Nation's Fight Against Infantile Paralysis

every city, town and hamlet in the United States. Before last night's dances climaxed the campaign, dimes contributed here during the week totaled $9,176.90 of $84,942 given throughout the Nation. Dimes from well-wishers continued to pour into the White House.

Heroic means were devised to shield the movie stars and Mrs. Roosevelt from crowds which packed lobbies, overflowed into streets and gave police more than one breathless minute when they tried to crowd into the precincts reserved for ticket holders.

Celebrities were hurried down back alleys and into service entrances, whisked through kitchens and boiler rooms and sequestered behind screens until time for their appearance. Crowded lobbies gradually emptied when it became apparent no celebrities would pass through them and that no glimpse was possible into carefully sheltered and guarded doorways.

On their jumps from hotel to hotel, the stars and Mrs. Roosevelt were escorted by motorcycle police aided by 27 officers and 225 men of the Fifth Marine Regiment, Fleet Reserve.

First to arrive at the beginning of his race through Washington was George Brent who strode into the Wardman Park Hotel promptly at 9 p. m. He was taken in charge by Gordon Hittenmark, master of ceremonies, who suggested, "I suppose you'll meet thousands of people tonight."

"I'm afraid so," said Brent, ruefully, then explained, "I intend to do all I can to help the cause along . . . and I hope it's not too late to wish you all a happy New Year."

Flynn Introduces Lili

A half-hour later Errol Flynn and his wife, Lili Damita, arrived to a burst of cheering. Called to the microphone, Flynn introduced Miss Damita who, he, remarked, "speaks better English than I do French."

"Zo 'oppy to mit you all," said Lili.

At 9:15 George Bellamy and his wife opened festivities before 3,500 at the Mayflower, followed at 9:45 by Andrea Leeds, who announced yesterday was one of "three great moments" in her life. The others, she said, were her graduation from college and her first movie contract.

George Brent, reaching the Mayflower at 10, found most of the huge crowd jammed on the dance floor motionless, listening to Paul Whiteman's orchestra. When the 3,500, during a lull, recognized Brent they sent up a roar that shook the crowded balconies.

Brent waved his hand and said, "Hello." With one voice the crowd yelled back, "Hello."

Flynn and Miss Damita arrived while Brent was at the hotel and were called to the microphone and there made news again when a guest trod on her train. She and Flynn were delayed until it could be repaired behind the screen erected at the end of the ballroom.

Nation Hears Whiteman

At 11:15 Paul Whiteman's orchestra went on one of the most extensive radio hookups ever conceived in this country. His music was carried across the continent by the three big networks.

Mitzi Green opened the doings at the Washington Hotel before 250 people at 9:20 and sang "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

At the Raleigh, Mrs. Roosevelt appeared at 10:20 with Annabella to meet an uproarious greeting from a crowd of 650 which police had difficulty restraining from overflowing onto the floor. In a brief talk, Mrs. Roosevelt thanked the guests for their part in the campaign against paralysis and said, "I'm very glad to be making these rounds again."

Andrea Leeds, reaching the Shoreham at 10, told 2,000 merrymakers she was "very happy to be here, but there's no snow." Bellamy arrived at 10:55, took a bow and retired to await Mrs. Roosevelt, who entered almost at once, to a chorus of cheers.

Hersholt Tells of Quints

Jean Hersholt, veteran character actor, wowed 450 merrymakers at the Hamilton when he told of his experiences with the quintuplets while filming a picture. High spot of the occasion, he said, was their five-fold astonishment when exigencies of picture making required him to spend 2 hours consuming one breakfast.

Bruce Cabot, after appearing before 700 at the George Mason in Alexandria, Va., sped to the District line behind an escort of Virginia State troopers and was picked up by a District escort to continue the rounds. He appeared at 12:20 to greet 2,000 at the Willard.

LeBaron at Willard

Besides Whiteman, playing at the Mayflower, was Eddie LeBaron playing at the Willard. LeBaron later furnished music at the Carlton for the $25 gold plate breakfast which began at 2 a. m.

Eleanor Powell, detained in Baltimore until 10:15 p. m., rushed to Washington as soon as she was free. She reached here in time to join the other stars and band leaders in a reception by the President at the White House from 11:15 to 11:50 and then made the rounds of hotels.

Luise Rainer, slated to start the ball rolling at the Washington was ill in New York and unable to take part.

The President observed his birthday quietly, keeping away from his office desk and meeting with only a few officials. He and Mrs. Roosevelt were hosts to the visiting screen and stage notables at a luncheon, and in the evening he cut the 21-candle birthday cake in accordance with the Roosevelt family tradition at a dinner with a small group of intimate friends including the 19-year-old "Cuff Links Club" and members of the official family.

Midnight Shows Staged

Guests of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the dinner were Stephen Early and Marvin McIntyre, his secretaries; Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, Kirke Simpson, Charles McCarthy and James Sullivan, all members of the "Cuff Links Club," composed of friends who received from Mr. Roosevelt cuff link appreciation gifts in 1920; Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, jr., Hall Roosevelt, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, Dr. Ross McIntire, Col. Edwin Watson, Capt. Dan Callaghan, Miss Marion Dickerman, Miss Nancy Cook, Miss Marguerite Le Hand, Miss Grace Tully, Miss Malvina Thompson, Winston Frost, Charles McVeigh and Basil O'Connor.

Capitol and Earle Theaters staged a midnight show, combining the vaudeville bills of each at both houses, with "Red" Skelton master of ceremonies at the first and stuttering Roscoe Ates carrying on at the latter. Both shows were jammed, at $1 per person, with all the proceeds going into the antiparalysis fund.

Autograph collectors—by the hundreds—ignored the rain and had a busy day of it chasing the celebrities from party to party, hotel to hotel.

Text of President's Speech

Following is the text of President Roosevelt's birthday address last night:

I like to think that the celebrations being held from one end of the country to the other tonight are an indication of the national determination to wage unending warfare against a national peril.

We are all engaged in a campaign which, because of special circumstances, requires that our effort shall be Nation-wide, unified and continuous. Infantile paralysis is an enemy which neither slumbers nor sleeps. It lurks in hidden places and strikes without warning whether the victim be child, or youth, or man or woman of mature years.

I emphasize the importance of a Nation-wide, continuous campaign because experience tells us that epidemic diseases can be stamped out only through carefully directed work on a Nation-wide scale. We need, therefore, the co-operation of every State and county, every city and town, every hamlet and crossroads community in this work. Only by such co-operation has tuberculosis been brought under control in our lifetime. Only by the same concerted action will the scourge of infantile paralysis be stamped out.

50% of Proceeds Stays Home

I should like to say just a word about the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Not yet two years old, it is a mature and efficient organization working industriously to perform its functions with but one objective—the banishment of infantile paralysis. Last year the National Foundation received all of the net proceeds of the birthday parties for its national work.

This year 50 per cent of the net proceeds of tonight's parties will go to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. But the remaining 50 per cent will be spent in the communities where the money is being raised. The funds will be administered through county chapters of the National Foundation. These chapters will be composed of those chairmen who have worked so hard to make this year's drive the success we all anticipate, and those other members of the communities whose association with medicine, public health activities and other agencies, give them special equipment to supervise infantile paralysis relief work in local communities.

While the county chapters extend local assistance to victims, especially those who are without funds, the National Foundation must carry on with equal persistence the work of tracking the germ of the disease to its source.

Local Self-Determination

We believe that this basis of the division of funds will also afford a well balanced division of activity between the central organizaton and the far-flung county communities. Thus while the central organization directs the broad work of research and care and treatment, local relief will be carried out through county chapters in accord with the American principle of local self-determination.

In thanking all who have made possible the widespread celebrations being held tonight—I am informed that some 25 thousand events are being carried out—may I, in passing, speak of one phase of this campaign which touches me personally. I refer to the fact that these celebrations to raise funds are being held on my birthday. I consider that as only an incident and not a very important incident at that.

By this I do not mean that I am insensible of the honor which the selection of my birthday for this effort implies. I am deeply appreciative of that honor and feel in my heart a joy greater than I can express that in this year, as in previous years beginning with 1934, my birthday should be chosen as a pivotal date around which this splendid campaign should move.

"My Thanks Go to All"

The point I wish to make is that the really important thing is the work itself. For that noble work one day is as good as another. The ideal we strive for is to work every day in the task which is our to achieve.

Again, as in previous years, I must take this means of thanking the vast army who have worked for the succes of this campaign. Their very number, greater than ever will be known, precludes individual acknowledgement. My thanks go to all who have made contributions, either directly or indirectly, whether through patronage of the parties, in contributing to the March of Dimes, or aiding this great work by other means. And I desire, also, to express my heartfelt appreciation to the thousands and thousands of friends who have sent birthday greetings

With my thanks to all of my countrymen goes from the depths of my soul a prayer that God will bless the work and the workers. The good cause must go on.

4-Year-Old Sells Birthday Cake to Aid Paralysis Fund

Selling his birthday cake to guests at 10 cents a slice, 4-year-old Arnold Barr, yesterday contributed $1 to the President's infantile paralysis fund.

Son of Mr. Barney Barr, a Government Printing Office employe, and Mrs. Barr, of 816 Sheridan street northwest, the youngster insisted on the sale. His only worry was that the "President might get so much money that he won't need the dollar."

Must Go Overseas If We Fight Soon, Van Zandt Warns

Representative Van Zandt (Republican), of Pennsylvania, in a radio talk last night discussing the Administration's defense program, said that "when you add up the international situation today, there is no possible enemy for the United States to fight in the near future, unless we leave home to do it."

He declared neither Germany nor Italy has the resources to wage an overseas war, "Japan is too much engaged in trying to swallow the Chinese dragon" and "Stalin is busy watching Germany on one side and Japan on the other."

He urged "a thorough job of surveying our national defense resources before Congress takes any action."

38 Child Cripples Invite President to 'Swim in Our Pool'

Milton, W. Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—Marked "special, official business, answer requested," an invitation to President Roosevelt to "come and swim in our grand salt water pool" was dispatched today by child patients at Morris Memorial Hospital for crippled children. It read:

"Mister President, there are 38 of us children who are celebrating your fifty-seventh birthday here . . . We are having a big Roosevelt birthday cake and ice cream and we want you to know how happy we are. Miss (Edith) Miller, head nurse, is going to tell us all about you at our storytime hour and how you are helping us build this beautiful hospital and we all want you to come and visit us and swim . . ."

Muskingum College Alumni Meet Here

Progress of 102-year-old Muskingum College was related here last night by Robert N. Montgomery, president of the New Concord (Ohio) institution, before a meeting of District alumni at New Colonial Hotel. Other speakers were Representatives Secrest and Lewis, of Ohio, both Muskingum graduates.

The alumni elected J. Donald Sutherland, president, and Uvon Skimore, secretary.

with photographs of eminent men, including one of President Roosevelt, inscribed "To my very good friend"—Manton said in a weary and sardonic voice that his plans were uncertain, but that "I think I'll try to build up some of these big industries I'm interested in."

At one point, in answer to a question concerning the books of corporations with which he is connected, he responded:

"You ask Dewey. He wants the publicity."

It was Dewey who only yesterday sent to Chairman Sumners a letter asserting the jurist had accepted personally, or through corporations contfolled by him, six loans totaling $439,481.

Most of this money, said Dewey, was never repaid and four of the six transactions involved litigants before the circuit court whose cases later were won.

"There was nothing in any business transaction in which I have ever been engaged," Manton said in his formal statement, "of which I am in any way ashamed or which to any candid mind could cast a reflection upon my personal or official conduct, whatever might be said of my success or lack of success as an investor."

He had owned "substantial" property, he added, when he first was appointed to the bench, and this property "no law and no canon of judicial conduct called on me to surrender, sacrifice or neglect."

"If I were to consider myself alone," he added, "I would welcome the opportunity to meet any charges that might be brought against me, either as man or as a judge, in any proper tribunal, confident as I am of my own integrity and of my ability to repel every accusation, insinuation or harmful inference."

Intended to Retire

But, he said, to have retained the robe would have been to bring about a situation "intolerable" to him, and so he had decided to "carry out an intention which I have entertained for some time—to retire from the bench."

Attorney General Murphy indicated clearly in Washington that pressure had been put upon Judge Manton to retire.

In an announcement made several hours before Manton himself disclosed his resignation, the Attorney General said that in a conference here last Wednesday he had "discussed with Judge Manton the desirability of the judge's resignation and received the judge's assurance that he would resign."

"The Attorney General is convinced," Murphy's statement added, "that resignation of the judge will facilitate the thorough investigation of charges against the jurist and protect the administration of justice by keeping the courts completely above suspicion."

Manton himself said he had told Murphy last Wednesday of a long-held intention to retire "and that my only hesitation at the moment arose from a natural disinclination to even seem reluctant to face any investigation which any authority might institute. He was good enough to say that he thought no such inference would be justified."

House Inquiry Possible

Dewey's letter of condemnation was sent to Sumners as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, which customarily brings impeachment proceedings. Sumners, while saying he always had opposed continuing such investigations after an official had resigned, added that the committee nevertheless could proceed with its inquiry.

Manton—whose judicial district covers New York, Connecticut and Vermont—was graduated from Columbia Law School in 1901 and holds honorary degrees of doctor of laws from Fordham University, Manhattan College, New York University and the University of Vermont.

He had a brilliant career as a lawyer before mounting the bench.

In his statement he said he had suffered heavily in the depression—mainly through real estate ventures—"and such debts as I have incurred have been chiefly due to my efforts to meet the situation thus brought about."

serves following the Administration's action in opening the credit flood-gates.

Although supported by John K. McKee, a board member, and John S. Sinclair, president of the Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank, he was voted down in an effort to have the committee authorize a $200,000,000 reduction in the amount of Government securities held by Reserve banks.

The board said that, owing to the absence of any "immediate prospect of an excessive expansion of bank credit," there was no reason to "change the present policy of monetary ease adopted for the purpose of facilitating recovery."

In pointing to the long-term inflationary danger, it sought rather to emphasize the prevailing diffusion of authority over banking and monetary problems among banking agencies and to direct the attention of Congress toward the question of reorganizing these agencies.

The powers of the Treasury to influence excess reserves, the board said, "outweigh those possessed by the Reserve System." The Treasury, in fact, the report explained, could more than double the prevailing volume of excess reserves by using for spending purposes the $2,000,000,000 of gold locked up in the stabilization fund, issuing certificates against its holdings of free silver bullion and reducing its large drawing accounts with the Reserve Banks.

The board's ability to absorb excess reserves, the report said, is limited to its power to increase reserve requirements by $800,000,000 and to sell Government securities from the $2,560,000,000 portfolio held by the reserve banks.

Reviewing the various powers reposed in the different banking agencies, the board said:

"The conflicts of authority in bank supervision cause much confusion and delay and not infrequently prevent prompt action in cases where quick decision is necessary to prevent losses to the public and to remedy critical situations."

Federal laws which "discriminate" against Federal Reserve member banks, and thus discourage membership in the Reserve system, were described.

Despite the working arrangement among banking agencies whereby duplication is avoided in examinations and required reports, the board said, "difficulties arise from the overlapping of responsibility."

The new uniform examination rules adopted by the banking agencies last summer, it was pointed out, are subject to varying interpretation "because the agencies have different responsibilities, and, therefore, different approaches to the problem."

Whether there should be a tie-up between credit control and bank examination policy was one of the questions presented for consideration.

How to Choose Exactly the Right Size Rug

by "Mary Annette" Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

You wouldn't think of having the wrong size curtains at your window any more than you'd wear the wrong size shoes. And size is just as important when choosing your rug. No matter how exquisite the furnishings, a room loses its balance and symmetry unless the rug actually fits it. This is plainly proven by the sketch shown here. Be sure when buying your rug, to allow a floor margin from six to twelve inches all around, and you'll find it will give balance, harmony and symmetry to your room.

AFL Says CIO Seeks to Seize Democrat Rule

Green Charges Purpose To Control Next Year's Party Convention

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 30.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor opened its winter meeting here today by taking two more punches at John L. Lewis, one in the direction of his congress for industrial organizations, the other at labor's Nonpartisan League, of which he is chairman.

As President William Green was telling reporters what the first session had accomplished it was obvious he was in no mood to go seeking at this time the reopening of peace negotiations with the rival C. I. O.

Daniel J. Tobin, head of the 315,000 teamsters affiliated with the federation, who wants the council to make "honorable overtures" to Lewis, attended today's session, but had nothing to say.

Political Charge First

Today's first dig at Lewis accused him of opening a campaign through labor's Non-Partisan League for the purpose of controlling delegates to the Democratic National Convention in 1940. This was based on the league's announcement on December 17 that it would hold a convention this year for the purpose of starting a nationwide campaign to bring about selection of Democratic Convention delegates next year who would work for "nomination of liberal and progressive candidates" for the Presidency and Vice Presidency of the United States.

"That's the same as saying they want to control the Democratic Convention," Green remarked.

"The executive council directed me to call on all affiliated unions of the A. F. L. to refrain from participating in the work of this so-called Non-Partisan League and to repudiate it on the grounds that it is a purely political organization and is organized contrary to the genuinely non-partisan political policies of the A. F. L.

"Its declaration and purpose is to control a political party—the Democratic Party. That is out of accord with our policies."

The federation president confessed the federation also opposed the Non-Partisan League on the grounds that it was merely "an agency of the C. I. O."

World Meeting Here

The council's second jab at the C. I. O. was in Green's announcement that, through his invitation, the executive committee of the general council of the International Federation of Trade Unions will meet in the United States in May, the first time it ever has convened outside Europe.

The C. I. O. at its first convention, held last November at Pittsburgh, decided to explore feasibility of seeking affiliation with the international federation, of which Sir Walter Citrine, head of the British labor movement, is the president. The A. F. L. long has been affiliated with the international.

"The C. I. O. is eager to get in the I. F. T. U." Green remarked, "but it isn't at all likely that any action will be taken on any application they might make."

There are no Americans at present on the seven-man council of the international federation. Its membership includes Leon Jouhaux, French labor leader; Willem Schevenels, of Belgium, and Eddo Fummen, of Holland.

Newly elected officers will be installed Thursday night at 8:30 at the Washington College of Law, with Harold Irving Baynton, retiring chancellor, in the chair.

Island Judge Quits to Be Dean At Howard U.

Hastie, First Colored Man on Federal Bench, To Teach Law Here

Judge William H. Hastie, of the Federal Court in the Virgin Islands, has resigned to become dean of the school of law of Howard University. His resignation has been accepted by President Roosevelt, effective July 1, it was announced yesterday at the White House.

Judge Hastie, the first colored man to serve on the bench in Federal court, was appointed in 1937. At that time he was serving as an Assistant Solicitor of the Department of the Interior and as a part-time instructor at the Howard law school.

At the Interior Department he participated in review of legislation in the form of an organic act for government of the Virgin Islands.

A native of Knoxville, he was brought here in 1912 at the age of 8, graduated from Dunbar High School in 1921, and from Amherst College, with Phi Beta Kappa honors, in 1925. He taught two years at Bordentown, N. J., and entered Harvard Law School, where he was a member of the editorial board of the Harvard Law Review and graduated with honors in 1930.

He taught conflict of laws, and contracts, at the Howard University school of law until 1932, when he returned to Harvard, where he was awarded the degree of doctor of juridical science in 1932.

He was named dean of the law school at the October meeting of the Howard board of trustees. He is a member of the national board of directors of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, and a former administrator and one of the founders of the New Negro Alliance.

$111,000 Symphony Drive to Be Held From Feb. 12 to 22

A drive to raise $111,000 for the National Symphony Orchestra will be held from February 12 to 22, Thomas F. Morgan, jr., campaign chairman, announced yesterday. A committee of 500 will contact about 10,000 persons for contributors.

The amount to be sought represents actual running costs of the orchestra for the 1939-40 season.

"The orchestra, under the great leadership of Hans Kindler, has won the respect and admiration of musicians throughout the country," Morgan said. "Its performances have placed it among the top ranking orchestras in the country and have won for it a large and devoted following in Washington and elsewhere."

Plans to Improve Airport System Wait on Survey

Definite recommendations for improving the airport system of the country will be withheld from Congress until a survey of existing terminals can be completed, it was learned yesterday.

The mass of material gathered is so "enormous" that a digest for submission to Congress tomorrow, the day named in the Civil Aeronautics act, has been found impossible.

While policies to be urged have yet to be formulated, it is expected that development of a system of small airports, around the larger metropolitan centers, will be mentioned favorably.

strengthen its Army and Navy, since it gives them a feeling of greater security.

The foundation has been laid for a Pan-American "Catholic front" to protect democracy in this hemisphere.

Mecca for Refugees

South America provides a field for all the refugees in the world. However, the countries which can accept them want certain useful types of immigrants. Brazil, for example, needs doctors and other professional types, whereas Venezuela wants agricultural workers.

The leaders in South America, for the most part, think the United States would have made a great mistake had it taken sides in the Spanish civil war. As they see it, this country now is in a position to assist in the reorganization of a democratic new Spain.

Leaving here, a few days after Christmas, Bishop Ryan and Dr. Sheehy flew to Miami. There they boarded a Pan-American Airways plane and started on a journey that took them to Venezuela, Trinidad, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Peru and Ecuador, with brief stops in Colombia and Panama

A "Spiritual Ambassador"

"My function on the trip," Dr. Sheehy said, "was merely to serve as a companion and aide to Bishop Ryan, whose intimate knowledge of international affairs qualified him to serve in a role which one cardinal described as 'spiritual ambassador' to Latin America.

"Bishop Ryan withstood the rigors of the journey admirably, but he will rest a few weeks in Florida before returning to Omaha. We spent 13 days of the month in the air—an adventure which shakes one up a bit.

"I think Bishop Ryan did a great deal to clear up some of the misunderstanding existing between South American countries and the United States, and that the foundation has been laid for a 'Catholic front' to protect democracy in this hemisphere.

S. A. Cardinals Cordial

"The messages from Cardinal Leme, of Brazil, and Cardinal Copello, of Argentina, delivered through Bishop Ryan, in national broadcasts, were highly significant. Both included a personal greeting to the President of the United States."

(Cardinal Leme said: "We all condemn racial and religious persecution under any of its forms. Peace and liberty are the greatest aspirations of the peoples of this hemisphere.")

(Cardinal Copello said: "The people of Argentina are deeply interested in your welfare, as we know you are interested in our well-being. With good-will and friendship between us we can do much to bring to a distracted world the saving blessings of the peace of Christ.")

Hull Very Popular

"Everywhere we went," continued Dr. Sheehy, "we heard the highest praise for Secretary Hull. One Papal Nuncio described Hull's speech at the Lima Conference as 'the most significant message of our times.' However, I think that Gov. Alfred Landon nearly stole the show at Lima. His simple, unassuming, and friendly manner won all the delegates to him, and his vehement support of our good-neighbor policy did more than any of us in the United States realize to stabilize our progress in Latin-American relations."

Bishop Ryan and Dr. Sheehy first stopped at Venezuela, where they were received by President Lopez Contares, Foreign Minister Gil-Borges and the Papal Nuncio. Later Gil-Borges gave a public reception in Bishop Ryan's honor.

Dr. Sheehy said that President Contares' opening remark when he met them was:

"Gentlemen, I believe in democracy. The principles of our government are the same as yours, although it may take us longer to work out our problems."

He said that the Venezuelan leader recognized the presence of Nazi and Communist agitators in his country, but did not fear their influence.

Disturbed About West Indies

Reaching Port of Spain, where they spent a night, Bishop Ryan and Dr. Sheehy received a call from Archbishop Ryan, Coadjutor Archbishop of the West Indies, who gave them information concerning Nazi and communistic activities that was "rather disconcerting."

Dr. Sheehy warmly praised the Pan American Airways for its "wonderfully efficient service, which is doing so much to shatten geographical distance between the Americas."

"The three-day trip down the east coast of Brazil," he said, "gave us an opportunity to appraise the resources of that country, which is larger than the United States. If Brazil's resources were fully developed, it could provide for all the people of this hemisphere.

"Dr. Aranha, Brazil's chancellor, who soon will come to the United States, is a truly great statesman and he deserves a great deal of credit for his work behind the scenes at the Lima Conference. It was gratifying to have him express, when I interviewed him over the radio, the sentiments of the people of his country about President Roosevelt.

Brazil President "Dynamic"

"And, incidentally, we shall hear even more in the future than we have in the past about that dynamic little president of Brazil, Mr. Vargas. Bishop Ryan said of him, 'He knows how to keep quiet in seven languages; but when he speaks, the people of Brazil listen.'"

Dr. Sheehy said that, in his opinion, Argentina had not received wholly fair treatment from the American press.

"Bishop Ryan had a long conference with Minister Cantillo and Cardinal Copelló. I think we are partly responsible in the United States for some minor affronts given unintentionally to the people of Argentina."

Lauds Ambassador Armour

Apropos Chile, Dr. Sheehy said that he and Bishop Ryan had found conflicting opinions in regard to its political destiny. He continued:

"President Aguirre Cerda, elected on a Popular Front platform, must co-ordinate certain forces which have never worked together before in order to insure the success of his government. I believe that the recent earthquake may bring these forces into closer co-operation and that the new president will attempt to follow a middle-of-the-road program.

"The 'Nacistas' in Chile are not Nazis, but nationalists. There is also a small but vociferous band of Communists. The United States is very fortunate in having Norman Armour as its Ambassador in Chile at the present time. He is one of our ablest diplomats."

U. S. and Papal Envoys Friendly

In South America, Dr. Sheehy observed, there is the closest friendship between the American diplomats and the Papal Nuncios.

"I asked one foreign minister the reason for this alliance, and he said: 'It's very simple. Neither the American nor the Vatican representatives are looking for more territory, and both are honest.'"

In Peru, Bishop Ryan and Dr. Sheehy had an enjoyable sojourn with Ambassador Steinhardt. They also saw Dr. Concha, the minister for foreign affairs.

"He is most friendly to the United States," Dr. Sheehy said, "but he thinks the American press has been very unfair to Peru in recent discussions of the Lima conference. Bishop Ryan had several conferences with the prime minister, Don Ernesto Montagne, a charming leader who is second only to President Benavides in Peruvian affairs."

Interested in C. U. Jubilee

Bishop Ryan and Dr. Sheehy were greatly fatigued as they left Peru, so they curtailed their program for their visit to Ecuador. Nevertheless, in their brief visit there, they conferred with the minister of foreign affairs, the archbishop and both lay and ecclesiastical Catholic leaders.

"Every country we visited," Dr. Sheehy said, "was interested in the proposed plans for the golden jubilee celebration of the Catholic University this fall, and all will be officially represented. Bishop Ryan thinks there should be a Pan-American Catholic conference every two years. Possibly the first may be arranged in 1939."

Dr. Sheehy said that the Spanish civil war was a matter on which South American countries felt most strongly.

"On one thing," he said, "I wish to go on record most emphatically. If the United States wishes to keep the good will of Latin-American countries, it must adhere to its policy of strict neutrality in the Spanish war. The countries we visited are from 75 to 90 per cent Catholics and the Catholics of Latin America feel as do the Catholics of the United States in regard to the outrages perpetrated on Catholic priests 2 religious and institutions by the loyalists in the beginning of the war.

Desire Peace in Spain

"South America is much closer to Spain, culturally and spiritually than is the United States. The Catholics we met were neither Nazi nor Fascist. They feel as do the Catholics of the United States in regard to the barbarities heaped upon the Jewish people in Germany.

"What do they want in Spain? They want peace in Spain, a peace in which neither communistic nor Nazi forces will prevail, and the two men who can most effectively bring about that peace are Pope Pius XI and President Roosevelt.

"Everyone knows that neither is seeking any advantage in Spain and that when the peace conference is held—for the Spanish war is practically concluded—they offer the chief hope for protecting Spain from foreign isms.

To Broadcast Thursday

"I suspect that the South American leaders we consulted would subscribe to the words of Mark Sullivan in The Washington Post last week. Mr. Sullivan stated: 'What we need to remember is that Nazi-fascism and communism are both repugnant to our American democracy, to our tradition of individual liberty and democratic representative government.'"

Dr. Sheehy, who made six broadcasts from South America, will be interviewed over the Columbia Broadcasting System Thursday night at 10:45 o'clock.

Hitler Warns U. S. on Trade With Latins

Hitler

times he believed in a "long peace."

Of German friendship with Italy he said:

"Let no one in the world make an, mistake as to the resolve which National Socialist Germany has made as far as this friend (Italy) is concerned.

Pledges Aid to Italy

"We can only serve the cause of peace if it is quite clearly understood that a war of rival ideologies, waged against the Italy of today, will, once it is launched, and regardless of its motives, call Germany to the side of her friend . . .

"National Socialist Germany and Fascist Italy are strong enough to secure their peace against everybody, or determinedly to end a conflict recklessly entered into by irresponsible forces."

He said Germany needed colonies because of economic reasons, and added that her prewar colonial empire was "stolen from us" against "solemn assurances of President Wilson which were the basis of our laying down arms."

From the viewpoint of common sense, he said, "the same reasons that once could be advanced for the robbery of the colonies now speak for their return."

Hitler challenged the rgiht of the United States to "mobilize" South America against the Fascist nations.

"The question, for instance, as to whether Germany maintains economic relations and does business with the countries of South and Central America concerns nobody but them and ourselves.

"Germany, at any rate, is a great and sovereign country and is not subject to the supervision of American politicians."

He said he believed the "campaign of defamation" which hampers German-American relations "does not reflect the will of millions of American citizens" and added:

"Germany wishes to live in peace and on friendly terms with all countries, including America.

"Germany refrains from any intervention in American affairs and likewise decisively repudiates any American intervention in German affairs."

He linked Secretary Ickes with three Britons, Alfred Duff Cooper, former first lord of the admiralty, Former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Winston Churchill, "Tory rebel," as disturbers of friendly relations.

"Now, when we defend ourselves against such apostles of war as Duff Cooper, Mr. Eden, Mr. Churchill or Mr. Ickes, this is represented as interference with the sacred rights of the democracies," he asserted.

"I need hardly assure you that as long as the German Reich is a sovereign state the leadership will not let an English or American politician forbid its answering such attacks.

Hitler's address was filled with anti-Semitism. He denied the existence of religious persecution in Germany and threatened a radio war with "certain countries," obviously Britain and France, unless they stopped broadcasting to Germany.

He pictured the "salvation of Europe" from Bolshevism as having started with Premier Mussolini at one end and added: "National Socialism continued this work of salvation" at the other end.

Sees Jews' Destruction

"If it should become possible once more to push the peoples into a world war, the result would not be the Bolshevization of the earth but destruction of the Jewish race in Europe," he said.

Admitting Germany had gone through a difficult economic situation, he declared, "we shall win this battle completely, they, we have won it."

In his warning against interference in German affairs Hitler declared that in establishing the right of self-determination in Austria and Czecho-Slovakia Germany had "only defended herself" against interfering third parties.

"I need not assure you that in the future also we shall tolerate no attempts at interference in matters concerning us alone with the purpose of preventing natural and sensible solutions."

Germany, he said, must export to buy foodstuffs and "if foreign statesmen threaten with I don't know what economic counter measure, I can only say that in such a case a trade war of despair would begin which would be an easy one for us.

High Pitch Missing

"Easier than for the saturated other nations because the motive for our economic battle would be a very simple one, namely: The German people either live—meaning export—or die.

"As for its leaders, I can only state that they are ready for everything."

Time and again an open hand went to Hitler's heart to express his feelings when he spoke of the German nation. Often he drove home his points by swinging wide his arms or by pointing with an index finger. The high pitch he sometimes reaches in public speeches was missing.

In the red-draped Kroll Opera House as Hitler spoke were Konrad Henlein, Sudeten German leader, and Arthur Seysz-Inquart, the Austrian Nazi who summoned the German ary to "rescue" that country last March.

Behind him was a tremendous insignia of the Reich—a gilded eagle.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering was re-elected president of the Reichstag by standing vote.

The Reichstag also extended until May 10, 1943, the act of March 24, 1933, which gave Hitler full authority to rule by decree without parliamentary action.

Text of Hitler's Reichstag Address Pledging War Aid to Italy

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan 30.—Following is the official translation of a partial text of Chancellor Hitler's address to the Reichstag tonight:

The rescue of Europe began at one end of the continent with Mussolini and fascism. National socialism continued this rescue in another part of Europe, and at the present moment we are witnessing in still a third country the same drama of a brave triumph over the Jewish international attempt to destroy European civilization.

I will now in a few sentences give you the facts of the historical events of the memorable year, 1938. Among the 14 points which President Wilson promised Germany in the name of all the allies as the basis on which a new world people was to be established when Germany laid down her arms was the fundamental principle of the self-determination of peoples.

Fulfills "Sacred Wish"

I myself, as a son of the Ostmark (Austria), was filled with a sacred wish to solve this problem, and thus lead my homeland back to the Reich. In January, 1938, I finally resolved that in course of that year, in one way or another, I would fight for and win the right of self-determination for 6,500,000 Germans in Austria.

. . . If certain newspapers and politicians in the rest of the world now allege that Germany thus threatened other nations (by military preparations in the Czecho-Slovak crisis) by military blackmail, it can only be as a result of crude distortion of the facts.

And I need not assure you gentlemen that in the future as well we shall not tolerate the western states attempting to interfere in certain matters which concern nobody but ourselves in order to hinder natural and reasonable solutions by their intervention

Thanks Chamberlain

We were all happy, therefore, when, thanks to the initiative of our good friend, Benito Mussolini, and thanks also to the highly appreciated readiness of Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier, it became possible to find the elements on an agreement which not only allowed of the peaceful settlement of a matter which admitted no further delay, but could moreover be looked upon as an example of the possibility of a general and sensible treatment and settlement of certain vital problems. . . .

Stupendous Tasks Ahead

Gentlemen, we are faced with further enormous and stupendous tasks. A new history of the leadership of our nation must be constructed. Its composition is dependent on the race.

In the German state of today, the people's state, there are no social prejudices. And consequently there is no special social code of morals. This state recognizes only the laws of life and the necessities at which man has arrived through reason and insight. National Socialism recognizes these laws of necessity and it is one of the concerns of National Socialism to have them respected. . . .

Gentlemen, we live in an age when the air is full of the cries of democratic defenders of morals and world reformers. . . .

Speeches and newspapers in these democracies tell us every day about the difficulties with which we Germans are faced. . . .

In all these laments and prophecies there is only one sincere strain: And that is the single honest democratic wish, that the German people and, particularly the National Socialist Germany of today, should finally perish.

Reich Overcrowded

The fact is this: In Germany there are 135 people to the square kilometer living entirely without their former reserve; for 15 years a prey to all the rest of the world, burdened with tremendous debts, without colonies, the German people are nevertheless fed and clothed, and, moreover, there are no unemployed among them.

The question is this: Which of the so-called great democracies is capable of performing the same feat? If we chose particular methods, the reason was simply that we were forced into particular circumstances. And in fact our position was so difficult that there can be no possible comparison with the position of the other great states.

There are countries in the world where, instead of 135 people to the square kilometer as there are in Germany, there are only between 5 and 11; where vast stretches of fertile land lie fallow, where all imaginable minerals are available; there are countries which have all this and the natural wealth of coal, iron and ore and yet are not even capable of solving their own social problems, of doing away with unemployment or overcoming their other difficulties.

And now the representatives of these states swear by the wonderful qualities of their democracy. They are quite at liberty to do so as far as they are concerned. But as long as we still had an offshoot of this democracy in Germany we had 7,000,000 unemployed, trade and industry were faced with absolute ruin in town and country, and society was on the point of revolution.

At the most, it is a matter of indifference to us whether National Socialism—which is our copyright, just as Fascism is the Italian one—is exported or not. We are not in the least interested in this ourselves. We see no advantage in making shipments of National Socialism as an idea, nor do we feel that we have any occasion to make war on other people because they are democrats.

Aggression Repudiated

The assertion that National Socialism in Germany will soon attack North or South America, Australia, China or even the Netherlands, because of different systems of government are in control of these places, is on the same plane as the statement that we intend to follow it up with an immediate occupation of the full moon. Our state and our people exist under very difficult economic conditions. . . .

Reich's Colonies "Stolen"

The theft of the German colonies was morally an injustice. Economically it was utter insanity! The political motives advanced were so mean that one is tempted merely to call them silly. In 1918 after the end of the war the victorious powers really would have had the authority to bring about a reasonable settlement of international problems. . .

As far as Germany is concerned the situation is very simple. The Reich has 80,000,000 inhabitants; that means over 15 persons to the square kilometer. The great German colonial possessions which the Reich once acquired peacefully by treaties and by paying for them have been stolen—contrary indeed to the solemn assurance given by President Wilson, which was the basic condition on which Germany laid down her arms.

Objection Is "Ridiculous"

The objection that these colonial possessions are of no importance in any case should only lead to their being returned to us with an easy mind. But the objection that this is not possible because Germany would not know what to do with them since she did not do anything with them before is ridiculous.

Germany, which was late in acquiring her colonial possessions, was able to develop them in a relatively short time, and before the war was not faced by the same acute needs as today. This objection is consequently just as foolish as if anybody were to question a nation's capacity to build a railway because it had no railway a hundred years ago.

Further objection that her colonial possessions cannot be returned to her because Germany would thus acquire a strategic position is a monstrous attempt to deny general rights to a nation and a people a priori . . .

Germany does not require her colonial possessions at all in order to set up armies there—she has a sufficiently large German population for this purpose at home—but to relieve her economic difficulties. But even if this be not believed, it is wholly immaterial and in no way affects our rights . . .

The fact remains that a nation of 80,000,000 will not be willing permanently to be assessed differently from other nations . . .

Only Question of Power

At bottom it is only a question of power, in which common-sense and justice receive no consideration. From the common standpoint, the very reason which could once be advanced against taking Germany's colonies from her can be used today for their return.

In certain democracies it is apparently one of the special prerogatives of political-democratic life to cultivate an artificial hatred of the so-called totalitarian states. A flood of reports, partly misrepresentations of the fact, partly pure inventions, are let loose, the aim being to stir up public opinion against nations which have done nothing to harm the other nations, and have no desire to harm them, and which indeed have been for years the victims of harsh injustice.

Decries "Agitators"

When we defend ourselves against such agitators as Mr. Lloyd George, Duff Cooper, Mr. Eden or Mr. Ickes and the rest, our action is denounced as encroachment on the sacred rights of the democracies. According to the way these agitators see things, they are entitled to attack other nations and their governments but no one is entitled to defend themselves against such attacks.

I need hardly assure you that as long as the German Reich continues to be a sovereign state, no English or American politician will be able to forbid our government to reply to such attacks. And the arms that we are forging are our guarantee for all time to come that we shall remain a sovereign state—in our arms and our choice of friends.

Actually the assertion that Germany is planning an attack on America could be disposed of with a mere laugh. One would prefer to pass over in silence that incessant agitation of certain British warmongers, but we must not forget this:

First, owing to the political structure of these democratic states it is possible that a few months later these warmongers might themselves be in the government.

Will Answer Attacks

Second, we therefore owe it to the security of the Reich to bring home to the German people in good time the truth about these men. The German nation has no feeling of hatred toward England, America or France; all it wants is peace and quiet. But these other nations are continually being stirred up to hatred of Germany and the German people by Jewish and non-Jewish agitators.

I therefore consider it necessary that from now on our propaganda ministry and our press should always make a point of answering these attacks and above all bring them to the notice of the German people. . . .

It is my conviction that these people are mistaken in their calculations, for when once National Socialist propaganda is devoted to the answering of attacks, we shall succeed just as we succeeded inside Germany herself in overcoming through the convicting power of our propaganda the Jewish world enemy. . .

Never, * * * have German soldiers fought on American soil unless it was in the cause of American independence and freedom but American soldiers were brought to Europe to help strangle a great nation which was striving for its freedom.

Germany did not attack America, but America attacked Germany and, as a committee of investigation of the American Senate concluded, from purely capitalistic motives, without any other cause. * * *

We are resolved to prevent the settlement in our country of a strange people (Jews) which was capable of snatching for itself all the leading positions in the land, and to oust it. * * *

If the rest of the world cries out with a hypocritical mien against this barbaric expulsion from Germany of such an irreplaceable and culturally eminently valuable element we can only be astonished at this reaction.

Sees End of Jewry

For how thankful they must be that we are releasing apostles of culture, and placing them at the disposal of the rest of the world . . .

I think the sooner this problem is solved the better, for Europe can not settle down until the Jewish question is cleared up . . .

Today I will once more be a prophet: If the international Jewish financiers in and outside Europe should succeed in plunging the nations once more into a World War, then the result will not be the Bolshevization of the earth, and thus the victory of Jewry, but the annihilation of the Jewish race in Europe!

Let no one in the world make any mistake as to the resolve which national socialist Germany has made as far as this friend (Italy) is concerned. It can only serve the cause of peace if it is quite clearly understood that a war of rival ideologies waged against the Italy of today will, once it is launched and regardless of its motives, call Germany to the side of her friend.

As regards national socialist Germany she is well aware of the fate that awaits her if ever an international power, whatever its motive, should succeed in overcoming Fascist Italy.

National socialist Germany and Fascist Italy are strong enough to safeguard peace against everyone, and to end resolutely and successfully any conflict which irresponsible elements lightly start * * *

Thus our relationship with Japan is determined by the recognition of the need to stem, as we are determined to do, the tide of the threatened bolshevization of the world gone blind with all the resolution at our command . .

The Japanese nation which in the last two years has set us so many examples of glorious heroism, is undoubtedly fighting in the service of civilization at the other side of the world. .

Germany has no territorial demands against England and France apart from that for the return of our colonies.

Our relations with the United States are suffering from a campaign of deflation carried on to serve obvious political and financial interests, which under the pretense that Germany threatens American independence and freedom, is endeavoring to mobilize the hatred of an entire continent against the European states which are nationally governed.

We all believe, however, that this does not reflect the will of the millions of American citizens who, despite all that is said to the contrary by a gigantic Jewish capitalistic propaganda through the press, the radio and the films cannot fail to realize that there is not one word of truth in all these assertions.

Germany refrains from any intervention in American affairs and likewise decisively repudiates any American intervention in German affairs.

The question for instance as to whether Germany maintains economic relations and does business with the countries of South and Central America, concerns nobody but them and ourselves.

Germany at any rate is a great and sovereign country and is not subject to the supervision of American politicians. Quite apart from that, however, I feel that all states today have so many domestic problems to solve that it would be a piece of good fortune for the nations if responsible statesmen were to confine their attentions to their own problems.

Mexican Evangelist to Speak Here

Ex-Soldier of Carranza To Address Mission Conference Feb. 7-8

Prof. Gonzalo Baez Camargo, at 16 an officer in Carranza's revolutionary army in Mexico, today an outstanding Christian missionary of Latin America, will address the Post-Madras city-wide foreign missionary conference at the First Baptist Church on February 7 and 8.

CAMARGO

Graduate of the Union Theological Seminary of Mexico City, he held pastorates in and near Puebla from 1921 until 1925, when he was named president of the National Evangelical Convention of Mexico.

Has Visited Europe

Other honors conferred upon him include the presidency of the Hispanic American Evangelical Congress in Havana in 1929; the executive secretaryship of the National Council of Evangelical Churches of Mexico and the general secretaryship for religious education in Mexico. He still holds the latter two positions, as well as membership in the Central Committee on Religious Education in Latin America.

In 1930 he served as delegate to the International Missionary Conference in Germany and was a delegate to the World Sunday School Conventions in Rio de Janeiro in 1932 and in Oslo, Norway, in 1936. In June, 1938, he was guest speaker at the International Council of Religious Education in Columbus, Ohio.

Dr. Harris in Charge

Also scheduled to address the sessions are Dr. P. C. Hau, of China; Miss Ila Sircar, India; Dr. Leslie B. Moss, secretary of the Foreign Missions Conference, and other missionary officials.

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Foundry Methodist pastor, is chairman of arrangements for the conference, to be held under the auspices of the Washington Federation of Churches and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

Third Five-Year Plan Is Drafted For Soviet Union

Moscow, Jan. 30.—Soviet citizens today were given a chance to look at their own future when Viacheslav M. Molotov, chairman of the Council of People's Commissars (premier), made public proposals for the Soviet Union's third five-year plan, which he will present in March to the Congress of the Communist Party.

The annual increase in production will be whittled from 17 per cent in the second five-year plan to 13 per cent in the new one. This last figure is close to the 12 per cent increase claimed last week for 1938, the five-year plan's first year.

The plan calls for an 88 per cent increase in industrial production between 1937 and 1942. In the latter year the nation will produce 400,000 automobiles, 230,000,000 tons of coal, 27,000,000 tons of steel and 235,000,000 pairs of leather shoes.

inquiry into the technical aspects of military aviation to ascertain what legislation might be needed to safeguard purchases.

The committee will continue the inquiry, he said, but hearings will be secret.

"I wouldn't say," he added, "that we are through with the French deal."

The French negotiations came to light after an experimental bomber, with Paul Chemidlin, French Air Ministry official, aboard, crashed last week in Los Angeles, killing the pilot.

French Border 'Impregnable'

Paris, Jan. 30.—Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, military governor of Metz, said in an address there last night that Germany and Italy would commit suicide if they started an offensive war against France. The fortifications from Switzerland to Belgium are impregnable, he said.

"I say this," he said, "because it is my absolute conviction and because I know the strength of the French army. There is not one chance in a hundred that an enemy can cross France's fortified barriers from Basle to Belgium. I am sure of it."

How To Relieve Misery of Your CHEST COLD

If you are suffering from a miserable chest cold, try this: Massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with warmed cloth.

VapoRub goes right to work to bring relief—two ways at once. (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Direct to the irritated air-passages with its medicated vapors.

This poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion.

Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over. VICKS VAPORUB world armament race had been discussed with Prime Minister Chamberlain, Baldwin told a Worcester women's national service recruitment meeting:

"It is sad to see Hitler and Mussolini compromising the opportunity of their own class (working class) to improve a low standard of living by keeping them at work making ammunition for a bloody war."

The former prime minister disclosed that he was a co-author of Chamberlain's appeasement policy of personal contacts with the heads of European governments.

Royal Ship Keeps Guns

British concern over European tension was clearly indicated by an admiralty announcement that plans had been changed by which the 32,000-ton battlecruiser Repulse would retain her full armaments during the royal visit to Canada and the United States next May and June.

The original intention had been t oremove the four eight-inch anti-aircraft guns of the Repulse to give King George and Quene Elizabeth greater accommodations.

The Daily Express bannered Hitler's assertion that "I believe it will be peace for a long time," and stated that "plainly it is our duty" to examine the German colonial claim "forthwith."

Comment by other London papers was mild.

French Foreign Minister Bonnet and his aides declared the speech was "much more than we expected." They were represented as particularly pleased that Hitler's colonial claims were not backed by a threat of force.

Duce to Speak Saturday

Italians declared that, with such backing as Hitler offered, they expected Mussolini to reveal his full territorial demands on France at the Fascist Grand Council meeting Saturday.

Poland and the Balkan states were pleased that western, and not eastern Europe, figured highest on the totalitarian program, though Germany's southeastern economic penetration was expected to continue.

In Washington Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, shared the widespread optimism, saying that if Hitler's future actions "are as tolerant as his speech today there will be no fear of any immediate war."

King Sees Conspiracy

However, Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, saw in the address indication that Hitler and Mussolini "have conspired to reorganize the map of Europe."

The German Chancellor's charge that the United States had attacked Germany but Germany had not attacked this country was considered to have been answered by Undersecretary Welles when he rejected the protest presented by Dr. Hans Thomsen on December 22 against a speech by Secretary of the Interior Ickes. Welles at that time declared he had rarely read more unjustifiable criticism than had been directed by the Government-controlled German press against President Roosevelt and members of his Cabinet.

B'nai B'rith Votes $2,500 to Child Refugees

Victims of Chilean Earthquake Are To Get $1,000 Gift

Appropriations of $2,500 for Jewish child refugees from central and eastern Europe settling in this country, and initiation of a drive to popularize the bill of rights among young Jews were voted here yesterday by the executive committee of the B'nai B'rith lodges.

The appropriations will go to Hadassah's Youth Aliyah fund, to supplement a $10,000 gift last May. Further appropriations were of $500 to the intercollegiate committee for student refugees and a $1,000 gift for relief of Chilean earthquake victims were voted.

The "Americanism" program of the lodges calls for greater participation in and observance of patriotic holidays. A series of monographs dealing with vocational work will be published as part of the educational program of the B'nai B'rith vocational service bureau.

The executive committee reported that during 1938 more than $30,000 was distributed for the aid of European refugees to Youth Aliyah, the German-Jewish Children's Aid, the B'naid B'rith-Alfred M. Cohen Colony in Palestine, the B'nai B'rith European Aid Committee and local refugee committees in London, Shanghai, Cracow, Vancouver and Zurich.

More Than A Birthday

President Roosevelt could celebrate his fifty-seventh birthday yesterday in the happy realization that the occasion helped to foster a noble cause which he holds dear.

This year, as in the past, the Birthday Balls and other observances throughout the Nation have proved a great success. As a result, additional funds have been made available to national agencies and local bodies engaged in a great offensive against the scourge of infantile paralysis. Victims of the dread disease can now hopefully anticipate that in increasing numbers they will be spared its terrible ravages and saved from the life of helplessness which doomed so many in the past.

It is no mere coincidence that the national spirit has so markedly revived in the six years since President Roosevelt took office. The responsibilities he has carried have been more than enough to tax the strength and fortitude of the strongest. Yet, himself a victim of infantile paralysis, the President has manifested a remarkable resilience. His character has always risen superior to the strains imposed upon him. His countrymen have profited by the example, even to the ironic extent of stiffening opposition to their leader's leadership.

Mr. Roosevelt's superb physique, his buoyant disposition, his determined refusal to count physical handicaps as such have enabled him to weather smilingly the innumerable storms that have beaten about his head. And, more to the point, his inspiration has animated tens of thousands with at least some reflection of his great courage.

As he has triumphed over difficulties, so in their humbler stations can many others. For that reason, for the sense of confidence and zest which he transmits to others, the birthday of President Roosevelt is becoming not merely a matter for congratulation to a very popular figure. It is, rather, an occasion for national rededication to the battle of high ideals against unfavorable circumstance.

The Manton Case

District Attorney Dewey's charges against Senior Judge Martin T. Manton of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals come as a shock which cannot and should not be minimized. If the circumstantial charges submitted to Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee are fully sustained by evidence, the Manton case will be recorded as one of the worst judicial scandals in our recent history.

According to Mr. Dewey, Judge Manton, or corporations under his control, received in a single case as much as $77,000 from the confidential agent of a litigant before his court. Some of the payments made, Mr. Dewey asserts, could have been obtained by the agent only from the proceeds of checks he had received from the litigant. Payments are reported to have been made both before and after the circuit court reversed a judgment of a lower tribunal, with Judge Manton voting in favor of the winning corporation from which the loan money is alleged to have been drawn.

That one charge is serious enough. But Mr. Dewey's indictment does not stop there. His letter to Chairman Sumners listed five other cases in which Judge Manton is alleged to have received loans from individuals acting in behalf of litigants before the bench over which he presided. The total of money thus received is placed at more than $400,000, only a small part of which, according to Mr. Dewey, has been repaid.

Presumably Judge Manton has forestalled impeachment proceedings by resigning from the bench. This resignation seems unhappily an acknowledgment of the strength of the case against him. There would now be no point in impeachment, since judgment in such cases cannot extend beyond removal of the accused from office or his disqualification to hold any other Federal post.

This does not mean, however, that the investigation should be dropped. On the contrary, the probe should be extended. It is not so much a case of punishing an individual judge who has drawn scandal upon his own head. The important consideration is to safeguard the Federal bench from any suspicion of corruption.

Tampering with the quality of justice is one of the most demoralizing offenses that can be committed in a democracy. A jurist who violates public confidence in his probity is deserving of the sternest punishment that the law prescribes.

TVA'S Legal Victory

The Supreme Court has passed by what was thought to be its second opportunity to rule upon the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act. The first TVA "test case" came to a head three years ago. At that time the court decided only that the Federal Government had a right to build Wilson Dam for national defense purposes and to dispose of surplus power generated there. It specifically reserved judgment as to the constitutionality of the TVA. Yesterday's decision was even more noncommittal on that point.

The court took note of contentions that the TVA represents an unconstitutional attempt to exercise a power not granted to the Federal Government; that its activities will result in Federal regulation of the internal affairs of the States and will deprive the people of their guaranteed liberty to earn a livelihood and to acquire and use property subject only to State regulation. But Justice Roberts shifted attention away from these points by a simple statement in the majority opinion: "We do not consider or decide the issue thus mooted."

Fourteen power companies initiated the suit on the ground that TVA competition will inflict upon them substantial damages. Attorneys for the Government admitted that the companies will sustain damages, but contended that no legal rights will be violated. The majority of the court accepted this view. It found that the power companies do not have monopoly rights in the States. Consequently they have no guarantee against competition.

"Whether competition between utilities shall be prohibited, regulated or forbidden," said the majority, "is a matter of State policy." The court found, however, that the States have in various ways approved the TVA program. Moreover, it concluded that the sale of power from Government dams in competition with private utilities does not constitute a regulation of rates. In short, it found in the suit no grounds on which the companies could properly raise the basic issue of the TVA's constitutionality.

Nor did the dissenting opinion by Justice Butler, with Justice McReynolds concurring, attempt to pass judgment upon that fundamental issue. The minority severely indicted the TVA, but its conclusion was merely that the power companies were entitled to have the court pass upon the constitutional issues they had laid before it.

The outcome throws a still heavier responsibility upon the Administration to straighten out its power policy. Justice Butler's assertion that the TVA "yardstick" rates are "unreasonable and confiscatory" is sustained by many independent investigators. And the subsidization of municipal power plants through the PWA so as to create a market for TVA power is a policy of such gross unfairness to private competitors that no government should await clarification of the law to modify it.

It may now be a number of years before any direct ruling on the constitutionality of the TVA is handed down. Indeed, that issue may never be passed on by the Supreme Court. The effect is to throw greater emphasis upon the TVA inquiry. Unless the Administration acts quickly to correct the abuses revealed by this investigation Congress will doubtless take over that obligation.

William Butler Yeats

To say that William Butler Yeats was one of the greatest poets of his time, is to do the times great honor but the poet himself less than justice. Every genius, to be sure, owes much to his times, as a plant owes much to the soil from which its draws nurture and to the climate in which it thrives. Yet the essential nature of a plant derives from neither soil nor clime, but from the mysterious destiny sealed within the seed.

In the sophistication of its forms the poetry of Yeats is indubitably modern. Its melancholy music reflects our age as much as the solemnities of Milton and Dryden reflect the baroque or as the lyric buoyancy of Shakespeare, even in his most tragic moods, reflects the Elizabethan springtide.

Moreover, in the quality of imagination, in the feeble accentuation of its rhythms, and in the dream textures of much of its imagery, the poetry of Yeats is as moodily Irish as Milton and Shakespeare are robustly English. But in the finest work of Yeats there is an intellectual majesty that lifts it above all accidents of time and place as Milton is lifted above Puritanism or Dante above medievalism.

Almost none will dispute that Yeats was the most richly endowed of all the Irish poets who have worked in the English tongue. His name, more than any other, is associated with the early twentieth century Irish literary renaissance. In his youth, at least, patriotism was his inspiration. But though he helped rescue the special genius of his country from the contempt the exuberances of Lever, Lover and others had brought upon it, he never approached such transports of mystical patriotism as the unhappy, half-mad Mangan,

> . . . In whose veins ran lightning
> No eye beheld.

There was plenty of passion in Yates, but it was a passion neither of the senses nor of the heart but of the mind. Even his mirth was intellectualized and George Moore has spoken of his laughter as "the most melancholy thing in the world." Perhaps Yeats himself has best described his own austere genius as

> That nobleness made simple as a fire
> With beauty like a tightened bow, a kind
> That is not natural in an age like this,
> Being high and solitary and most stern.

Refugees in France

In the course of the past 20 years, France has again and again opened her doors to the unfortunates of other lands. Immediately after the World War there was the flood of White Russians fleeing from the Red Terror. Later came the great influx of anti-Fascist Italians seeking a haven from the tyranny of the Mussolini dictatorship. Still later the tide of refugees sweeping to France came from Nazi Germany. Now tens of thousands of helpless and homeless Spanish fugitives are being admitted.

During all this period France itself has been passing through critical times. Economic and financial difficulties are still grave. The country is in no position quickly to absorb the vast numbers who seek haven within its borders. Nonetheless, France has not thrown overboard the great tradition of hospitality and refuge. The republic provides an example which other democratic nations can ill afford to ignore.

By way of contrast there is the interesting fact that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938, only 30 per cent of the American immigration quota for all countries was filled. Even from Germany and Austria, where the pressure of those seeking refuge abroad has been greatest, those actually admitted during that period amounted only to 70 per cent of the total possible under the quota. And this percentage was the highest in years.

It is unfortunate that our quota arrangements are so inflexible that no provision can be made for emergencies of a harrowing nature. One year the actual influx of refugees may be only the barest trickle. Yet in no year can more be admitted than the 12-month quota permits. In this respect the French policy, of adapting restrictions to urgent human needs, is certainly worthy of our consideration.

Such Sweet Compulsion

For centuries it has been believed that art was influenced by nature. Now we are beginning to discover that it is nature which is influenced by art. And there is not yet any way of telling how many wonderful things may come out of this discovery. Take, for example, music. It has been demonstrated that the milk of cows subjected to constant renditions of the second movement of the Schubert unfinished symphony increases markedly in sugar content, whereas the cream of cows subjected to "Flat-Foot Floogee" curdles the moment it is poured into coffee.

Indeed, the socio-economic applications of this discovery are well-nigh limitless. Alert industrial executives have already perceived new uses for art. In Brooklyn, for instance, a big steamship concern has announced that it will play uplifting music to its stevedores while they wrestle with cargoes. Similarly, in apartment houses there will soon be central broadcasting systems, thus enabling the janitor to turn on the fire music from "Die Walkure" whenever anything happens to the steam heat. In prisons wardens confronted with the problem of a hunger strike or riot will, instead of shouting for the hose, merely order a broadcast of "I Dreamt That I Dwelt in Marble Halls."

What is possible with music should be equally possible with other arts. Only the other day an item cropped up about a hen somewhere in Kentucky that has overheard so much conversation in the barnyard about rural electrification that she has begun to lay eggs in the shape of Mazda bulbs. If this hen were ours, we would be tempted to sit up all night in the chicken house reading aloud the works of Gertrude Stein and Eugene Jolas, just to see what would come of it.

But that, of course, would be research in what is called "pure science." A more practical scientist, interested mainly in enhancing the size and frequency of eggs, would simply read her the 1940 Federal budget.

In a Tearoom

From the New Yorker

A man went into a tearoom in the East Fifties for lunch last Wednesday, figuring that he could at least get scrambled eggs and coffee with no fuss or marshmallow. The eggs were so nice that he decided to take a chance on dessert, too. He found hot mince pie on the menu, so he ordered some.

"Hot mince pie?" said the young lady. "Oh, dear, I must have given you yesterday's menu. Tuesday is hot-mince-pie day. Today is rice-pudding-with-gobs-of-whipped-cream day."

Civil Service Age Limits

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just heard a shocking thing on which I would like comment from your readers, particularly members of Congress. A man from a small Southern town, 41 years of age with 3 children, took a civil service examination limited to persons under 40. He gave his age as 39. His town had no birth registry and he used affidavits from friends to support his statement.

In 1932 this man's business failed. In his three years without work, all his savings vanished. He finally got a small position at one-fourth his earlier income. He gave this up, of course, when, having passed high in the civil service test, he received an appointment. Now, having discovered his "fraud," he has lost the civil service position. A vicious anti-social policy sets the employment age limits at 40; 55, I understand, is the absolute top age for civil service exams, but some of them set 35 and many set 40.

Please, Congressmen, tell me, is it really your policy to forbid middle-aged people from finding employment in the Government service? If so, why are not old-age pension limits lowered to the same ages which you permit to be set as bars to Government employment? It is the responsibility of Congress since a simple law would correct the matter.

If a man is competent enough to pass a merit exam in open competition, what has the fact that he is 36, or 41, or 54, got to do with it? How dare Congress slash relief (to the brisk accompaniment of a promptly declining stock market), set old-age and security aid limits at 65 and then flatly bar governmental employment to needy, competent, middle-aged workers?

Plea For The Aged

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reason given for dismissing 1,100 WPA employes who have reached the age of 65, and mothers of dependent children, is that these unfortunates are eligible for assistance under the social security act. Getting this assistance is quite another matter.

The reason given for the long delay is Government red tape and a lack of case workers. The red tape explanation is correct, but the alibi as to case workers is a thin excuse, because the questions put out for those who apply for this assistance were answered by these people before they were allowed work on the WPA rolls. One of the questions is proof of age, birth certificate, etc. No such proof was demanded when the record of these people which they already have, showed they had reached the age of 65 and they were summarily thrown out of work in the midst of winter.

More case workers would give the politicians who perpetrated the so-called social security act, a chance to appoint more constituents to do the work which has already been paid for by the taxpayers. These politicians have persistently suppressed the general welfare act, which is a practical recovery measure that would honorably retire these indigent elderly people with an adequate annuity. The money thus put into circulation would stimulate business and put younger people to work to supply this purchasing power, thus solving the problem of unemployment.

Woodrow Wilson And Col. House

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When in the days to come Macaulay's New Zealander surveys the ruins of Westminster and tries to make sense out of the records of the Parliament of Man (Paris-Versailles, 1919) what a difficult task awaits him. In the current issue of a popular weekly Mrs. Woodrow Wilson describes the meeting at Brest between the President on his return from his disastrous Februray visit to Washington, his unhappy encounter with the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, and Col. House, who had during his absence represented him at the conference.

When House left, Mrs. Wilson states that the President seemed to have aged ten years and that his jaw was set in the way it had when he was making superhuman efforts to control himself. He smiled bitterly as he said that House had given away everything he had won before he left Paris, that he had compromised on every side and that he, the President, would have to start all over again, and this time it would be harder because House had given the impression that his delegates were not in sympathy with him. But, as he threw back his head, the light of battle was in his eyes and he thanked God that he could still fight.

In the light of this statement it is right and proper to examine the records and ascertain how the President began all over again and who he sent into the battle. A week later when the President was undeniably ill he asked Col. House (the man Mrs. Wilson thinks had betrayed him) to take his place in the Council of Four and he warmly indorsed, as the records show, all that Col. House was able to accomplish there in a difficult situation.

The records also reveal that all through the month of April the President entrusted House with the difficult negotiations with the French and English and in writing he requested House to explain to Clemenceau the American position on the issues in dispute. He asked House to make known his views to Tardieu and he sent to him innumerable and vital papers with such notations as "March 18—Won't you be kind enough to give me your opinion. Affectionately yours, W. W." "March 20—Let me have your comments. Affectionately, W. W." "April 19—I would like a suggestion from you. Affectionately;" or as, on May 13, "What do you suggest."

When the hard battle was over and the treaty was signed the President accepted the review of what had been accomplished, drawn up by Col. House, and authorized its publication in the world press under the signature, Woodrow Wilson. On leaving for America the President chose Col. House to represent him in the discussions that were impending with Lord Robert Cecil and other delegates as to the best way to set up the League of Nations and when this was achieved, and gratefully acknowledged, the President sent House to London to work out the system of colonial mandates.

All these records are available in the Library of Yale University to those who care to examine them. Of course, the charge of "betrayal" has been been made before, but hitherto upon authority so irresponsible that it did not require notice, much less contradiction. However, it did justify me, I think, in speaking to President Charles Seymour, of Yale; to Hunter Miller, of the Department of State, and to Arthur Hugh Frazier, members of the delegation who were closest to Col. House, and I found them in complete agreement that the "betrayal" story was entirely inaccurate. Today, however, it has seemed to me, and to others, that these corrections are due quite as much to the memory of our great war President as to the unsullied fame of his loyal lieutenant, Edward M. House.

Poverty In The South

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On January 19 the Richmond Times Dispatch reprinted an editorial from your paper, dealing with the South as "the No. 1 economic problem" of the Nation. The editorial is a sympathetic one. Please allow me to supplement it by adding a self-evident truth. Social phenomena cannot be unrelated to a biological base.

Poverty is ancient in the South. The inferiority of the South to white portions of the Union may be traced back into prenational days. Even in colonial times, the South's economy was then, as now, an economy based on cheap Negro labor and on white men's labor made cheap through competition with Negro labor.

Elsewhere in the world, where a similar economy prevails, there is a similar poverty. In northern Brazil, and in the Union of South Africa there is a biracial economy like that of the South. In these countries there is found equal, if not greater, poverty.

In the South there are more than 20,000,000 of Anglo-Saxon descent. In South Africa, likewise, the vast majority of the whites trace their ancestry to Great Britain, or to Holland. They are like the white Southerners in descent and are like the white Southerners in the matter of poverty endured by many of their people.

Any analysis of the South's plight which ignores the factor of race, is not a final analysis. Nor does it behoove the white portions of the Union to point a finger of scorn at the South and berate it for its inferiority to the rest of the Nation. Nor should the South be adversely compared to the progressive Anglo-Saxon communities—Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Please allow me to state again that the factor of race cannot be ignored in an analysis of Southern poverty, for it is self-evident that social phenomena cannot be unrelated to a biological base. E. S. C.

Frozen Capital

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Marriner Eccles, in an interesting but not convincing address on Government spending apparently overlooks the fact that billions of dollars are "frozen" in our banks, awaiting the restoration of confidence and administrative assurances that the shackles will be removed from big business.

Armies of investors are standing on the sidelines (as any broker will testify) unwilling to risk money in industrial or stock ventures in view of ever-mounting taxes, which have paralyzed profits, not to mention interference and competition by the Federal Government.

The "log jam" will not be broken on our industrial rivers until some mental dynamite, in the form of startling and unmistakable fact, arouses certain lawmakers from a condition of lethargy and "one-track" mindedness to the realization that we are still drifting around in circles while the tides of debt continue to rise.

A Modern Economist

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I call your attention to a serious error perpetrated by your make-up man in The Post for January 24? The editorial captioned "Another Lame Duck?" includes the following gem concerning former Representative Thomas Amlie, of Wisconsin: "Mr. Amlie, whatever his virtues, is not an economist." It is obvious that this article somehow got moved from its intended place in the "funnies." Your make-up man should be more careful.

Incidentally, why not take a little time off and learn from a real and modern economist, Thomas Amlie?

The Escape

Why, if the soul could fling the dust aside
And naked on the air of heaven ride,
Were't not a shame—were't not a shame
For him in this clay carcass to abide? —Omar.

HE FILLED us with wonder those nights that he sat in the wretched dressing rooms of the rural high schools, putting on his costume. The part he was to play moved so poignantly across his eyes and high, wide forehead that seemed to be strung, in those moments, like some delicate viol. He was so removed from us, so far.

We knew that he transported himself into his role, whatever it was, an hour or so before the curtain went up. Of course, that wasn't the secret of why his show persisted even after the radio came and the rural people got acquainted with what they called the better things. But it did prove his profound yearning for something higher than the success he knew. And since he considered the success so lightly and the roles so deeply he appeared before us as that ultimate thing—the artist—a man to study and perhaps to be, some day.

His name was Harry, and Harry's Stellar Stock Company succeeded from the first night's performance on the rural high school stage. He began with the proposition that 10 per cent of the gross receipts went to the high school; he would give a wholesome show, something the entire family might see. He would stay three nights. He would offer "Hamlet," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "St. Elmo." He prospered.

And the roles played more and more across his face as he went on. We saw it on those evenings in the wretched dressing rooms, where the high school teams kept their gears and bats, the janitors their mops and pails. But he never saw the environment. He would sit before the cracked mirrors, putting on the grease, adjusting a wig. He had crossed the bridge over which the artist passes from reality to unreality.

Not that he found any peace upon the other side. For once there he must struggle toward some profounder unreality still farther ahead.

We would know from his look what role he would play. Perhaps the dark Prince of Denmark was asking himself unanswerable questions. Or it may have been the pains of a father whose trusting daughter had been betrayed. Whatever the emotion, Harry carried it to the mat; and the agonies of the combat, through some ethereal paradox, made his face radiant.

We wondered, and mostly because Harry carried on. He had—to repeat—prospered. He owned a farm in Indiana, and a nice house that overlooked a river. That was his ambition in the days of his medicine show, the enterprise which had preceded the stock company. Now he had the farm and the house and the river view—and his memories, please, of the hard days of the medicine show. Those had been trying times.

It was a business of hitting a new town and renting an empty store. Then you sent the Negro outside to blow long notes on the bugle. The Negro was dressed in a sleek frock coat and a beaver hat. He had charcoal on his face and red on his big lips, making his mouth look like a half-sliced watermelon opening and closing. The crowds came to the bugle, and within other Negroes would sing:

"I had a friend named Campbell,
He used to steal and gamble . . .
They've got him in the jailhouse now."

And one of them suddenly would raise a hand, saying, "Hush, the doctor is coming! He is an Indian Yogi man. He is from the Old Worl'." Then Harry would appear, in a turban with stars and a kimona with moons and stars. He carried jars full of tapeworms and other hideous worms.

"Each and every one of you is invested, inhabited, with such beings as I carry in my hands——" It was a long harangue, but it usually sold many bottles of Bark Wine. But if none were sold, the Negroes would cry: "Let 'em die, Doctor, they won't buy no Bark Wine."

One day he caught one of the Negroes drinking his medicine. The man was already roaring drunk. Harry raged. Had the fellow never heard of honesty? "It is the greatest thing in life," Harry shouted. "I had rather die than be dishonest!"

The world grew less innocent and the medicine shows drifted out on the river of golden freight. Harry's Stellar Stock Company hit the rural roads, the high school stages. He gathered his troupe as he moved along, a saxophone player, a comedian, a tragedienne, a juvenile. He drilled us by night, under the dim lights of the rural inn rooms. He split his money with us. He begged us not to leave him. And the show went on.

One night I caught him alone in the dressing room. He was fingering a squirrel rifle and his eyes were kneeded down to points, like eyes along a gun barrel. His face showed an insupportable hurt. He had moved deeply into the role of a mountain man, out to shoot up a jail where his cousin was unjustly cooped. I looked at him, in the low light. He was deep in the murderous role. The frail body was tense, the sharp chin drawn to a point and the wide forehead was a mountain over two bright, dark coals, the eyes.

I had to ask him then. Reluctantly he put down his rifle.

"I flee," he said, "from this world of third-rate lives. I escape. I hate their pretense and sham. I love honesty, truth—and I find it in my great art. It is this, or I die."

His face was agonized and grandiloquent. But after a moment, he lapsed into the mountaineer.

Tax Vagaries

THE INCOME TAX amendment is short and wide. It just says that Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States and without regard to any census or enumeration.

It says nothing about rates of tax or exemptions, nothing about deductions or expenses incurred in the acquirement of the income, nothing about gross or net or any fine distinction between capital and income or the subtraction from the gross of amounts paid as taxes in other ways. It says nothing about immunity for public employes of the States and their subdivisions or for labor unions or religious or charitable organizations. The amendment left all such matters to the conscience and mood of Congress in the future, and it must be admitted that, in some ways, Congress has done quite the handsome thing up to now. The courts also have done their bit.

A CITY MAN gets an exemption for himself and wife, if any, children, if any, and other dependent relatives, if any, and a farmer may also charge off the cost of supporting his cow, provided she is a professional cow, producing milk, butter and, occasionally, veal, which, being sold, produces income. He may even deduct the cost of a veterinary to attend his cow in her hour, although the cost of medical care for his wife, in hers, is not deductible. If the horse that pulls his plow comes down of a misery he may charge off medical advice and care and liniment, although if he himself comes down of a crick from pushing the plow and needs a doctor and a bottle of No. 97 or No. 38, that expense is not deductible. He may charge off wear and tear on the cow and horse, but not wear and tear on himself.

If a man is a professional ballplayer—a Babe Ruth or a Dizzy Dean, for example—he is entitled to the conventional exemptions and deductions pertaining to his line of work, but is not allowed to charge depreciation of his equipment, plant or whatever you would call his physique. But the corporation which owns him, as property, may list him—or, rather his contract—in the same general category as the farmer's professional or income-producing cow, and show gradual depreciation and schedule as business expense the cost of pulling his teeth or tonsils, feeding him T-bones and hashed brown potatoes and shipping and stabling him on the road.

THE EXCEPTIONS, exemptions and immunities provided by Congress in an effort to be nice, although armed with a devastating authority to tax, are, on the whole, a beautiful exhibition of restraint, adorned by many amusing and cheering oddities.

All that the Constitution says about freedom or religion is this: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." It doesn't say that religious organizations must be immune from the theory behind chain store taxation applying to concerns operating interstate. And the income tax amendment doesn't say that Congress must permit those who contribute to religious organizations to deduct such gifts or any proportion of them from their income. The religious freedom article doesn't even mention the subject of immunity from property taxes for religious organizations, and, of course, labor unions or pools of wealth were unheard of at that time.

However, under the income tax amendment Congress still has the power to lay the tax against religious and labor organizations, and for all that any other constitutional provision says to the contrary Congress may. In fact, in the paragraph of the revenue act providing exemption for religious organizations, Congress bared a fang in 1936 and a phrase was inserted to provide that such organizations could not enjoy the exemption if a "substantial part" of their activities consisted of carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation.

LABOR UNIONS, however, are not placed under any such limitation, and a union under communistic domination may attempt to influence legislation without risk, whereas, nominally, at least, a church invites the wrath of the Internal Revenue for attempting to exert a counter-influence.

There is almost no limit to the tricks that a playful Congress could do with the income tax authority, and if the subjects were really smart they wouldn't say a word for fear of riling the statesmen and reminding them of their strength. Under their power they can just say to hell with cute distinctions and exemptions, and hereafter everybody, including churches, unions and all, must shower down 20 per cent or 50 per cent of all dough or profit acquired in the year, and don't forget what happened to Al Capone.

Rumania Fights Fire With Fire

Bucharest.

HUNDREDS, thousands are signing up in Rumania's new single party—the National Renaissance Front. Each day newspapers print lists of the latest important adherents—ranging through every shade of political opinion. On January 6 the cabinet ministers appeared at the traditional Epiphany ceremony—the throwing of a wooden cross into the River Dambovitza—in the bright blue uniforms of the new party. But, it was remarked, they still hesitated to give the Roman salute with the greeting "Sanătate" (health) which had been decreed just a few days earlier.

A single party, the Roman salute, party uniforms are these indisputable signs of a Fascist state? Try to classify the Rumanian government and you will run up against a mass of contradictions. Can it be called Fascist after its recent drastic liquidation of the Fascist Iron Guard which so roused the German press against Rumania and its King, after the signs of its increased friendliness toward the western democracies, after its modification of the violent anti-Semitism inaugurated by Goga's regime just a year ago?

It is in the nature of an experiment in dictatorship. Rumania has passed through a political revolution without barricades in the past year. It started in January, 1937, with a distortion of democratic government under the extreme rightist poet Goga. A royal dictatorship followed and with it the drafting of a new constitution on corporative lines and a plebiscite. Later came the abolition of all parties, and the year closed with the eradication of the Fascist Iron Guard and the creation of a single national party under the leadership of King Carol.

THE STEPS leading to the formulation of the constitution, the new type of government and the new party partially explain the character of this regime. Democracy never had, or never was given, much of a chance in Rumania. The first essential—a literate electorate—was lacking despite the determined efforts to extend education. After the elections of December, 1937, when Carol's "shadow" liberal government scored a small vote, the King was able to call to power a man who had almost no popular support (having received less than 10% in the elections).

Today many people in Bucharest say his intention was only to use Goga as a temporary tool to teach the country what a mess the extreme rightists, with their violent anti-Semitism, would make of it, to cure them of such inclinations, and perhaps, some say, to clear himself of the charge of being pro-Jewish. At the same time he created the opportunity for insisting on a new constitution and form of government, an aim which had been attributed to him long before.

In a matter of days, the King and his advisers were ready with a new constitution on which he called for a plebiscite. Rumanian peasants and patricians voted under a royal dictatorship—a strange vote, for either you voted "Yes" and showed your faith in the King, or you voted "No"—presumably against the King, which might mean chaos.

Needless to say the constitution triumphed and the King carried the day with a form of personal government — an aim which rumors credited to him 13 years ago at the time of his exile. Under the February constitution the King has the right of absolute veto and the government is responsible to him alone. The Chamber of Deputies is designed on corporative lines to represent three categories: (1) agriculture and unskilled labor; (2) commerce and industry; (3) intellectual occupations. But to date no elections have been held, although it is generally assumed they will take place as soon as the new party is on a strong footing. To this organization has been given a monopoly in the choice of candidates for elections.

INTO THE constitution were drafted veiled measures against the Fascist Iron Guard, which in the past had been so strangely tolerated if not actually encouraged by the government. One forbade anyone without three generations of Rumanian blood from filling a Cabinet post. This put the cap on Codreanu's chances, for his father was a Pole of the name Zelinski and his mother a German. By raising the voting age from 21 to 30 the authorities further tied the hands of the Iron Guard whose numbers depended so largely on young people.

But the King could and did use the government against all political parties—democrats as well as the extreme rightists. He hoped to "depoliticize" the country. Official circles claim that the plebiscite was proof that the country was tired of politics and gave the King its assent to the dissolution of the factions. But in voting "Yes" for the constitution it did not follow one opposed freedom of political expression, although some were undoubtedly weary of the score of parties on Rumania's political battlefield. So soon after the plebiscite the strong democratic element—the National Peasants Party—found itself dissolved by decree in company with all the others.

Aware that the government was contemplating a new political formation—a unique political framework—Juliu Maniu, revered leader of the National Peasants, presented a petition to the King. It demanded a return to representative parliamentary government, abolition of censorship and martial law, and a strong program of national defense. A few hours later, on December 15, he had his answer in the form of a short decree creating the National Renaissance Front and declaring it the only channel for political expression.

"All political activity," it declared, "other than that of the National Renaissance Front will be considered as clandestine." It alone has the right to determine the candidates for parliamentary and administrative elections.

UNLIKE other such movements it has been created from above to fill the gap between the government and the governed. Thousands are hastening to join it, but how much from faith and how much from fear for their positions, however unfounded that fear may be? The new uniforms to be worn by members occupying public functions, and the new salute are greeted with a trace of amusement.

With Iron Guardsmen recanting to apply for membership, with the German minority entering as separate corporations in the Front, with people from the whole range of former partiers hurriedly signing up, what will happen? Will the Front become a state organization to which one belongs automatically like being a citizen of a country; will it then divide in many factions? Of after attracting as many adherents from as wide a range as possible will the government then clamp down, regimenting it on totalitarian lines and perhaps running the risk of being betrayed from within? These are questions asked in Bucharest.

The opposition has little chance of raising its head because of strict censorship and close surveillance. Even in my hotel room I found a sign calling "the attention of guests to the necessity of avoiding political meetings or discussion in the hotel," and threatening "In the event of nonobservance of this rule, we shall be obliged to request the guest or guests in question to give up immediately their accommodations." The Corso Cafe in Bucharest, the former haunt of politicians, is posted with similar warnings. And since what is commonly known as "the execution of Codreanu" the watch is very close for fear of revenge.

American Foreign Policy In The Making; The Critical Choice

IF THE AMERICAN people understood thoroughly how exceptionally fortunate is their position in the world, there could not, I am convinced, be any serious division of opinion among responsible men about the aims of American policy. All the questions which trouble us, whether it be the fortification of Guam, the extent of the commitments we should make in South America, or the refusal to let Japan buy planes and the encouragement to France to buy planes, or the neutrality act, can be made clear only to those who have realized that among the great nations of the earth our position is unique.

Our position is unique because no power is capable of attacking us. It is true that American traders have interests in China that we are unable to defend. It is true that the Philippines are a rather disturbing liability, but otherwise the United States is invulnerable. There is no fleet that can threaten any part of this hemisphere, or any important trade route over which vitally necessary imports, like rubber, for example, are carried to the United States. No American city can be bombed; the planes have not yet been built that can cross either ocean, drop bombs, and return home across the ocean. No nation has an air base within striking distance of our own territory, or even of this hemisphere, and no nation would be free to attack us through the air, even if it wanted to, because in both Asia and Europe all the nations are pinned down by their potential enemies.

This gives us a security which is unique. Where other nations may feel that they could beat off an attack if they were challenged, we are able to feel that we cannot even be challenged.

DOES IT NOT follow that the whole object of American foreign policy must be to preserve this unique security? Is there anyone who will dispute that? Is this not the touchstone by which every question of foreign policy and of armaments must be decided? I feel sure that in the last analysis it is the preservation of this invulnerable security that Americans are primarily interested in, and not in the China trade, not in any quixotic desire to uphold treaties that the Europeans and Asiatics are breaking or abandoning, not in their ideological sympathy, not in cultural or ancestral memories and certainly not in any imperial ambition of their own.

If they could feel that the security we now enjoy will last, there would be no need to do anything further about armaments or to reexamine the lines of our foreign policy. And whatever we do in the matter of armaments and of foreign policy will, I believe, have the support of the whole Nation if it is clearly and unmistakably done to maintain this situation in which no one can attack us, and no one can intimidate us.

WHAT IS THE actual situation which we wish to maintain? We have a Navy, a very good Navy, a Navy quite capable of defending our coasts and our vital maritime highways in the Pacific Ocean. That means not only that the Japanese cannot attack Alaska or Hawaii, or Panama or the Pacific Coast, but that they cannot cut off our absolutely essential imports of rubber from the East Indies. This same Navy could easily defend the Atlantic Coast, the Panama Canal, and South America against any conceivable attack from Europe.

But, and this but is the crux of our whole problem today, the Navy is not capable of defending all these things in both oceans at the same time. If the fleet had to defend our interests in the Atlantic, it would not be able to defend our interests in the Pacific; and vice versa, if it were protecting the Pacific, it could not defend the Atlantic. Therefore, if ever the time came when there was a combination of powers against us in the two oceans, we should be very insecure indeed.

SUCH A COMBINATION does not exist. It is true that Japan, Germany and Italy are allies. But whatever they may think of us, their alliance is directed not against us but against Great Britain and France and China and Russia. As long as that is the case, as long as this alliance has such formidable opposition in Europe and Asia, our ancient security, our invulnerable isolation between the two oceans, remains and we are very safe. The only fundamental difference of opinion that exists among Americans, say between men like Senators Taft and Clark on the one hand, the President and Mr. Hull on the other, is whether we may continue to count upon this situation continuing.

The difference is not a matter of emotion, of being hysterical or not being hysterical. It is a matter of a sober calculation of what is going to happen. If the Japanese not only conquer China but make China a vassel and an ally; if the Germans and Italians should overwhelm the French army and the British navy, is it not evident that our position in the world would be radically altered? For then the Japanese would be free to set out to conquer not only the Philippines but the East Indies, the Germans and Italians would be able to obtain naval and air bases on the Atlantic Ocean, in Spain, in the Portuguese islands, in the Danish islands, in the African colonies. This has not yet happened. The Japanese are still occupied in China; the French army and the British navy are still able to hold Germany in the center of Europe and Italy in the interior of the Mediterranean Sea. As long as this continues, we still have our invulnerable isolation. There is no combination of powers in the two oceans that can threaten us.

WE HAVE TWO choices, and the critical problem of our foreign policy is to decide which is the better choice. The one is to wait and see, and then if the Japanese succeed in Asia and the Germans and Italians overwhelm the British and French in Europe, to take whatever measures we then think necessary to build a Navy which can defend our interests in both oceans at once. This, so far as I understand it, is the policy of a man like Senator Clark.

It is a possible policy. It may be that the dangers which so many fear will not develop, that Hitler will not try to become the master of Europe, that he will not trouble us in this hemisphere, if he does, or that the British and French will be able to hold him safely within bounds. It may be that one ought not to try to look ahead and prepare for possible dangers that may never become actual ones. But granting all that for the sake of the argument, it cannot be denied, I think, that if the worst happened in Europe and in Asia, we should have to build a much greater Navy, that is to say, a two-ocean Navy.

THE OTHER COURSE is to take measures to forestall the development of a situation that would really threaten us. That is why the Navy wants to fortify Guam. It is the cheapest way of enabling the fleet to protect American vital interest in the Pacific without constructing many more warships. That is why the President has helped France to buy airplanes. If France has enough airplanes, the chances of her being destroyed and conquered are very small. This is why he would like to return to the old rules of neutrality: if it were clear now that the British and French could get arms here, the chances of war in Europe would be materially reduced. For Britain and France will not be attacked unless it appears that they are sure to be defeated.

There are risks in this policy. There are the risks of entanglement. There are the risks of reprisal. The question is whether the risks of trying to make war less likely are as grave as would be the consequences of a war in which the British navy and the French army might be defeated, and could no longer keep Germany and Italy out of the Atlantic Ocean.

IN WEIGHING the two policies, let us remember this cardinal consideration. It will be better to adopt either one and follow it out resolutely, than to hesitate and to quarrel among ourselves. If we want to wait and see, refusing all support to the British and French, then, if they fail, we must be prepared to arm ourselves on a standard of naval defense, not in one ocean as now, but in the two oceans simultaneously. If we want to avoid that, and yet to preserve the security we now enjoy, then we should let the British and French obtain arms in this country.

It is a hard choice. But this is a hard time in the affairs of mankind. Either choice is possible. Both involve risks. But not to make the choice clearly and promptly and unanimously is much more dangerous than either policy in itself. For if we do a little of the one and a little of the other, we shall incur all the dangers and get none of the advantages.

WE SHALL BECOME in the midst of one of the great crises of history a divided people incapable of maintaining our vital interests. So I say, let us realize what is the vital interest on which the Nation is at bottom really agreed, let us choose now how we mean to maintain it, and having chosen our line, let us hew to that line resolutely and loyally.

Battle Imminent On Pensions and Social Security

By the Associated Press.

The Roosevelt Administration and the proponents of old-age pensions rapidly are approaching a hand-to-hand struggle in Congress.

The first encounter will be in House Ways and Means Committee hearings, beginning tomorrow. Administration advocates of social security and pension proponents have been promised full opportunity to express their views.

There are an estimated 11,000,000 persons in the United States over 60 years old, and pension advocates say the present social security law is of little or no direct help to them.

About Amlie Appointment

By Mark Sullivan

May Scare Business

IF WE COULD know just what was in President Roosevelt's mind when he appointed Mr. Thomas R. Amlie to the Interstate Commerce Commission, we would know something about Mr. Roosevelt, and about the future of the United States so long as Mr. Roosevelt is President.

There can be no doubt that for some weeks past Mr. Roosevelt has intended an appeasement of business, has wished to bring about business recovery. Person after person in the Administration, some of them close to Mr. Roosevelt, has said so. As it was put by Undersecretary of the Treasury Hanes in the plainest words, "the full energies of the Government will be applied to the invigoration of the processes of recovery."

In the midst of that intention on the President's part, in the very midst of the atmosphere created by that sort of assurance, Mr. Roosevelt takes a step likely to scare business into dismay. He appoints to the Interstate Commerce Commission a man generally regarded as an extreme radical; one whom the Legislature of his State, Wisconsin, by formal action, describes as not believing in the private ownership of business. Whether this charge is accurate is to be tried out before a committee of the Senate.

JUST WHAT preceded this appointment? Just what took place in Mr. Roosevelt's mind? Did he apprehend that the appointment must necessarily alarm business, that it would defeat his purpose of creating business confidence and hope?

It may be he did not. It may be that he made the appointment in the spirit of that trait in him which some of his admirers speak of as "puckishness," but which observers outside the Presidential circle sometimes think of in terms more serious than mere fun-loving impishness.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is made up of 11 members. The law provides that not more than six may belong to one political party. There were already six Democrats; consequently Mr. Roosevelt could not appoint a Democrat. Ordinarily that would mean that he would appoint a Republican—that would be the expectation.

IT MAY BE that Mr. Roosevelt merely took pleasure in going counter to expectation, in creating surprise. Anybody not a Democrat would meet the requirements of the statute, and Mr. Amlie was not a Democrat. At the press conference at which the matter was brought up, Mr. Roosevelt seemed to get fun out of pointing out that Mr. Amlie was a non-Democrat. That word provided him with a smile. It was only after a newspaperman asked why Mr. Amlie was chosen and what were his qualifications, that Mr. Roosevelt showed irritation to a degree he almost never shows in any press conference.

It may be that Mr. Roosevelt, when he selected Mr. Amlie, was intent on his little joke and did not think about Mr. Amlie's views, or about the effect the appointment would have on the spirit of business confidence which he was trying to build up.

THERE HAVE BEEN previous occasions on which Mr. Roosevelt has done similar things. On one such occasion, Mr. Roosevelt's step could hardly have been taken in the spirit of fun.

After Mr. Roosevelt was reelected in November, 1936, there was the same disposition to create business confidence that has arisen recently. It was said there was to be an "era of good feeling." From persons who most authentically reflect the President, word came that his radical advisers were to be let out and conservative ones substituted. Business was to be encouraged. We were to have business recovery.

Just as this spirit was beginning to have effect, Mr. Roosevelt, in January and February, 1937, took three steps. He sent to Congress a message and bill calling for a reorganization of the executive departments in such a way as to give the President greatly increased powers. He also sent to Congress the message and measure providing for the change in the Supreme and other Federal courts. And he adopted, toward the sit-down strikes that had just broken out conspicuously, an attitude which you might call either encouragement, or failure to discourage, depending on how you feel about it.

THESE THREE STEPS chilled the spirit of business confidence and the progress of industry which had got under way. A month after the three steps, in March, 1937, there came to an end the only real movement toward business recovery that has got any forcible momentum since Mr. Roosevelt took office. The effect of that interruption continues to this day.

To overcome these two years of interruption of recovery, to cause recovery to go on again, is apparently a present purpose of Mr. Roosevelt. The Amlie incident may cause Mr. Roosevelt, in order to overcome the effect of it, to increase his efforts to bring about recovery. Or is that the way Mr. Roosevelt would react?

4 Representatives Named to Committees

Speaker Bankhead announced the following appointments yesterday:

Board of visitors to the Naval Academy: Secrest (Democrat), of Ohio; Mass (Republican), of Minnesota, and Allen (Republican), of Illinois.

Colonies Next?

By Barnet Nover

Hitler's Reichstag Speech

IN HIS REICHSTAG speech of February 20, 1938, Adolf Hitler made a pointed reference to the 10,000,000 Germans who, against their will, had been excluded from Germany by the treaty of peace.

The true significance of that reference became very apparent in the course of the next eight months. In less than a month, the 7,000,000 inhabitants of Austria had become subjects of the Hitler dictatorship. Before winter, the Sudetenland and its 3,500,000 German-speaking inhabitants, not to mention several hundred thousand Czechs, had been added to the Third Reich.

On Monday the German Reichstag met again. For weeks there had been feverish speculation as to what the Fuehrer would say, and no little alarm. On the whole, however, the speech was an unin-flammatory one. It was keyed several octaves lower than almost any of Hitler's major utterances of the last 12 months. He denied Germany has any aggressive intent. He did not, as was feared he would, offer Germany's sword to Mussolini to bring about the accomplishment of Fascist Italy's imperial ambitions. Much of the speech was, in fact, couched in defensive through flamboyant terms.

BUT HITLER, in this speech, raised anew the colonial question. And it is possible that so far as German policy is concerned, this issue may play, in 1939, the same role that the demand for the inclusion of the Austrian and Sudetan German population did in 1938.

Coming at this time, the introduction of the colonial theme is particularly important. For it foreshadows the continued co-operation of Germany and Italy against Great Britain and France.

To be sure, Hitler made no mention of Mussolini's demands on France. But if the Third Reich now proceeds on an active campaign to regain her prewar colonies, that campaign can more successfully be pursued in co-operation with Italy than without the aid of that country.

And Italy, in turn, needs the support of the Third Reich if she is to get anywhere in her efforts to acquire some choice morsels of French colonial territory.

FOR EITHER Germany or Italy to achieve its colonial ambitions it is necessary for the totalitarian powers either to persuade Great Britain and France to cede colonies peacefully or through the threat of force.

French statesmen have made it clear that France will not cede an inch of her territory to Italy. They have not been anywhere nearly as explicit in opposing any cession of colonial areas to Germany. But even if they were willing to cede them for the sake of appeasing the Third Reich, they might hesitate to do so because it might give Italy a talking point.

On the other hand, the sentiment in Great Britain in favor of the restoration to Germany of the prewar German colonies, now in Britain's keeping, has very decidedly diminished during recent months. The feeling has grown that a regime which treats its minorities as Germany has done is hardly a fit nation to whom to entrust African natives. But this feeling only fortifies strong unwillingness to cede any extra-European territory to the Third Reich. Some years ago a Conservative Party meeting, suspecting that Stanley Baldwin, then premier, was flirting with the idea of handing over some colonies to Germany, wired him: "What we have we hold." That feeling is stronger now than ever.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN may have a different feeling about it and the fact that in his Reichstag speech, Hitler was much less bellicose than many feared he would be may persuade him that it is the counsel of wisdom to consider the possibility of a colonial reshuffle at this time. But even if the British premier entertains such a view he would be certain to run up against very considerable opposition within and without his party if he tried to carry it into force.

But if Germany and Italy cannot secure colonies through the exercise of moral suasion, how can they get them? The answer, of course, is by force. This does not mean that either Germany or Italy is prepared to go to war to wrest colonies from France and Great Britain. In a world where everything is possible that too, is, of course, possible. But it is hardly probable. What is more likely, however, is that if suasion fails the threat of force will be applied. And in this particular Germany and Italy acting together can exert a very considerable pressure on the democratic powers.

Col. Godfrey Heads Military Engineers' Post

Col. Stuart C. Godfrey, executive officer, military division, Office of the Chief of Engineers, U. S. Army, was elected president of the Washington post, Society of American Military Engineers, at its annual meeting yesterday.

Col. Godfrey

Col. Godfrey, an honor graduate of the United States Military Academy, class of 1909, has had charge of numerous river and harbor and flood control projects, as well as many important military commands.

A. F. E. Horn, manager of the Washington office of the General Electric Co. and president of the local branch of the Rotary Club, was elected vice president; Maj. Victor Martin, associate editor of The Military Engineer, secretary-treasurer, and Lieut. Col. Lester G. Wilson, director.

Veterans' Group Asks U. S. Aid for Md. Hospital

By the Associated Press.

Representatives of various service organizations met with Maryland members of Congress yesterday to review developments in the State's efforts to get an appropriation for a medical and surgical hospital in the Baltimore area.

Senator Tydings presided at the meeting, attended by Senator Radcliffe and Representatives Goldsborough, Cole and Kennedy. Representative D'Alesandro was unable to attend because of illness and Representative Byron was detained by other business but sent word he would support the move to get an appropriation.

Tydings said the group reached no conclusions.

The Federal Board of Hospitalization has approved the hospital but no appropriation has been made for it.

Cameras Play Tricks On Stars of Screen

Visiting Notables Substantiate Old Views; White House Offers Celebrities Thrills; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IN THE world of amusement, the cinema, of course, stands as one of the pre-eminent symbols of illusion, make-believe and the power to "lift the patron out of himself," in a manner of speaking. It also can be an equally potent factor in the creation of disillusionment.

BELL

What I mean to say is that many of the stars who appear on the screen are more or less misrepresented by the cameras. The microphones are a little more fallible. The voices of these gifted players, now that the recording gadgets have been improved to their present state of perfection, come through about as they actually are. But the lenses still play unique tricks. They have a way of magnifying some who appear before them and diminishing others—only in the matter of physical proportions, you understand.

This is a peculiarity of the films that was impressed upon this column many years ago when he was startled more than once to discover the discrepancies between the screen images of some of his favorites and their actual appearance in persona propria. There was the case of Clara Kimball Young, for example, who always seemed to me an imposing and Junoesque figure on the screen, but actually, "in the flesh," as Maurice Chevalier would say, was a tiny person. Then there was the young woman who appeared in a group of serials who looked like Mary Pickford on the screen, but, off, was an expansive and muscular performer whom the cameras shrank to about half of her proper self. And that is the way it used to go—and still does.

I am prompted to these remarks by the presence in Washington of a large number of Hollywood luminaries for the President's Birthday Celebrations. Some of them look precisely as one might have expected them to. Others do not. Take the male stars, for instance. Errol Flynn, George Brent, Ralph Bellamy, Bruce Cabot and some of the others are towering young men, all over six feet tall. Frequently, to these eyes, they have not appeared quite so imposingly architectured. The cameras seem to pull their physical dimensions down a bit.

Strangely, among the visiting feminine stars this photographic freak is not so much in evidence. Annabella, Eleanor Powell, Andrea Leeds, Mitzi Green and the rest are identical personalities and figures on and off the silver sheet.

Eleanor Powell an Indefatigable Worker

The gracious and indefatigable Miss Powell, as she proved here last year, is a vivacious and untiring young artiste who never deems the demands made upon her time and strength too heavy. Miss Leeds, in person, fulfills every expectation of the type of actress who would have been able to make so enduring an impression as resulted from her work in "Stage Door"—a thoughtful, poised and extremely well-informed young woman, who, I believe, began with aspirations to be a writer and was deflected to acting through circumstance disguised as Samuel Goldwyn. And is she lucky to have dodged this racket!

Annabella is a bit of a surprise to those who never before have had the privilege of meeting her. She is as lovely as the screen always has made her appear and is possessed of a mental acumen, a quick sense of humor and an illuminating smile that lead one to believe that her American screen opportunities never yet have been commensurate with her full capabilities. There is still a charming trace of French accent, but that is of no matter, except to add piquancy to an engaging personality.

At the cocktail party in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel, given yesterday evening at 5:30 by the Hon. Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of District Commissioners and general chairman of the President's Birthday Celebrations, the national broadcast over all of the local stations was the item of chief interest. Among the visiting stars who spoke briefly and effectively over the air were Andrea Leeds, Lili Damita, (Mrs. Errol Flynn), Errol Flynn, Bruce Cabot, Jean Hersholt, Frank Fay, "Red" Skelton, and others of note. They werep receded by Commissioner Hazen, who paid tribute to all who have buckled down and worked for the success of the present year's celebration of the President's Birthday in the interest of the fight against infantile paralysis. The Willard Room was packed with notables—leaders of the Senate, House, District Government, social and civic circles, until the room could have held no more.

The State Theater Has Birhtday

During the hectic round of activities that have attended the alignment of talent for the Presidential celebrations, this column, as chairman of the entertainment committee, has overlooked many items of news of local and nearby interest. Perhaps one of the most important was the fact that on last Friday night, January 27, the State Theater in Falls Church, Va., observed its third anniversary. There were impressive goings-on in recognition of the event.

As an example, Mayor L. P. Daniel cut the birthday cake, a slice of which was presented to each patron of the theater on that night. The screen attraction for the birthday party was "Young Dr. Kildare," starring Lew Ayres and Lionel Barrymore.

We were graciously invited by Mr. Wade Pearson, district manager for the Fairfax Corporation, to be present and aid in the festivities, but were erased by an overwhelming press of other duties—a matter which we extremely regret.

The White House, through the courtesy of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, yesterday provided a busy day for the stage and screen celebrities in town to swell the fund to combat infantile paralysis. Mrs. Roosevelt's luncheon was an event that was foremost on the tip of every stellar tongue yesterday evening and last night the stars again met the President as guests at his National broadcast at 11:32 o'clock in one of the White House studios.

It occurs to a slightly befuddled brain—if any—that there are some preview screenings coming along on top of everything else. Today's seems to be "Honolulu," starring the estimable Eleanor Powell, one of the stars now in Washington—at least she was until 4 o'clock this morning to my positive knowledge—supported by a splendid ensemble of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer players. Miss Powell adventures with the hula-hula in this subject and since that Polynesian series of gyrations is a little apart from the requirements of tap dancing—at which Miss Powell is at the head of her class—she confides that the assignment put her in bed for a day or two, with strange aches, unaccustomed pains, the discovery of new muscles she never knew she had and whatnot.

My premature notion would be, prior to seeing the picture, that if Eleanor was called upon to do a hula, Eleanor did a hula. She is like that. And Mrs. Powell, her mother, is sitting right ever there, too!

And speaking of mothers, Andrea Leeds' is with her, also, on the current Washington junket, as are Mrs. Jean Hersholt, Mrs. Ralph Bellamy and Mrs. Errol Flynn with their distinguished husbands. Also among those present is Miss Minna Wallis, sister of Hal B. Wallis and sister-in-law of Louise Fazenda, from the Warner Brothers' Studios. Miss Wallis is being squired, more often than not, by George Brent, stalwart Warner star.

The New Yorker

New York, Jan. 30.

LOWELL THOMAS tendered a reception for more than 500 guests at the Waldorf last week. He introduced the distinguished people on the dais, including Sir Ronald Storrs, the former Governor of Jerusalem, together with a dusky, bearded man, who wore a turban and complete Arab costume. "I met this Arabian Sheik in India," Thomas explained, "and more will be said about him later" . . . While Thomas introduced other speakers, Sir Ronald seated himself next to the Sheik and tried to engage him in conversation . . . Storrs, who can speak every known variation of Arabic, tried Egyptian Arabic, Syrian Arabic, etc., but the Sheik couldn't understand.

SHORTLY BEFORE the dinner was concluded, Capt. MacMillian, who had explored with Peary, addressed the guests. He told them of a courageous American Negro who had accompanied Peary on all the Polar expeditions—but whose heroism never received the acclaim to which it was entitled . . . "And now I'll present him to you," said Capt. MacMillan—and introduced the "Sheik," who had worn the prop beard, turban and Arab costume to grace the dais of the Waldorf-Astoria.

A "MUSICA" complaint will be made to the New York Stock Exchange shortly, concerning one of the listed stocks. Instead of empty warehouses, the directors emptied the subsidiary companies . . . The cast of Thornton Wilder's "Merchant of Yonkers"—which is scheduled to close tonight—wants to continue it on a co-operative basis. Every member of the troupe, including Jane Cowl, is willing to work for a $50 minimum, because they all have so much faith in the play. But they can't find a theater to house the show . . Prof. Charles Beard, of Columbia, will go to Washington to make a stirring speech before the Senate committee in behalf of the naval appropriations bill.

MOSS HART is so pleased at the reception accorded "The American Way" that he now possesses a gold cigarette case purchased at Cartier's . . . The case bears the inscription: "To Moss Hart—that Prince of Good Fellows and Most Charming Companion . . . Lovingly—from Moss Hart."

GOV. FRANCIS P. Murphy, of New Hampshire, came to the Cotton Club the other night at 7 o'clock—and remained there until 4 a. m. . . . Solomon Gedeon, the infant ventriloquist and protege of Cab Calloway, was invited to meet the Governor in the private office of the Cotton Club . . . The lad rushed into the office, where Gov. Murphy gave him a $5 bill . . "For that much dough," the boy acknowledged, "I gotta teach you something" . . . And so for the next half hour in the office of this Broadway cafe Solomon Gedeon, ragamuffin of the streets of Harlem, taught the Governor of New Hampshire how to do the "Boogie-Woogie."

THE CURRENT Munich story concerns the conversation held between Hitler and Chamberlain, after the pact which presented the Sudetens to Nazi Germany . . . "This all is so wonderful," Hitler is alleged to have told the Prime Minister. "I would like to have some personal token by which to remember this historic occasion. Some small momento . . . Would you give me your umbrella?" . . . Chamberlain hesitated, pondered, and then made answer. "So sorry, Herr Hitler, but I cannot give you my umbrella," he replied. "You see, the umbrella is mine."

BECAUSE THE Circuit Court of Appeals decision in the Hague case is one of the broadest decisions concerning civil liberties in this country, counsel for the victorious C. I. O. will not oppose Hague's effort to appeal to the United States Supreme Court . . . Lee Myles, who was succeeded at the Park Central by Chick Webb's band and Ella Fitzgerald, watched the premiere Thursday, to observe the stars who had replaced him. Myles noticed that Miss Fitzgerald was staring at him. Ella explained why, a few minutes later. She wanted his autograph . . . Some issues ago, Peek magazine published Ben Heller's series of photos. One of the pictures showed three hoboes holding a bottle of booze. And so the hoboes are suing Peek for $50,000—charging libel.

THE MASTERS of Fox Hounds of America held their annual reception last night. The bluebloods, wearing red hunting coats, went to El Morocco later, where they all submitted to being photographed . . . Last year, when these elegant hunters came to El Morocco, only one member of the group refused to be photographed, and explained that it would not be in keeping with his station of dignity . . . His name was Richard Whitney.

Trans-Lux

Though there are many interesting and novel topics covered in the current Trans-Lux show there is one that particularly stirs one's wonderment. The news pictorial covers the fistic encounter of last Wednesday night between Joe Louis and John Henry Lewis. It is interestingly done—celebrities arrive, contestants are introduced, the effects of each blow—Lewis on the ropes, on the carpet, and finally counted out by a kindly referee, then a scene in Louis' dressing room the champion answering all questions smartly. Everything is completely shown—except the actual fighting, the striking of the blows. This is prohibited by Federal law, though professional fights are frequently seen in our suburbs, across the line. One wonders!

Other highlights of the extra-full news section are recent happenings in Spain, with corollaries on what is to follow after the capture of Barcelona. The March of Dimes campaign gets footage, also the Navy's air defense maneuvers, the crowning of Tyrone Power and Jeannette MacDonald, as King and Queen of the Movies, and the Bermuda air crash.

"King Vulture," a short, features an exciting capture of a huge vulture by scientists on a trophy hunt, high in the majestic Sierras; another short, especially appreciated, is "Plant Power," showing growing sunflowers, radishes and other plants amazingly pushing aside and piercing formidable obstacles in their onward path, and other accomplishments. "Gems of the Orient" is an interesting travelogue in color, covering Hongkong and Siam, and "Hawaiian Holiday" is one of Disney's best cartoons.

New Casting Mark Is Set by 'Imperial'

Robert Florey, director, today launched one of the biggest jobs of casting in Hollywood's history.

A total of 162 speaking roles are to be cast in "Hotel Imperial," the story chosen by the studio to bring Isa Miranda, the golden girl of Italy, to the American screen.

Alan Dinehart Is Costumer For His Wife

Noted Actor Occupies Unique Place Among Theater's Husbands

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Staff Correspondent.

Hollywood, Jan. 30.—Alan Dinehart probably is America's most fortunate husband. Mayby the world's.

Does he suffer—like other husbands—when his wife comes home with a hat that looks like a tea-strainer with a carrot stuck in it? He does not.

Is he forced to suppress his rage when Mrs. Dinehart dresses in a ginger-bread gown, with fluffy ruffles on it, and spots? He is not.

Does he bite his fingernails and contemplate the life of a habitual drunkard when she shows up with a pair of shoes from which her toes emerge? Not Dinehart.

His wife never wears silly hats, foolish frocks nor sappy shoes. Why?

Dinehart buys all her clothes himself. He doesn't let her go along to the store, either, and bother him. He walks in by himself, announces that he's interested in hats, or dresses, or whatever, and buys what pleases him.

He has a card on which is written Mrs. Dinehart's specifications. She wears a size 29 hat, a 14 dress and a 4½ "C" shoe. So whatever he buys her fits her, and since he pays cash there isn't much chance of her returning his purchases.

This is a nuisance to Dinehart, particularly since he's one of Hollywood's busiest character actors, playwrights and stage producers. But it's not as big a nuisance as a funny looking hat, off balance on his wife's head.

Dinehart told about his adventures into what hitherto has been regarded as an exclusively feminine prerogative, in his home on a mountain top, overlooking Dark Canyon. Mrs. Dinehart, the former Mozell Britton, sat across the room from him and exhibited a handsome blue dress her husband had bought. She also wore blue shoes, from which her toes did not peek and which Mr. Dinehart purchased from a flabbergasted clerk.

"In the old days when I was producing plays in Broadway," Dinehart said, "I got interested in clothes. I had to be. I had to learn about design and quality and style. And it used to make me sick seeing women in dresses and hats that made them look like fools.

I like nice, plain, simple clothes, without a lot of pleats and things. So when we got married I just kept on buying women's clothes, not in wholesale lots any more for the casts of my shows, but at retail for my wife."

Mrs. Dinehart, who is one of Hollywood's handsomest women, said she didn't mind his purchasing her wardrobe. She said in fact that mostly she liked his selections and that his prowling through the ladies' ready-to-wear sections saved her a lot of time.

"Though I must admit sometimes I'd like to have a dress which wasn't all one color," she said, "or one with some trimming on it."

She added that she has become angry at her husband over his selections only once.

"And that was when he bought this house," she said. "He wouldn't even let me select the drapes."

"I didn't want drapes," Dinehart said.

"So we didn't get drapes," Mrs. Dinehart said. "See, we've got Venetian blinds and shutters at the ends of the windows, but no drapes."

Dinehart's last picture was "Fast and Loose," at M-G-M. The one before that was "King of the Turf" at United Artists. Neither has been released yet. He's appeared in 69 movies to date, and 30 plays. He wrote many of the latter, including such hits as "The Meanest Man in the World" and "Applesauce."

He's working on one now called "Thanks for my Wife." It may get a Broadway production soon with Dinehart playing in it. So will Mrs. Dinehart—and if you're a hat-suffering husband and live anywhere near New York, we urge that you drop by, for an object lesson.

Anna May Wong Only Real Oriental

Hollywood has long prided itself that it can provide actors and actresses of any race and capable of carrying anything from a bit role to a starring assignment.

But it seems there are exceptions to all rules.

The casting of Sidney Toler, well-known character actor, as a Chinese herb doctor in Paramount's "King of Chinatown," brought home the fact that today, with one exception, all "Oriental" actors who can carry pictures in major roles are distinctly Occidentals.

The late Warner Oland created the role of "Charlie Chan." After Oland's death, Twentieth Century-Fox held in abeyance plans to continue the successful series until Toler was cast as a successor to Oland. Peter Lorre, a German, created "Mr. Moto." When Metro-Goldwyn cast "The Good Earth," Paul Muni and Luise Rainer were selected for the starring spots.

The one exception to the rule is Anna May Wong, who is starring in her picture at Paramount.

Relieved as Bear Proves Stuffed

That koala bear which Jeanette MacDonald was to receive from a fan in Perth, Australia, arrived today. The singing star had been worrying for a week as to where she could turn it over to a zoo. When it finally arrived it turned out to be a stuffed one, and Jeanette is breathing sighs of relief again.

Laugh on Director

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 30.—The rain and visiting celebrities had us flying for shelter into some of the swellest parties seen hereabout. After Arthur Rubinstein's concert where the piano leapt right into his lap, and you all but swooned, he went on to the Basil Rathbone's new home in Bel Air to be greeted by his dearest friends and most of Hollywood. Jascha Heifetz and wife motored from Claremont and Ernst Lubitsch started a discussion about the dulling effect war and revolutions have on art and music.

HEDDA HOPPER

Musicians didn't quite agree with Herr Lubitsch, at least about their end of it. They said, thanks to radio which has brought fine music into every home, their business is better than ever.

After a delicious hot supper, Rubenstein wasn't in the mood for playing, but says when he comes back next year, he'll give the Rathbones and their friends a private concert in their own home, just as he does in the theater.

But to get on with the party. Mrs. Rathbone's former husband, George Fitzmaurice, said, "This is the most wonderful party Ouida ever gave, and I've never enjoyed any of them so much."

I was nasty enough to chime in with, "Perhaps it's because you don't have to pay for this one." But Basil, who did pay for it, enjoyed it as much as Fitz.

When anybody spouts about Hollywood hostesses and doesn't put Ouida first, they always get an argument from me. She's so good she should be on a yearly salary to arrange, plan and execute all parties.

Her house wasn't big enough to hold 150, so a tent was put over the terrace and patio in the garden. At 4:30 the tent with all its trimmings caved in, but by 10:30 there were three tents, all the grass mats dry, a dance floor down, sides and the ceiling covered with smilax and gardenias. Phil Ohman and ten of his boys furnished the dance music and a huge outside fireplace warmed the whole thing—few of the guests knew they were outside.

Marlene Dietrich created her usual sensation in that white chiffon, form-fitting dress over a nude underslip. Everyone did a double take, for the first look didn't reveal the slip. She wore a new ruby cartwheel on her arm and another at her waist holding chiffon flowers. Mrs. Peabody from Baltimore said: "If I had her figure I'd wear that kind of gown, too."

Marlene told me she's delighted to be in Eddie Goulding's next picture at Warner's. And I heard Mrs. Bob Montgomery and Hope Loring thank her for the cookies she's been making for them.

The only cigarette case and compact I ever envied belongs to Mrs. Montgomery, Bob's Christmas present—square green gold with huge monogram of diamonds, and she never carries them outside their little flannel cases.

I asked Charles Boyer if he'd had any criticism about the fact that he was playing opposite Deanna Durbin in her next picture. He said, "No, but if there's been any, I'll probably play a dear old paternal gentleman with a long white beard." He added, "In my interview with Deanna, I found her so delightful but more grown-up than I'd expected."

Charlie Martin, Joan Crawford's new friend, is such a nice guy—simple, real—even let Joan comb his hair before he had his picture taken. I think you can discount those stories about any reconciliation with Franchot. Joan was wearing her new necklace and bracelet of rubies and aquamarines with a solitare as blue as the Adriatic Sea.

Mrs. Mitch Leisen hobbled in on a crutch with one foot in a plaster cast. She prepared for Sun Valley and an imitation of Sonja Henie but didn't quite make it—hence the cast. Her scarlet toes were peeping out from a white gown and a huge ruby ring on the biggest one.

Because of Unusual Height, Girl's Once Happy-Go-Lucky Personality Has Changed. How Regain Poise?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: How to overcome self-consciousness has become a problem of such proportions that I am turning to you for help. Since high school days its influence has made the going hard, and now, at 29, I have to admit it still has the upper hand. I am discouraged and feel my life being spoiled. I was reared on a farm in the Middle West and went to country school. I did not then know the meaning of the words, "self-conscious," or "shy." I was a tomboy, entirely happy, the leader of my playmates and the head of my class.

But I grew rapidly and at 13 I was almost 6 feet tall, which is my present height. In high school the ridicule I encountered because of my height hurt deeply. Before long, I became a shy, retiring person who shunned school parties, was afraid of boys and reluctant to recite either in their presence or before advanced students. I became all the more studious, and was an honor student when I was graduated. By that time I was very quiet and serious, and, although I was liked, I was left much to myself. The story was repeated at business college.

In 1935, I came to Washington to work, and four years of steady employment have done a great deal to restore my self-esteem and confidence. Because I am attractive, I haven't lacked for attentions from the opposite sex, which has helped, too. However, even yet I can't walk down the street without feeling extremely self-conscious. I would like to know how to dance, but am to self-conscious to learn. I shrink from swimming and skating, for fear of attracting the notice of spectators. I shrink from going to parties; am embarrassed if left alone with strangers to whom I have just been introduced; do not make friends easily and avoid dining at better class cafes and restaurants.

I try to forget myself; try desperately to do so; but I just can't. All this makes life seem empty and uninteresting, and I am afraid it will always be so, unless I can overcome this self-consciousness and fear of what other people think. Isn't there some way of banishing this canker from my personality? Sincerely, SELF-CONSCIOUS.

Learn Mannequin's Art

DEAR SELF-CONSCIOUS: In my opinion, the one thing above all things calculated to replace your self-consciousness with imperturbable poise, is a stiff course of training in a school for fashion models. There are a number of such schools in Washington, conducting night classes of instruction, and I shall be glad to advise you confidentially in making a suitable choice.

I have just been talking with the head of one of the better known schools here, who says that, "when it comes to selecting girls who show off clothes to advantage, well—they just can't come too tall for me." She said that in a recent show which she put on, the "most stunning model, the one most admired by management and patrons, was a girl who is 5 feet 11 inches tall."

"When she came to me two months ago," the director said, "the girl was miserably self-conscious about her height and awkward because of it. When you so much as spoke to her, the blood rushed into her face and throat in scorching blotches. But now, as a result of learning how to walk gracefully, how to enter a room properly, how to sit down and so on, she has become an entirely different person, and she knows it. She says persons who have known her all her life don't get over the change in her."

This same director, who is 5 feet 7 inches tall, says when she was in high school she was referred to as "bean pole," and that she suffered because of it—"but not for long; not any longer than it took me to get wise to the fact that I had a real advantage over shorter girls, if I was willing to capitalize it. Now," she says, "I would give anything for two more inches."

She has capitalized her height in more ways than one; not only in learning how to turn it to social advantage in her personal life but in turning it to professional account by teaching other tall girls how to make equally effective use of their distinctive length of limb. "I can do a lot for this girl," she said with reference to you. "I know exactly what she's been through and what she's going through, and how she can turn her supposed liability into an asset.

"The right cosmetics and the right kind of clothes are just as important for her as knowing how to manage herself. Once she gets her height off her mind, that really attractive personality of hers will put her up in the front ranks where she belongs. How do I know she has an attractive personality? Why, because she has intelligence—she proved that by standing first in her classes. And because she has a gift for getting along with people—she showed that from childhood, when she was the leader among her playmates. Also, she admits that in spite of her unfortunate later attitude, she 'hasn't lacked for attentions from men.'"

Don't stop at learning the mannequin's secrets of easy grace and casual acceptance of the spotlight. Your desire to dance, swim and skate should be gratified. Hunt out the best instructors in these matters, and practice until your performance is effortlessly excellent. You may be one, three or five years in achieving your goals, but your life will be quite the reverse of "empty and uninteresting" in the meantime.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Criss-cross Gloves for Spring

With a criss-cross in fine hand stitching the Parisian designer, Kislav puts across one of his newest spring glove ideas. This inspiration of design is the sole note of whimsy to an otherwise classic style. In the tradition of European style purists, this designer in leathers concentrates on the cut and exquisite workmanship of gloves, believing that these qualities enhance a hand's beauty, rather than fillips and cut-outs. This type of patrician glove, shown above, with a doeskin turban in identical tones of honey-beige would be spring medicine to a drab-looking winter ensemble

Lots of Light, Plenty of Air Termed Best Skin Treatment

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

A VERY LARGE part of my correspondence from readers concerns inquiries about the skin. Young people especially are tortured by acne or pimples. Others ask perennially about psoriasis. I wish I could answer these questions more satisfactorily. Some cases are easy to clear up, but the stubborn ones are very difficult.

With any skin, however, there are some simple rules of hygiene and diet which do much to keep a clear, glowing appearance.

Light and air are the best skin doctors. Some modern ladies keep their faces so constantly covered with paint and powder that the skin never has a chance to breathe. The whole skin should regularly be exposed to light and especially to air. And it needs more attention these winter days than in the summer.

Necessary food constituents go to nourish the skin from within. The skin can be cleaned externally by a bath but it needs an internal bath also and certain foods are recognized for their nourishing effect on the skin.

Eat Onions

The onion is highly praised by experts on this account. Humble, and often despised, it is within reach of all. It is rich in sulphur, which the old wives think is a good skin food, as witness the sulphur and molasses tonic. We are getting near the spring tonic season and it is just as well to anticipate it.

Not only sulphur, but iron is an important skin tonic. The foods which contain sulphur and iron are onions, sprouts, cabbage, celery, beetroot, radishes, endive, cauliflower and red cabbage. They are all best eaten raw.

The following are rich in iron: Watercress, spinach, prunes, raisins, dried apricots, parsley, olives, dandelion leaves and roots, and all dark green vegetables.

Spinach has been praised extravagantly and with justice. It is a valuable tonic to the blood and skin. The simplest method of cooking is the best. After many rinsings to rid the leaves of grit and insect matter, simmer them slowly in their own juice for about ten minutes so that none of the value is lost in cooking. Turnip tops have the same virtues, and are cheaper.

Also Carrots

Raw tomatoes and carrots are also good skin tonics. Carrots should not be peeled, because the skin contains a large percentage of vitamin B. Carrots are valuable in cases of constipation.

Nuts are also valuable foods for the whole body as well as the skin. Their great food value is not often recognized and they should not be left out of a well balanced diet.

Water should be drunk freely between meals by the potential skin invalid. Fruit juices are of the utmost importance in the beauty diet.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mrs. F. B.: "Please recommend a good book to give a child to explain the facts of life."

Answer: "Step by Step in Sex Education" by Ethel Hale Swift The Macmillan Co., 1938). Of all the books of the kind this seems to me the best to recommend to a child.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

THE PHENOMENON of society girls' devotion to attractive young men who stand and wave a wand at a jazz band has long fascinated me. I have studied it avidly, and am still curious. So when the latest of these duos, Mr. Hal Kemp and our former Miss Martha Stephenson, arrived from Pittsburgh as Mr. and Mrs., I was one of the first to be waiting at the big iron gate.

My colleagues and myself learned one significant thing from the Kemps. That stick of Hal's will not only wave over his musicians; it will also wave over the Maison Kemp. Hal's boss of pretty Martha—at least, up to now.

"Honey, I don't say you haven't a good voice," said the lad from Charlottesville, N. C. "But I mean you're Mrs. Hal Kemp from now on, and I won't have any career woman for a wife." Well, that makes it fairly clear, no?

Brother Kemp added that she could take a screen test if she wanted to, but that it wouldn't do her any good, even if she passed summa cum laude. "Because Mrs. Hal Kemp isn't going to go runnin' off to Hollywood, either!" Attaboy, Tarheel, ole boy!

"I guess I'm just a wife, now," said the luscious Martha, with no note of regret, "I'm even catching his Southern accent." So saying, the bride swept away to the Waldorf in a cloud of mink topped by a goofy hat. When Brother Kemp's band is not tooting, the young couple will live on his 100-acre farm in Jersey.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Broadway may be having a sort of tough time making a few dollars this year, but every couple of weeks it does produce a honey of a first night. The combination of Noel Coward and Beatrice Lillie is sure-fire to bring out our carriage trade in its acres of ermine. The opening of Aunty Bea's "Set to Music" was no exception. Every "name" in town fought into the Music Box Theater, but the show was stolen as usual by the three Barrymores — Jawn, Elaine and Ma-in-Law Jacobs. To make it good, they sat in a box, so all could see them, and they gave a performance almost as good as La Lillie's. And she, of course, is the funniest woman alive.

Whom did I see the other day but Katharine Hepburn (not a motion picture) eating away at Reuben's just as natural as anything. Kate the Great, pride of Hartford, was wearing a beige flannel suit with a box jacket that had slash pockets outlined in aqua blue.

Well, the dinner of the friends of the Duke of Windsor in America passed off without trouble, without even hooting in the streets. Its president and founder, Mrs. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, says that "The Royal Song of Love," by Claude Lapham, was sung during the didoes. One line of this gorgeous lyric runs, "They put him in a niche apart, reserved for destiny." I'm no sissy, but at that moment I should have asked to be excused, please.

New Careers In Fashion Art

A GREAT DAY! Marian gets her first order for a fashion illustration—now she's a full-fledged fashion artist.

Not so long ago Marian was hopeless about her dull life, her ill-paid job. Then she found that anyone with a germ of talent can learn to draw at home. With the help of simple instructions and charts professional skill can be acquired.

You begin with the simple "visual" or "blocking-in" method. In drawing people, you start by sketching in straight lines from point to point. You use definite proportions for the face and the parts of the body.

You quickly learn, too, how to drape the figure with smart costumes. Copy new dress models you see in magazines, on the street, at the theater.

A great day when you're ready to sell your drawings. Department stores, newspapers, fashion magazines, advertising agencies need thousands every year.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, HOME COURSE IN FASHION ART, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Bending Back May Give You Lordosis

Sway Back Is Simpler Word for It; Twist Sideways Is All Right

By Ida Jean Kain.

DON'T BEND over backward to keep streamlined . . . it might give you lordosis! That is nothing more nor less than swayback, but still it's nothing you want to work for.

Backward bending is to be recommended only with reservation. It is quite all right for acrobats and dancers but not for anyone who is rusty on exercise or for anyone with the slightest tendency toward swayback.

Forward bending has more in its favor, for it can be a very good exercise when preceded by a thoroughgoing upward stretch and when the bending is accomplished with the lower abdominal wall held firmly up. Otherwise, it takes more effort than it is worth. Even when done correctly, forward bending has some objectionable features. Don't try it if you have high blood pressure or if it makes you dizzy.

Sideways Is All Right

Unlike the foregoing exercises, sideward bending is completely satisfactory. It is one of the best exercises you can find for giving the waistline a trimming. Begin by stretching upward and locking the hands high overhead. Stretch some more, to pull out any slack in the midriff and then, keeping the hips stationary, bend directly sideward as far as possible. Come back to center, stretch upward, and bend to the opposite side.

A more strenuous version of the side bend is this: Place one foot out at the side on the arm of a chair. Keep both legs straight and stretch the arms high overhead with the fingers interlaced. Bend sideward and try to touch the locked hands to the outstretched leg. Take it easy . . . practice will eventually make you flexible but an overdose of exercise at the beginning makes you stiff instead of supple.

The main point in stretching to slim the midsection is that the pull should be concentrated between the hips and the ribcage. You can't expect to slim the waist if most of your stretching is from the shoulder girdle upward.

Change Is Helpful

Sometimes a change in tempo will make a set of exercises more effective. But whether you race through your daily dozen or take it leisurely, try to have the movements smoothly rhythmical and accurate. Turn on the music and do your daily dozen to swing-time.

It pays to change to an entirely different set of exercises every so often. Not only does the same set tend to become routine and monotonous, but the body seems to accustom itself to routine movements so that the effectiveness gradually wears off. Moreover, when you make a habit of doing the same exercises every day you begin to do them mechanically and an exercise is never worth more than the effort you put into it.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Slumming Party

"Oh . . . hello!"

"Why—er—hello!"

"What on earth are you doing here?"

"Oh, I'm just looking around. You know I really don't feel as if I'd been downtown if I don't look in on the dime store."

"That's the way with me. Isn't it the most fascinating place?"

"It certainly is. I simply adore watching the people."

"So do I. You see so many interesting types."

"Yes and I always pick up a few little things. That's what I've got here—some hair curlers and notions. It's so much easier to find them in a place like this. I get so confused in the big stores."

"That's the way with me. I've been picking up some party favors—that's what all these packages are. You can't find really cute things at the big stores.

"Well, once I get in here I always find so many fascinating little things I just can't stop buying. That's why I'm so loaded down."

"Well, I really got started coming here with Junior. He loves it. It's the first place he wants to go when I bring him downtown."

"That's the way with Janey. She just drags me in here."

"Well, you really can pick up a lot of nice toys and little things for children."

"Yes, and you know really I buy some of my cosmetics here. The little packages are so convenient."

"Well, of course I wouldn't get anything important here but there are some things—well, like dishes, that you can get when you are going to have a party and don't want your things broken."

"Yes, and kitchen utensils. I just don't see any use in buying good things for help to batter up."

"You know honestly you'd be surprised at the people who shop here—people from the embassies and things like that."

"Oh, I know. Why lots of people ride up in taxicabs, and even in limousines . . . Well, I've got to get on. I've got a cocktail engagement at the Crystal Lounge."

"I've got to get to my board meeting over at the club. Well, I'm so glad I saw you. Good-by."

"Oh—why, hello!"

"Oh, hello! Why, here we are again!"

"Yes; I just couldn't resist this costume jewelry. I thought I'd take a little rhinestone necklace home for Janey."

"Well, I was just looking for something to put in a grab bag at a party. I don't believe I'll have time today, though; I'm in such a hurry. Well, good-by."

"Oh, hello! I didn't know that was you."

"Oh—why, isn't that funny! We just can't seem to lose each other, can we?"

"Well, I just stopped by this rayon underwear on my way out to see if I could find something for the maid. They have perfectly marvelous values—for that sort of thing."

"Well, I thought I might pick up something for a family I'm helping, but I'm so rushed I don't believe I'll bother with it today."

"Well, I've got to get along. Are you going now?"

"Yes; just as soon as I get my package."

Mrs. Lloyd's At Home Is 'Topflight' Event

Society Turns Out in Full Force for Day's Program of Interesting Parties; Dr. Rybar Host for Diplomatic Set

By Hope Ridings Miller.

MAKING THE ROUNDS at cocktail-time yesterday afternoon I happened in on three parties, each so interesting I wanted to stay on and skip the other two.

District of Columbia Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen's party at the Willard Hotel featured a flock of motion-picture celebrities, any one of which I could tell you about in a whole column without any trouble at all. Of the whole lot, I was most impressed with—no, you missed it—not Errol Flynn, but his attractive wife, Lili Damita, whose streamlined figure and green wimple were something to write home about.

HOPE R. MILLER

But since Commissioner Hazen's party is discussed elsewhere on the page, I'll talk about another, which was really THE social event of a crowded afternoon—Mrs. Demarest Lloyd's "at home" in her magnificent Tudor mansion on R street.

Truth is, nobody fortunate enough to be invited to one of Mrs. Lloyd's parties would miss it for anything. Topflight society was there fullforce yesterday afternoon, a few going on later to Commissioner Hazen's movie-star fete; a few others already having been out to the smaller reception given by Dr. Vladimir Rybar, Counselor of the Yugoslav Legation.

The throng of guests arriving at Mrs. Lloyd's between 5 and 7 o'clock found their way to the second-floor ball room that was a moving mass of social notables. Receiving at the door, the hostess was a lovely picture in a handsome frock with a light green, knife-pleated, floor-length skirt and a short jacket embroidered with pastel beads.

The massive ballroom, with its handsome tapestries and oil paintings, needs no special decorations. Here and there yesterday there were huge bouquets of gladioli and snapdragons, and the tea table over at one side was centered with a mass of spring flowers, flanked by tall tapers.

A stringed trio up on the balcony played during the party, and the crowd of guests came and lingered longer than usual, some circulating around the tea table, others collecting in the hall where drinks were served.

Residential Notables There Full Force

Residential Washington made up most of the guests, but there was a sprinkling of diplomats and official notables, adding an extra dash of interest to the company. To mention but a few I saw—there was Miss Mabel Boardman among the early arrivals; Mrs. Harry D. Flood and her pretty daughter, Miss Eleanor Flood, the two talking with Pendleton Hogan, the author. Miss Mary Patten was there; also Mrs. Frederick Brook, Mrs. George Barnett, just getting back into circulation after having been laid low with bronchitis; Mr. and Mrs. Gale McLean, Miss Emily Davis, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Meem, the latter of whom will be off to Palm Beach tomorrow; Mr and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, the latter wearing a snappy blue turban, one of the smartest hats I've seen this season.

Still others there were the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, coming in with Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken; Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mme. Lombard, who looks prettier every time I see her; Miss Stellita Stapleton, rushing off to be present at her mother's final "at home" of the season. Incidentally, Miss Stapleton will leave the latter part of the week for a month's stay with her aunt, Mrs. Mae Hamilton, in Palm Beach.

Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol were also noted at the party; also Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. George T. Pettengill, Clarence Hewes, the Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, Dr. Hans Thomsen; Mrs. C. C. Glover, Commander and Mrs. Hamilton Bryan, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. John Magruder and Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman; also, the Misses Laura and Alice Tuckerman, Mrs. McCeney Werlich and scores of others.

Hitler's Talk Much Discussed

A much smaller gathering was the one at which Dr. Rybar entertained. Yet his cozy apartment at the Broadmoor was pretty well filled before the final partying hour rolled around. Declaring himself an example of the "bachelor born," Dr. Rybar admits, nevertheless, that a good many of his friends are feminine and that he has a special admiration for American women. "Not more so than for ladies of my own country," he adds. "But I will say American women are much more attractive than I expected them to be." He has been in this country only a year, and he said it took him not quite six months to get over some preconceived ideas about this country's "gentler sex."

Hitler's speech yesterday was a popular topic of talk, with only the American guests, as usual, expressing themselves unreservedly, the others veiling their comments in diplomatic language.

Among those I noted in the company during the earlier half of the party were the Minister of Lithuania and Mrs. Povilas Zadeikis; Dr. and Mme. Karel Brejska, of the Czechoslovak Legation; the Counselor of the Swiss Legation, Eduard Feer (Mme. Feer is still recuperating from a seige of laryngitis); Dr. Hans Thomsen; Rafel Lepkowski, of the Polish Embassy; Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer, Ridgeway Taylor, Mrs. William Shearer, and several others.

Lord Kemsley Luncheon Guest

Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of the Senator from Illinois, was hostess at a luncheon yesterday at the 1925 F Street Club after Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's concert at the Mayflower Hotel.

Guests of honor were Lord and Lady Kemsley and the former's son, the Honorable John Douglas Berry, of England, who recently arrived in this country and will be in Washington for several days. Lord Kemsley (James Gomer Berry) is editor in chief of the Sunday Times, weekly edition of the Allied Newspapers chain of England.

Among the 18 guests at Mrs. Lewis's luncheon were the Australian Counselor of the British Embassy, Keith Officer; the first secretary of the British Embassy, Christopher Bramwell, and Mr. and Mrs. Loy Henderson. Mr. Henderson, who is with the State Department, formerly was charge d'affaires of the United States Embassy in the Soviet Union.

Mrs. W. D. Leahy Entertains With 'At Home' Tea

Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of Admiral Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, was "at home" yesterday afternoon at their quarters in Observatory Circle. Receiving with her was her daughter-in-law, Mrs. William H. Leahy.

The elder Mrs. Leahy wore a black tea gown with a jacket trimmed in silver sequins. Her daughter-in-law also was gowned in black.

Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. James O. Richardson, Mrs. Henry Hough, Mrs. Ridley McLean and Mrs. Charles B. McVay.

Among the guests were the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close; Commander Paul Benech, Naval Attache, of the French Embassy, and Mme. Benech; Capt. Kengo Kobayashi, Naval Attache of the Japanese Embassy, and Mme. Kobayashi; Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mrs Lawrence V. Benet, Mrs. A. P. Niblack and William R. Castle.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Miss Alice Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Henry Buck, Mrs. Harry Taylor, Rear Admiral and Mrs. E. J. Marquart, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Capt. and Mrs. Dudley Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin, Mrs. Malin Craig, Miss Mary Wilson and Henry B. Wilkins.

Others noted here and there were Mrs. Matthew Dulany, Mrs. Charles Lincoln Hussey, Mrs. Mason Gulick, Miss Isabella Devereux, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Herndon Phillips and Mrs. Charles F. Wilson.

Mrs. Ickes at Home

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, will be "at home" tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at Headwaters Farm, Olney, Md.

Returns From Southern Trip

Frederick of the Waldorf.

Mrs. Preston Delano who, with her husband, the recently appointed Comptroller of the Currency, has just returned from a vacation in Palm Beach, Fla. She is shown here as the photographer "snapped" her in the Terrace Gardens of the Palm Beach Biltmore

About The Town

—With Dudley Harmon

MINK-COATED MOVIE STARS, news photographers and several grinning cops rubbed elbows yesterday at the informal cocktail party given by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen for stars here for the President's Birthday Ball. The actors and actresses would talk of nothing but what fun they'd had at luncheon at the White House earlier in the day, when after the meal the guests got together with younger members of the Roosevelt family and amused themselves doing weight-lifting stunts. It is reported that Errol Flynn was the best.

DUDLEY HARMON

"Mrs. Roosevelt's personality absolutely stupefies me," confessed Andrea Leeds. "I've never met anyone so dynamic, intelligent, and yet so completely friendly." Miss Leeds wore the inevitable mink over her black silk frock; open-toed sandals and a little white turban with a flat crown of little black feathers.

Bruce Cabot, who frequently visits the John Hay Whitneys at Llangollen, said yesterday that what most impressed him in Washington was the fan mail the White House got.

The Jean Hersholts, a most attractive couple, were also at the party. They took tea on Sunday with the Danish Minister and Mme. Wadsted—both the actor and his wife are Danish by birth.

NEWS that the very eligible Prince del Drago, until a few weeks ago First Secretary of the Italian Embassy here, was engaged to Mlle. Charleroux, of Paris, surprised many members of Capital society. We hear that their marriage will take place in the next two or three weeks, as on February 19 Mussolini's new law forbidding Italians to marry foreigners goes into effect. For some time diplomats of that country have been supposed to wed only Italians, but exceptions have been made in a number of cases. The story is that Mlle. Charleroux's long residence in Italy, where her father is French representative at the Vatican, facilitated matters.

THE EMINENT French pianist and composer, Robert Casadesus, who appeared at Mrs. Townsend's concert yesterday, travels with 20 pipes. All 20 are at his side when he composes, and he maintains that each is for a particular mood. M. Casadesus prefers to speak French as, he says, he knows only 50 words of English and 10 of German.

Yesterday two other musicians currently in Washington, Jean Jacques Grunewald and Albert Leveque, the latter M. Casadesus' accompanist, lunched with the Swiss Minister, Marc Peter. M. Grunewald is of Swiss origin.

HECTOR BOLITHO, the distinguished English writer and lecturer, arrives today for a visit with Clarence Hewes. He has been on a speaking tour of this country.

Meanwhile, the parties continue to pile up. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Glover will entertain at a cocktail party tomorrow, and the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness of Sant 'Orsola will be dinner hosts that evening. The Hugh D. Auchincloses will give a dinner tonight, and Princess Cantacuzene a tea tomorrow. Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg have postponed until next Monday the tea they were to have given last Sunday for Lauritz Melchior. He will appear at the season's final Townsend musicale that morning. Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis will fete our Ambasador to Brazil and Mrs. Jefferson Caffery at tea February 10. The later is from Chicago, where they are now visiting until early next month.

ANOTHER TEA to take place Wednesday, February 8, is that at which Mrs. C. C. Hartigan will be host. She is a sister of Kathleen Norris, and with her husband, a naval officer, recently returned here to live. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck will entertain for Ambassador and Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson this afternoon, and yesterday Col. and Mrs. John Magruder gave a cocktail party for them.

Mrs. G. R. Howard To Speak Here Today

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard will be entertained at a luncheon next week by Mrs. Rucker Penn, of Danville, Va. The party will follow Mrs. Howard's talk before the Women's Club of that city.

In her talk on Current Topics at the Sulgrave Club this morning at 11:30 o'clock

Soares to Return To Brazilian Post

A. Teixeira Soares, Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, has been ordered to duty at the foreign office in Rio de Janeiro.

Many Notables Give Dinners Before Birthday Balls Start

Mrs. McLean Is Hostess to De Espils, Reeds, Woodrings and Attorney General Murphy; Mrs. Jacob L. Loose Entertains

Many members of Capital society did their bit for the President's Birthday Ball last evening by entertaining at dinner parties before the dances.

Officialdom was well represented at the dinner which Mrs. Edward Beale McLean gave at "Friendship" before taking her guests on to the Gold Plate breakfast at the Carlton. Included in her party were the Argentine envoy and Senora de Espil, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Attorney General Frank Murphy, Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, Senator and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins.

Mrs. Roosevelt And Guests Attend Concert

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend Entertains at Luncheon After Her Musicale

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt attended Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's concert yesterday morning at the Mayflower. Accompanying her were Senora de Lopez, wife of the Ambassador of Colombia; Mme. Horinouchi, wife of the Japanese Ambassador; Mrs. Cordell Hull and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring.

Following the concert, Mrs. Townsend entertained as usual at luncheon in the presidential dining room of the Mayflower for the artists, Mme. Bidu Sayao, soprano; Robert Casadesus, pianist, and Rene LeRoy, flutist.

Guests included the French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin; Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador; the Ambassador of Colombia and Senora de Lopez; the Charge d'Affaires of Brazil and Mme. da Costa Guimaraes; Jacques Truelle, Counselor of the French Embassy; the Naval Attache of the French Embassy, Commander Pierre Benech and Mme. Benech; Jacques Dumaine, First Secretary of the French Embassy; Don Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler, Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, and Senora de Zuberbuhler.

Also, Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Charles D. Alden, Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Mrs. Theodore A. Baldwin, Mrs. C. C. Glover, Mrs. George Thorpe, Miss Mary Randolph, Miss Lolita Dawson, Mme. Robert Casadesus, Mme. Savao, and aboia de Medeiros, Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy.

Still others there were Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Elim O'Shaughnessy, Walter H. Schoellkopf, jr.; Pendleton Turner, Lothrop toddard, Richard Baldwin, Milne Charnley and Guiseppe Danise.

Turkish Envoy Feted by Miss Gage

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun were ranking guests at a luncheon given after the concert by Miss Margaret Delano Gage. Others in the company were the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos; Mme. Naoumoff, wife of the Bulgarian Minister; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster; Vice Admiral and Mrs. Harry P. Huse; the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard; Rear Admiral Harley H. Christy, Gen. John Philip Hill, Clarence Hewes, Mrs. Jennings Hackett and Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege.

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper was hostess to a small group in her box at the morning concert and also at luncheon in the presidential dining room immediately thereafter.

Mrs. Ollie J. James was hostess at luncheon in compliment to Mrs. Jack Bell, of Dallas, Tex., whose late husband was a member of the House of Representatives.

Mrs. Townsend Honors Debutante Daughter

Mrs. Effingham L. Townsend gave a luncheon at the Mayflower for her debutante daughter, Miss Margaret Graham Townsend, who previously had her guests with her in a box at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning concert.

The company included debutantes of this season and a number of post debutantes. The complete list was as follows: Miss Frances Andrews, Miss Sylvia Alexander, Miss Evalyn McLean, Miss Elise Hill, Miss Maisie Howard, Miss Marie Vom Rath, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Miss Eleanor Meem, Miss Ann Wilkinson, Miss Emily Davis, Miss Angela Adams, Miss Caroline Cecil, Miss Eleanor Flood, Miss Agnes Magruder, Miss Jacqueline Meredith, Miss Houston Niller, Miss Alice Tuckerman, Miss Ashby Proctor, Miss Betty Meyers, Miss Nancy Hoskinson, Miss Betty Fischer, Miss Austine McDonnell, Miss Doris Becker and Mrs. Rodgers Barker.

Others luncheon hostesses following the concert were Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. R. H. Fletcher and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman.

Guests of Mrs. Tuckerman were Mrs. Winslow Williams, Mrs. Edward Simpson and Mrs. Alexander Gordon, all of whom motored over from Baltimore that morning for the musicale and were guests of Mrs. Tuckerman in her box.

Mrs. Loose Is Hostess

The Siamese Minister and Mme. Rajamaitri were ranking guests at the dinner which Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose gave at the Shoreham last night before the ball. Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard were also among her guests, who numbered 20.

Another dinner was given at the Shoreham by Representative and Mrs. Richard M. Kleberg, of Texas, whose guests included Mr. and Mrs. James W. Spivey, of Corpus Christi, Tex., the hosts' niece; Miss Lica East, of Kingsville, Tex., a student at Gunston Hall; their daughter, Miss Alice Kleberg, and John Bell, son of Representative and Mrs. C. Jasper Bell.

At another table were Representative and Mrs. Andrew Edmiston, Representative and Mrs. Dow W. Harter, Representative and Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Howard Savage and Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Smith. Another host was the Philippine Commissioner, J. M. Elizalde.

Edgar Morrises Give Dinner

One of the largest dinners was that given by Edgar Morris, vice chairman of the floor committee for the President's Ball, and Mrs. Morris, a member of the ladies' reception committee for the affair. Their dinner, which took place in the Colonial room of the Wardman Park, was in honor of Lieut. Orville Stokes, U. S. A., and Lieut. Carlton R. Adams, U. S. N., aides at the White House.

Others present included Gen. and Mrs. Frederick W. Boschen, Col. and Mrs. Lewis S. Morey, Col. and Mrs. Harrison Brand, jr., Capt. and Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Lewis, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. Onan A. Hydrick, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey L. Jones, Miss Betty Boschen, Miss Ruth Quinn, Miss Viola Drury and Edgar Morris, jr.

With Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Russell for dinner at the Shoreham were Lieut. and Mrs. Charles Benter, Mr. and Mrs. Sefton Darr, Mr. and Mrs. G. Arthur Blakeney, Robert V. Newman and William J. Mahon.

Roy M. North, Deputy Assistant Postmaster General, and Mrs. North chaperoned a group of young people at dinner at the Shoreham and later at the ball. In their party were the Misses Romona Ruth North, Rita Sellers, Connie Quins, Anne Gary and Edgar Lewis.

Rep. Chiperfield's Wife Joins Him Here for Season

Mrs. R. R. Chiperfield, of Canton, Ill., has just joined her husband, Representative Chiperfield, at the Fairfax Hotel for the season.

Representative Chiperfield is a member of the foreign affairs committee and is a son of the former Col. B. M. Chiperfield, who was a member of the House of Representatives for many years, on the Military Affairs Committee.

Miss Perkins to Fete Mrs. Roosevelt Today

Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, will give a luncheon today in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt at her home on California street.

This is another in the series of luncheons given every year by the ladies of the Cabinet for the First Lady.

Betrothed

Harris & Ewing

Miss Taimi Wilhelmina Holm, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. August Holm, of St. Ignace, Mich., announce her engagement to Eugene V. Aber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Aber, of Connersville, Ind.

Sra. de Ghiraldo Hostess at Party For Dolly Corbin

Miss Dolly Corbin, member of the younger set who will leave soon to join her family in New York, was feted at a farewell cocktail party yesterday afternoon by Senora de Ghiraldo, wife of the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy.

The affair took place at Senora de Ghiraldo's apartment, 2400 Sixteenth street northwest, which was decorated with red tulips and peach-colored gladioli. The hostess wore a simply-made black satin gown with a pearl necklace. Among those pouring tea was Senora de Godoy, wife of the Naval Attache of the Embassy.

Senora de Espil, the Ambassador's wife, was present, and others included the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Baroness de Gruben; the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, and the Third Secretary and Mme. Lucet; Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, Anthony de Balasy, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, and Jacques Truelle, Counselor of the French Embassy; Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, and Count and Countess Roberti of the Italian Embassy.

Younger friends of the guest of honor at the party included the Misses Ruth Dove, Elinor Ryan, Marie and Cecilia vom Rath of New York, Eleanor Meem and Junia Culbertson. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spruks, M. and Mme. van Troostenburg de Bruyn and Mme. Babes, wife of the Counselor of the Rumanian legation.

Miss Connolly Fetes James Denbys

Miss Eleanor Connolly gave a small tea yesterday afternoon at her residence in Georgetown for Mr. and Mrs. James Denby, who are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. Charles Denby, of Washington. Mr. Denby is with the State Department and is home on leave from South America. Previously he served in Ireland.

The guests yesterday, who numbered 20, were friends of Mr. and Mrs. Denby from the State Department and residential society.

Mrs. Pulver Is Guest Of Mr. and Mrs. Exnicios

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios entertained at a dinner last night at the 1925 F street Club.

Among their guests was Mrs. George Pulver, who is here from Southern Pines, N. C., for a brief visit with Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell.

French Envoy Entertains At Musicale

Dinner Precedes Program; Embassy Is Beautifully Decorated for Party

Music was the thing last evening at the party given by the French Ambassador, Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin. A number of distinguished musicians in town for Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's concert yesterday, and the White House dinner tonight were present to play for the guests. Then Washington's own Mrs. Edwin Watson, widely known as a pianist under the name of Frances Nash, also contributed to the evening's program.

The embassy on Kalorama Circle was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion. Salmon-colored gladioli were in the library, and in the drawing room were white snapdragons and vases of Easter lilies. Coral-colored carnations mixed with white buddleia were also noted.

Three Artists Are Featured

The musicale took place in the embassy drawing room. Jean Jacques Grunewald, composer and organist, who starred at the musicale given on Sunday by Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, played, as did Rene LeRoy, French flautist, who was accompanied by Margaret Tolson. Mr. LeRoy will play at the dinner which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will give tonight in honor of the Speaker of the House, Representative William Bankhead. Albert Leveque, pianist, was another musician present last evening.

All the artists were present at the dinner which preceded the musicale. Others at dinner were Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Ernest Guy, French consul at Baltimore, and Mme. Guy, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Dr. and Mrs. Hans Kindler, Mrs. Arthur Woods, Mrs. Tracy Dows, and, from the embassy staff, the Military Attache and Mme. Lombard; Jacques Truelle, the Counselor; the newly-arrived Second Secretary, Baron Baeyens, and the Third Secretary and Mme. Lucet.

Many Guests In for Music

Guests who came in later for the musicale, which began at 10:30, included the Charge d'Affaires of Italy and Signora Cosmelli, the Counselor of the Netherlands legation and Countess van Rechteren, Count and Countess Roberti, Mme. Witold Wankowicz, Anthony Rumbold and his mother-in-law, Lady Janet Bailey; Mrs. Lawrence Townsend and Olin Dows.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Commander and Mme. Pierre Benech, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Miller, Mrs. Higgins Chapin, Mrs. Emmons Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tittman, Robert Coe, Count Leone Fumasoni-Biondi, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mrs. Henry C. Rowland and her daughter, Miss Diana Rowland; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. John Magruder and her daughter, Miss Agnes Magruder; Commander and Mrs. Hamilton V. Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken and several others.

Miss Blanca Noel To Become Bride Of Robert Taft, Jr.

Of wide interest to Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Louis W. Noel, of New York, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Blanca Duncan Noel, to Robert Taft, jr., son of Senator and Mrs. Taft, of Cincinnati and Washington.

Miss Noel is a granddaughter of Mrs. William Butler Duncan, of New York, and the late Mr. Duncan. She has studied at the Bradley School here, the Ethel Walker School at Simsbury, Conn., and Bryn Mawr College.

The prospective bridegroom is a grandson of Mrs. William Howard Taft, of Washington, and the late President Taft. He was graduated from the Taft School and is now a senior at Yale.

District P.-T. A. Fights Shift of Headquarters

Local Leaders Challenge Authority Of Order to Move National Office To Chicago Before April 15

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

Proposal to move the headquarters of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, before April 15, from the National Education Association Building here to Chicago, has brought a protest from the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, challenging the authority under which the move is contemplated. Letters have been sent to heads of State parent-teacher organizations throughout the country, to members of the board and executive committee of the national body by the executive board of the District Congress, calling on them to join the protest.

This action was taken, according to Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the District organization, after Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, national president, who was here early last week, failed to reply to a telegram from the District congress. Maryland, Tennessee and Indiana have already indicated their support of the stand of the District Congress.

Notice to the States that the headquarters was to be moved from Washington, where it has been maintained since the P.-T. A. Congress was founded 42 years ago, was sent in the form of a report from the headquarters committee. At the end was a brief motion of the executive board, "that the national office be moved to Chicago before the close of the present fiscal year, the exact time and specific location to be determined by the president of the congress and the special committee on office location."

Would Complete Move Before Convention

The fiscal year ends April 15, a date more than a month in advance of the meeting of the board of managers of the national organization which has responsibility for handling its affairs between conventions. This would mean, according to Mrs. Fry, the move would be made before any action could be taken by the managers.

The headquarters committee, named last May at the Salt Lake City convention of the national congress, was charged with studying the question of changing the headquarters but, according to the statement in the letters sent out by the D. C. Congress, "has back of it only the instructions of the executive committee."

"According to national by-laws, there is no finality to the recommendation of the committee for the change of the headquarters to Chicago until it is approved or disapproved at the next convention of the P.-T. A. Congress in May 1939," says the letter. "There is no record or even a suggestion that the board of managers conferred on the executive committee authority to look into this matter.

"Any attempt on the part of the executive committee to take our headquarters to Chicago or to any other city would be in direct conflict with the action of the board of managers and the congress itself over a period of 42 years and, being a matter of both policy and administration, would be in direct violation of the by-laws."

Committee Composed Of Three Members

The headquarters committee, composed of Francis H. Blake, of Albion, N. Y., chairman; Mrs. James Fitts, of Montgomery, Ala., and Mrs. John E. Hayes, of Twin Falls, Idaho, based its recommendations chiefly on the saving in postage which would be effected and a more economical routing of field service from the office staff. Pointing out the increase in membership and expansion west and south, the report indicates that a centrally located office would give opportunity for contact between the office and a large number of groups throughout the Nation. It states also that the location of the office here, being "off center," has become a "limiting factor in the choice of officers of the congress or an unnecessarily heavy burden on all except leaders in the extreme East."

The protest of the District congress is based primarily on the fact that the action has not been taken in accordance with the provision of the by-laws, says Mrs. Fry. The letter to other State organizations also points out that the Capital is the logical place for an organization "vitally concerned with legislative matters affecting the youth of our country as is ours."

Mrs. Pettengill received the telegram of protest while she was still in Washington last week. She went from here to Worcester, Mass., and from there was to go to Chicago.

Francis Fauntleroy Wed to A. K. Phillips, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. James Dearing Fauntleroy, of Richmond, Va., have announced the marriage of their daughter, Frances Dearing Fauntleroy, to Alexander Keene Phillips, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Phillips, of Washington. The ceremony took place Tuesday, January 24, in Manassas.

After an extended northern trip, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips will make their home in Arlington.

200 Attend Y. W. Meeting

Nearly 200 guests last night attended the annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association, at which new board members were elected. The meeting was held in Barker Hall of the Administration Building following a dinner.

A skit, "The Missing Standard," by Barbara Abell, publicity secretary of the Chicago Y. W. C. A., was presented by a group of members of the board of directors.

Mrs. Luke I. Wilson had the role of the president; Mrs. William Hurd Hill, the industrial girl; Mrs. Albert Atwood, a board member; Miss Grace Johnson, the general secretary; Mrs. Wilson Compton, the business girl; Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, Miss Probe; Mrs. Ben Temple Webster, the elector, and Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, the program secretary.

The Girl Reserves led the devotional services immediately following the dinner and Mrs. William Lee Corbin, as president, discussed the year's work. Miss Emma Hays Heck, assistant treasurer, read the financial report and Miss Elizabeth Haney, general secretary, gave her report.

At the head table were Mrs. Corbin, Mrs. Fred Wright, Miss Louise Davidson, Miss Heck, Miss Mary Burnett, who led the group singing, and Miss Haney.

Members of the board of directors elected for the coming year included Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, Mrs. Frank W. Ballou, Mrs. Rodney Bean, Mrs. Arthur L. Brandon, Mrs. Herbert E. Day, Miss Grace Frysinger, Miss Kathryn G. Heath, Miss Emma Hays Heck, Miss Elizabeth Morrow, Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, Mrs. George B. Woods and Miss Elsa M. Peterson.

Members of the nominating committee were Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, Mrs. Donald Clement, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Waldon Faulkner and Mrs. Wendell Lund.

Julia Warren Wed To H. P. Mealer

Mrs. Kate Warren, of Lanford, Fla., announces the marriage of her daughter, Julia Eugenia Warren, to Herman Palmer Mealer, son of Mrs. Oliver George Mealer and the late Mr. Mealer. The ceremony took place January 7 at the Chevy Chase Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. E. G. Latch officiating.

The couple are residing at 6904 Brookville road, Chevy Chase, Md., after a honeymoon in New York.

Benefit Bridge to Be Given For Providence Hospital

The benefit bridge party to be given next Monday night at the Willard Hotel for Providence Hospital, recalls the history of the institution which was founded in 1861, during the Civil War. It was originally a war hospital to care for wounded but, when the emergency was over, was maintained as one of the city's progressive and well-equipped institutions.

It was the first to have a social service department. This was opened January 14, 1919, when seven rooms were furnished and equipped and the services of two trained social workers engaged. The National Catholic War Council paid the salary of three workers for two years. Mrs. C. R. Astashken, supervisor of the department, has held that position since it was opened. Many people in the neighborhood of D street, between Third and Fourth streets southeast, where it is located, receive food and other necessities as well as medical aid.

Mrs. William O'Donnell is president of the women's auxiliary which is sponsoring the benefit; Mrs. Frank R. Shea and Miss Laurette Martin, vice presidents; Mrs. Casimir Leibell, corresponding secretary; Miss Pauline Flannery, recording secretary, and Sister Gertrude, treasurer. The chairman for the party is Mrs. J. Rozier Biggs.

Patrons and patronesses, headed by Mrs. Roosevelt, include Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, the Ambassador of France, Count Renee de Saint Quentin; the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, the Minister of Colombia and Mme. Miquel Lopez Pumarijo, the Minister of Guatemala and Mme. Recinos, the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, the Minister of El Salvador and Mme. Castro, the Dominican Minister and Mme. ## Federation Sets Radio Party

"To Arm or Not to Arm" will be the subject of a broadcast sponsored by the General Federation of Women's Clubs tomorrow afternoon, for which a radio party will be held at the federation headquarters, 1734 N street northwest.

Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer, radio chairman for the D. C. Federation, at the invitation of Mrs Saidie Orr Dunbar, general federation president, has arranged a gathering there to hear the broadcast and participate in a discussion following it, led by Representative James E. Van Zandt, of Pennsylvania.

Speakers on the radio program from New York will be Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, Norman Thomas and Prof. Gideons. Each State radio chairman has been asked to arrange a party similar to the one here.

D. A. R. Board Members Arrive For Winter Meeting Tomorrow

Mrs. Henry M. Roberts, Jr., President General, And State Regents Confer at Luncheon Today; Dutch-Treat Supper at Mayflower Tonight

Members of the board of management of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution are in Washington for the winter meeting tomorrow at Memorial Continental Hall. Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., of Annapolis, president general, will preside at the sessions, preceded by conferences, some of which were held yesterday.

This morning she will confer with the State regents and, following the usual State regents' luncheon, they will have an informal meeting this afternoon.

Regents here for the meeting include Mrs. Frederick Palmer Latimer, of Connecticut; Mrs. James Hutchison Scott, of Delaware; Mrs. T. C. Maguire, vice regent of Florida; Miss Lillian Chenoweth, regent of the District of Columbia; Mrs. William Harrison Hightower, of Georgia; Mrs. William H. Schlosser, of Indiana; Mrs. Frederick Alfred Wallis, of Kentucky; Mrs. Wilbur Bunnell Blakeslee, of Maryland; Miss Ethel Lane Hersey, of Massachusetts; Mrs. William Carl Geagley, of Michigan; Mrs. Henry Clay Chiles, of Missouri; Mrs. Ralph L. Crockett, of New Hampshire; Mrs. George Duffy, of New York; Mrs. Eugene Norfleet Davis, of North Carolina; Mrs. James F. Donahue, of Ohio; Mrs. Joseph G. Forney, of Pennsylvania; Mrs. John Tillinghast Gardner, of Rhode Island; Mrs. John Logan Marshall, of South Carolina; Mrs. C. A. Swann, of Virginia; Mrs. David E. French, of West Virginia, and Mrs. Helen C. Kimberly Stuart, of Wisconsin.

This evening the members of the board will join in a Dutch treat supper, being arranged at the Mayflower Hotel by Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, and, later, will attend the symphony concert at Constitution Hall.

Among the officers attending are Mrs. John S. Heaume, of Ohio, recording secretary general; Mrs. William Kennedy Herrin, jr., of Mississippi, corresponding secretary general; Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, of Michigan, organizing secretary general; Miss Page Schwarzwalder, of New York, treasurer general; Mrs. Frank Leon Nason, of Massachusetts, registrar general; Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, of Illinois, librarian general; Mrs. Willard Steele, of Tennessee, curator general; Mrs. Victor A. Binford, of Maine, chairman of the committee on the National Historical Magazine; Mrs. Imogen B. Emery, of national defense; Mrs. Samuel James Campbell, Illinois, of approved schools, and Mrs. Sterling Bockoven, of Washington, press relations.

Mrs. Schermerhorn's report on the junior membership of the national society will show a marked increase in membership and an added interest in the junior group within the organization. There are now 300 such groups. They form an important link between the older members and the Children of the American Revolution, ready to join the senior society, she says. Americanism, approved schools, the Helen Pouch scholarship fund and educational program form the major interests of the juniors. They are organized in every State but one and will hold their second junior assembly Tuesday, April 18, during the Continental Congress. Last year, 300 junior attended and this spring many more are expected to be present.

Vice presidents general in addition to Mrs. Haig, who are here, include: Miss Emeline A. Street, of Connecticut; Mrs. Eli Dixson, of Illinois; Mrs. Binford, Mrs. William Henry Belk, of North Carolina, and Mrs. Harper Donelson Sheppard, of Pennsylvania.

Following an all-day session tomorrow, the board members will go to Fredericksburg Thursday to visit Kenmore, the home of Betty Washington Lewis, as guests of Mrs. H. H. Smith and her mother, Mrs. Virginia M. Fleming.

Girl Scout Camp Units to Meet

The camp committees of the Philadelphia and Washington Girl Scout Councils today will hold a joint meeting at Girl Scout Headquarters, 1825 M street northwest, opening at 10:45 a. m. to discuss policies and practices of Girl Scout camping.

Day camps, overnight camps and permanent camps will be included.

Members of the Philadelphia group here for the meeting are Miss Gertrude Gold, director of the Philadelphia camp; Mrs. Leonard Fresculn, chairman of the outdoor committee; Mrs. H. W. Wallomer, chairman of the day camp committee; Mrs. James H. Jones, chairman of the troop camping committee, and Mrs. Harold Pile, chairman of the Indian run committee.

Members of the Washington group include Mrs. J. F. Watson, chairman of the Camp May Flather committee; Mrs. W. M. Kiplinger, chairman of the day camp committee; Mrs. W. R. Chapline, chairman of the overnight camping committee of the board of directors of the local Girl Scout council; Miss Dorothy Davidson, local director, and Miss Florence Jennings, director of Camp May Flather.

New Witnesses Say Hines Saw Schultz at Bar

Night Club Employes Testify Tammany Chief Met Gangster in 1933

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 30.—Two witnesses found by the prosecution since the first trial of James J. Hines, Tammany leader charged with protecting the Dutch Schultz policy racket, testified today in the retrial of Hines that they saw the politician and slain racketeer conferring at the Embassy Club early in 1933. The witnesses, Edward Severi and Theodore Giles, said they were then, respectively, bartender and cashier of the club.

Their testimony that Schultz and Hines sat together several times was the outstanding new evidence presented by District Attorney Dewey.

The suicide yesterday of George Weinberg, star prosecution witness in the first trial, was not mentioned to the jury, though the name of Weinberg walked through the stories of witnesses throughout the day.

Judge Charles C. Nott, jr., called Dewey and Lloyd P. Stryker, chief defense counsel, to the bench to discuss the admissibility of Weinberg's testimony at the last trial, and the question of how the jury was to be informed of his death.

It was agreed no mention should be made in court of the fact Weinberg shot himself to death while under guard of police detectives, until the prosecutor attempts to read the gangster's testimony of last summer into the trial record. Judge Nott will rule on its admissibility then.

'No Surrender,' Spanish Loyalist Leader Declares

Figueras, Spain, Jan. 30.—"We do not intend to surrender, but will fight on to the finish." This is what Alvarez Del Vayo, foreign minister of the Spanish Republic, told John Elliott, special correspondent of The Post, today.

Optimistic and as undaunted as ever, Del Vayo seemed confident the harassed loyalist army would re-form its lines and hold the Province of Gerona, the only province remaining between it and interment in France.

"We have seen worse day," continued Del Vayo, "our position today is admittedly critical, but it was much worse in November, 1936, when Madrid was attacked. Then we did not have an army. Now we have an army, but we have no munitions. But our chief preoccupation at present is the question of refugees. They are congesting the roads to such an extent that it is difficult to bring up badly needed provisions and munitions to the army."

Court Upholds State Use Tax Proposed Here

The United States Supreme Court yesterday upheld the constitutionality of a use tax similar to that proposed for the District, but sales tax opponents immediately pointed out that the decision did not solve the practical difficulty of enforcement.

The Supreme Court's ruling was to uphold a California statute. Colin F. Stam, counsel of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, said the decision eliminated any doubts as to the legality of the tax.

The proposed District use tax would apply the 2 per cent retail sales tax to all purchases in excess of an aggregate of $25 in any one month made outside the National Capital by local residents to escape the tax.

Critics of the sales tax contend District officials could not enforce the use tax without "spying."

Warrings' Second Tax Fraud Trial Starts Tomorrow

Second trial of the Warring brothers on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government of income taxes will begin in District Court tomorrow before Justice Laws.

The first trial, which resulted from the three brothers' alleged activities in a $2,000,000-a-year numbers racket, ended with a hung jury.

Leo A. Rover will again defend Leo and Charles Warring, while Attorneys Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connell will represent Emmitt Warring. Gordon L. R. Sadur, income tax accountant, whom the Government charges showed the Warrings how to defraud the Treasury, will be defended by Former Assistant United States Attorney Irvin Goldstein.

Prosecuting the case will be United States Attorney Pine and Assistant United States Attorney Wilson.

Second Oldest Civil Service Pensioner

Former Slave Recalls Saving Master's Ham From 'Yankees'

Retired U. S. Employe, 99, Tells Story Of Loyalty in Old South; Left in Charge Of Family When His Owner Died in War

A tale of devotion and loyalty rare in these hurried times was unfolded yesterday by Frank U. Whitted, 99-year-old colored man, born in slavery and now the second oldest person on the retirement rolls of the Civil Service Commission.

Retired from the Government Printing Office in 1922, after serving the Government for 28 years, he lives in a trim little house at 1753 Eighth street northwest, with his 76-year-old wife.

He has never worn glasses, appears about 25 years younger than his actual age and with the exception of a sereve cold last summer has not been ill in 40 years.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he was the property of Dr. Osborne Long, Hillsboro, N. C., physician, on whose estate he was born and raised. Dr. Long was the father of five daughters and one son, who was severely wounded at the Battle of Petersburg. The doctor went North to attend his son, became ill and died, leaving his home and family in the care of the young slave.

Whitted chuckled as he said, "We heard the Yankees were coming, so I packed all the gold, silver and china in a barrel, carted it down to the fields in a wheelbarrow and buried it. Next morning, real early, I plowed all around it, and those Yankees never got a thing from my folks.

"We heard that they were partial to hams, so I went to the meathouse and took all the hams out to a big pile of stones that we threw out of the fields when we were plowing. I buried them under the stones so the dogs on the place couldn't get at them, and sure enough, when those soldiers rode up I told them we had sold all our hams, and they didn't even touch the rest of our supplies."

He recalled that his master's eldest daughter, "Miss Maggie" Long, later married Gen. Barringer of the Union Army, and settled in Charlotte.

"I went down there about 15 years ago," he said, "and received a wonderful welcome."

Son of Lincoln's Undertaker to Be Buried Tomorrow

Services for Harvey A. Sands, whose father, Frank P. Sands, was undertaker for the burial of President Lincoln, will be conducted at 2 p. m., tomorrow at his residence, 1346 G street southeast. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Sands died yesterday at 82.

Services Held For Mrs. Rippey

Services for Mrs. Nina S. Rippey, 68, were held yesterday at her home, 116 Wooten avenue, Friendship Heights. Burial was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Rippey, the wife of Charles W. Rippey, District school teacher, died Friday after an apoplectic stroke. She was a past president of the Woman's Club of Friendship Heights and of the Elmira College Club of Washington, and a member of the Church of the Covenant.

Benjamin L. Jaffe, D. C. Decorator, Burial Today

Services for Benjamin L. Jaffe, 70, founder of the New York Decorating Co. here, will be held at 1 p. m. today in the Ohev Sholom Congregation Synagogue, Fifth and I streets northwest, Rabbi Zemach Green and Rabbi Harry Silverstone officiating. Burial will be in Ohev Sholom Cemetery.

Mr. Jaffe died Sunday at his home, 1605 Varnum street northwest.

He was vice president of the Ohev Sholom Congregation and of the Combined Hebrew Congregation.

Mr. Jaffe retired five years ago, and the business is now carried on by his sons, Henry A., Harry R. and Morris Jaffe.

Old Records May Aid Claim Of $450,000 Valley Forge Loan

D. C. Resident Would Help De Haven Heirs Collect $4,000,000 in Principal and Interest; Lender Died Poor, Grave Unmarked

Hope that he might collect more than $4,000,000 as principal and interest on a loan made to the Continental Congress in 1777 for the use of Gen. Washington's army at Valley Forge was expressed yesterday by William H. Graham, a Washingtonian with offices in the Woodward Building at Fifteenth and H streets northwest.

W. H. GRAHAM

Discovery of early papers of the Congress in the course of the general house-cleaning to which Government records are being subjected, Graham said, renewed his former interest in the old claim. Descendants of the original lender were said to have attempted to collect it from time to time ever since the Revolutionary War ended.

His own interest originally was aroused, he added, because his first wife was one of the 200 or 300 presumable heirs of the original lender who would have participated in the huge sum if it were paid.

Family History Tells Story

Graham produced a printed booklet on the De Haven family in substantiation of the claim, as well as correspondence from descendants of the family said to have supplied the funds and supplies for Gen. Washington.

These set forth that Jacob De Haven, who lived near Valley Forge, "among others, being appealed to for aid, nobly responded by advancing the Continental Government $450,000 through Robert Morris, the financier of the Revolution, at the head of the Government finances at the time."

The booklet tells of an effort to collect the claim that was made almost contemporaneously with the Spanish-American War, and another about 1905. Previous efforts had been made shortly after the Revolution, in the 1850s and in the 70s.

Government Couldn't Pay

The record compiled by Howard De Haven Ross, and cited by Graham, reports "The Government acknowledged the Revolutionary loan of Jacob De Haven at the time, and sometime afterward offered to reimburse him in Continental money (script) which he declined to accept because of the enormous depreciation of the currency.

De Haven failed in his efforts to secure a settlement during his lifetime because of the depleted condition of the National Treasury, the Government being unable for many years to meet even the interest on the public debt * * *."

Like Robert Morris, the account of the old debt records, Jacob De Haven died in financial distress "The closing years of Jacob De Haven's life were passed in deep pecuniary embarrassment," it reads, "and he died of a broken heart in the year 1812."

Grave Is Unmarked

His remains lie in the old Swedes' burial ground, although no tomb or monument of any kind marks his resting place. The burying ground mentioned, it is pointed out, is near Swedeland, Pa., adjoining the old De Haven estate.

Whether it would be the intention of the De Haven heirs to place a suitable monument on the grave of the old patriot, should the Government finally discharge the debt claimed, with interest for more than a century, Graham yesterday was not prepared to say. It was a question in his mind whether he would even be entitled to share in the presumptive windfall. Never'heless, he said, he was prepared to help the heirs get theirs.

Returned Chest Gifts Urged For Garfield

GHA Friends Ask Rejected Contributors To Aid Hospital

The citizens committee for medical freedom yesterday urged Community Chest contributors whose conditional pledges of more than $10,000 have been returned, to send their rejected donations to Garfield Hospital.

During the Community Chest funds campaign, approximately 850 contributors complied with the plea of the citizens committee and attached stickers to their pledges making them invalid if the Chest allotted funds to any District hospital discriminating against physicians of Group Health Association.

During the funds drive G. H. A. doctors were banned from using District hospitals. Since then, however, Garfield Hospital has accorded privileges to five G. H. A. practitioners.

Walter Woehlke, committee president, declared yesterday:

"The committee for medical freedom and its sympathizers stand for a square deal for physicians and their patients based on merit alone.

"Garfield Hospital has now issued 'courtesy cards' to five doctors, elsewhere discriminated against, on merit, and thus opened up the prospect of fair consideration for other doctors, regardless of their affiliation with Group Health Association, our local medical co-operative.

"Garfield Hospital can therefore come before the people of Washington with clean hands in asking for financial support. Other hospitals which receive public support through the Chest's hospitalization fund can not."

Embargo Lifters Held Only Sham Backers of Spain

The persistence of the "Lift the Spanish Embargo" groups in the face of recent developments in Spain shows they are playing the "united front" game, Edward J. Heffron, secretary of the Keep the Spanish Embargo Committee, said last night.

Heffron told students and faculty of Catholic University that the "embargo lifters" are more interested in making a show of united front sentiment in this country in the hope of bolstering the sagging morale of the movement in France and Britain, than they are in aiding the loyalist's cause.

"There was at one time some plausible basis for their pretense that they were really interested in the loyalist cause," he said. "But the newspapers today are quoting military observers all over the world as saying that the loyalists haven't a chance.

Rep. Thorkelson Terms Health Plan Unconstitutional

By the Associated Press.

Representative Thorkelson (Republican), Montana, a physician, told the House yesterday President Roosevelt's proposals for an expanded public health program were "not only unconstitutional but will in the end destroy the medical profession and the ambitions of men who have unselfishly given everything within them to aid suffering human kind."

The Montanan described the health proposals as another attempt to "undermine the people's rights."

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, said in a radio talk that under the health legislation, the States would be "free to establish compulsory health insurance" if they chose to do so, but the Federal Government would not require it.

This map embellished with animals was submitted to the Zoning Commission to protest a request for a change in certain areas near the Zoo from residential to commercial. Dorothy Martin, a District employe, points to the disputed areas, which Col. David McCoach and Arno Cammerer, both of the Zoning Commission, inspected yesterday afternoon. The issue will be decided Wednesday. Opponents contend that animals at the Zoo will be the only residents to gain by the change

Dr. O'Malley, Psychiatrist, Dies in Buffalo

Former St. Elizabeths Clinic Director Was 1st Woman to Hold Post

Dr. Mary O'Malley, 72, nationally known psychiatrist, for 30 years clinical director of St. Elizabeths Hospital, died yesterday in Buffalo, N. Y., after a long illness.

DR. O'MALLEY

A native of Medina, N. Y., Dr. O'Malley was educated at the University of Buffalo Medical School, graduating in 1897. She served her internship at Sisters of Charity Hospital in Buffalo and was for seven years on the staff of Binghamton State Hospital for the Insane before coming to St. Elizabeths in 1905, first woman physician to be appointed to the executive staff of a psychiatric hospital.

Dr. O'Malley served as president of the American Medical Women's Association in 1933 and 1934. She was a member of the faculty and on the consulting staff of George Washington University and the consulting staff of Gallinger Hospital.

The author of many articles for the American Medical Journal, Dr. O'Malley was the delegate of the Women's Medical Association to the International Congress of Psychiatry in Geneva in 1928.

Surviving are a brother, John O'Malley, and two sisters, Ann and Margaret O'Malley, all of Buffalo. Funeral services will be held there on Thursday.

Say it with a Clear Skin

OUR SKIN frequently reflects how we feel. In business and social contacts we like our friends to tell us how well we look.

The laity now recognizes—as physicians and scientists have for years—the vital importance of rich, red blood, as the foundation of strength, energy, and a clear healthy skin.

for that tired-let-down feeling

It is well known how worry, overwork and undue strain take their toll of the precious red cells of the blood.

S.S.S. Tonic brings you new strength and vitality by restoring your blood to a healthy state, and its benefits are cumulative and enduring in the absence of an organic trouble.

improves the appetite

Further, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite . . . foods taste better . . . natural digestive juices are stimulated, and finally, the food you eat is of more value . . . a very important step back to health.

Buy and use with complete confidence, and we believe you, like thousands of others, will be enthusiastic in your praise of S.S.S. Tonic for its part in making "you feel like yourself again."

At all drug stores in two sizes. You will find the larger size more economical.

Petworth Area Fights Liquor Sale

Church and School Leaders Protest Additional Permits; Half Back Applicant

Embattled church, school and civic leaders of the Petworth neighborhood crowded the District Building board room yesterday to voice stern opposition to issuance of a license permitting sale of hard liquor by George Walsh, of 829 Upshur street northwest.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board ordered another hearing on the case February 15, but warned that it was interested only in "new evidence."

Yesterday's hearing was attended by 100 citizens, of whom half supported Walsh's application.

Granting of the license would be "an outrage," said the Rev. Frank Steelman, pastor of Petworth Methodist Church, demanding that the board make known "how a neighborhood can protect itself against encroachment of liquor establishments."

Referring to the board's action in issuing a Class C license to Leo J. Rossiter, 4132 Georgia avenue northwest, the cleric said, "We exhausted ourselves in fighting that application. Why wasn't our protest effective?"

George Potter, president of the Petworth Citizens Association, said a majority of the 1,200 members of his organization were opposed to licensing of another liquor dealer in the section.

School Principals Opposed

Also opposing the application were Miss May Bradshaw, principal of Roosevelt High School; Howard B. Safford, principal of Macfarland Junior High School; the Rev. Henry Smith, pastor of the Petworth Baptist Church; the Rev. C. E. Hawthorne, pastor of Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, and Mrs. Willard E. Givens, president of the Macfarland Parent-Teacher Association.

Among numerous property holders testifying to high standards observed by Walsh in exercise of his present license to sell beer and light wine were T. H. Luckett, of 4810 Fifth street northwest, and Joseph A. Fallon, 409 Varnum street northwest.

Protestants Urge Inquiry of Both Sides in Spain

Fourteen protestant leaders, including two college presidents and seven editors of religious publications, yesterday called for "the fullest investigation" of both sides in the Spanish conflict.

Their signed statement said they "marked with regret" failure of Catholic leaders to take up Ambassador de los Rios' invitation to investigate conditions in loyalist Spain.

The signers included: The Rev. Dr. Dan Brummitt, Kansas City, Mo.; Dr. Walter B. Cannon, Cambridge, Mass.; Dr. William Alfred Eddy, Geneva, N. Y.; Dr. Sherwood Eddy, New York, N. Y.; The Rev. Dr. William E. Gilroy, Boston; the Rev. Dr. Lewis O. Hartman, Boston; the Rev. Dr. Paul S. Loinback, Philadelphia; the Rev. Dr. Halford E. Luccock, New Haven, Conn.; the Rev. J. A. MAYNARD MILLER

Rev. Maynard W. Miller Censors All Works Leaving Store; Wife Also Works For Good Will; Ride in Old Jaloppy

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really lots of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

He was reading a detective story, approaching the denouement with eyes aglisten. It was an especially bad moment for an interruption, but the Rev. Maynard W. Miller put down the book without hesitation or resentment.

The interviewer quickly explained his mission: How he had heard that the Goodwill Bookshop, on Pennsylvania avenue, near the Treasury, is operated by an 81-year-old retired minister who drives a 1927 Ford to and from work.

"Come now, there's nothing to write about me," said Mr. Miller. "How did you find out"—he smiled slyly—"how old I was anyway? Besides, it's a Chevrolet."

That broke the ice and before long he was talking about the Custer massacre, a boy's life in the Dakota Territory and now he "censors" the books and magazines on his shelves.

What he didn't have to say, in so many words, was that life still holds plenty of pleasure and interest for an octogenarian. That was made plain by the anticipation with which he greeted each approaching customer and that good old joie de vivre, or whatever it is, in his blue eyes.

Going on 82 (in September), Mr. Miller looks forward to each new day with as much zest as ever. Every morning, except Sunday, he and Mrs. Miller leave their home at 1832 Wisconsin avenue, step into their jaloppy and drive down to Goodwill Industries' headquarters on New Hampshire avenue. There his wife works in the sorting department.

Because parking spaces are less available in the vicinity of his bookshop, he parks the automobile before letting his wife out and takes a street car the rest of the day downtown. At 5 p. m. he locks up, picks up his wife and they drive home together.

All that may sound like the same drab routine all wage-earners go through, but to this former Baptist pastor who preached the Gospel for 35 years each day brings fresh adventures. Not merely the victorious thrills gained from reading the fiction, history and biography books that are donated—"I go through everything, to make sure it is fit for display and sale"—but the fun that goes with sleuthing around for a magazine pattern a woman customer wants, arguing the comparative merits of Browning and Tennyson with a college student, suggesting reading matter for a little girl with the mumps.

Mr. Miller was born in Wisconsin. He was a small boy when his family moved into the Dakota Territory.

"Ours was the first team of horses to cross the Minnesota line into what is now Brookings County, N. Dak.," he says.

The excitement that attended news of the massacre of Gen. Custer and his men at the Little Big Horn in 1876 is still fresh in his memory. Also the dialect of the genial Swede who was the Millers' nearest farm neighbor, 16 miles south.

In 1889 Mr. Miller left the farm to study for the ministry in Washington State. "There wasn't an inch of paving in Seattle or Tacoma," he says.

After three decades as a pastor and Sunday School organizational official in Washington, he came to Washington in the early 1920's. For several years he was a storekeeper in Cherrydale. Then in Vienna, over in Fairfax County. Business reverses came along and the couple moved into Washington.

For a while they conducted a rooming house. Then two years ago last May Mr. Miller was hired by Goodwill Industries. His wife joined up a year later. Last February he opened up the Pennsylvania avenue bookshop and has been there since.

In his charge are some 6,000 volumes and hundreds upon hundreds of magazines, all contributions, which are priced at a nickel up. Receipts go to pay the salaries of physically handicapped and elderly folk on Goodill's pay roll.

"What do I read?" Mr. Miller repeats the question. "Oh, religious, history and psychology books for the most part. Serious reading, that is. But I skim through everything that comes in. Nothing goes on the racks or shelves that is questionable in text or picture."

Three things please him very much. A bibliophile told him his shop is the neatest second-hand book store in the city. A doctor told him his heart is the strongest he'd ever heard in a man his age. The third is the manner in which his 12-year-old automobile performs.

"It runs like a peach," as he puts it.

Two D. C. Women Hurt in Crashes

Two District women were injured in automobile accidents in the Washington area yesterday.

Mrs. Grace Wood, of 1525 T street northwest, suffered a fractured leg, contusions to the left side and internal injuries when struck by a car operated by William Gutshall, 73, of 4517 Iowa avenue northwest, at Sixteenth and T streets, police reported.

Mrs. Katherine Mullins, 526 Fourth street southwest, was admitted to Gallinger Hospital with scalp lacerations after her car collided with the auto of Jerome Schwartz, 25, of 501 South Capitol street, at South Capitol and E streets southwest.

Pepco Return Reduced by $394,085

Residential User To Save $141,503, Commercial Users $252,483 This Year

Savings of $141,503 to residential electricity consumers and a reduction of $252,483 in commercial charges are expected from the Public Utility Commission's ruling today on Potomac Electric Power Co. rates for 1939.

The company yesterday submitted a schedule allocating savings between residential and commercial consumers on an approximate 40-60 scale, respectively. This is based on the proportion of the firm's earnings from each course.

The commission already has ordered a total reduction of $394,085 in charges during the next 12 months. Its ruling on the division of savings between types of users goes into effect tomorrow.

Small commercial consumers will enjoy proportionately larger savings than heavy users, since the projected reductions affect only the first 5,700 kilowatt hours consumed per month.

The new scale maintains the old charge of 3.8 cents for the first 80 kilowatt hours, but provides a rate of 2.3 cents for the next 400 kilowatt hours and 2.1 cents per hour for the next 5,220. On the 1938 schedule, charges were 2.6 cents for the next 170 k. w. h., after the first 80; 2.4 for the following 330 k. w. h., and 2.2 for the subsequent 5,170 k. w. h.

Residential rates in 1939 will be 3.9 cents per k. w. h. for the first 48; 1.7 for the next 80, and 1.5 for all additional energy. The 1938 charges were 3.9 cents for the first 50 k. w. h.; 1.8 for the next 50, and 1.5 for all electricity in excess of 100 k. w. h. per month. The minimum charge would remain 75 cents a month.

Surgeon General To Be Honored By Hygienists

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of United States Public Health Service, will receive the William Freeman Snow award for distinguished service to humanity at the twenty-sixth annual conference of American Social Hygiene Association, Mayflower tomorrow.

Gen. Parran and Mrs. Roosevelt will speak at the luncheon session, to be broadcast to 5,000 similar meetings throughout the country as part of Third National Social Hygiene Day.

Discussion topics will include Government and volunteer agency functions and activities, public information and adult education, youth's part in programs for sex education, preparation for marriage, and family counseling, law enforcement and community protective measures.

Father Tourscher, Noted Catholic Educator, Dies

The Very Rev. Francis Edward Tourscher, O. S. A., professor of Christian Latin literature at the study house of the Augustinian Order at Villanova, Pa., died there suddenly yesterday morning, it was learned last night at Catholic University. He was 69 years old.

Although never associated in an official capacity with the Augustinian College here, Father Tourscher was active in urging the building of the religious house of study, affiliated with Catholic University.

A large delegation from Augustinian College will attend the funeral services at Villanova Friday morning. Every member of the college here had been taught by Father Tourscher during their years of study in the order.

Cold Wave Due to Reach Capital Today

Freeze to Follow Severe Rainstorms; Roads Flooded; Air Travel Halted

Sub-freezing temperature will grip Washington tonight in the path of severe rainstorms which flooded streets yesterday, drowning out automobile motors and bringing air travel to a virtual standstill.

The mercury is expected to reach a low of 34 degrees early this morning and drop steadily during the day, the Weather Bureau reported last night, predicting fair and colder today. The high yesterday was 42 degrees, the low 37.

River Overflows

Surging torrents flooded sections of Rock Creek Park, isolating one woman motorist. Waters of the Anacostia River overflowed at the Peace Cross, Bladensburg, Md., blocking traffic and causing considerable damage to roads and bridges in the vicinity.

Homeward-bound traffic last night on Bladensburg road was rerouted over Rhode Island avenue. The water was almost 2 feet deep. Rescue units in the metropolitan area of Prince Georges County stood by until midnight to meet any emergency. Waters began to recede late last night after threatening to inundate the Dixie Pig and Del Rio barbecue stands near the Peace Cross.

A 300-foot ceiling, 200 feet below minimum for landing, was reported at the airport at 6 p. m. No planes had arrived all day, and only four planes had been able to leave. Incoming planes were being directed to pass up the local landing field entirely.

Tanker Fog Bound

The Weather Bureau reported that 1.84 inches of rain had been recorded by 4 p. m. The Potomac River and its tributaries rose from 1 to slightly more than 2 feet, but were far from the flood stage, it was said.

Travel on the Potomac River also felt the effect of the storm and fog. The nickle-lined motor tanker Dolomite 4, bearing 11,000 barrels of fuel oil, was fog bound at the mouth of the river.

Citizens' Group Hits Magazine Sales Method

Trinidad Association Votes Opposition to 'Block' Distribution

Block sale of magazines in the District was scored last night by the Trinidad Citizens' Association, following a vote of opposition last month to sale of salacious magazines here.

Officers of the association said investigation had revealed that magazine distributors are forced to take the bad magazines with the good. Their resolution also urged that magazines barred from shipment through the mail be barred also from Washington magazine counters.

Capt. Richard Mansfield of the Ninth Police Precinct, told the association increases in the District population made necessary a larger police force. The association asked that the item for 50 additional policemen be replaced in the District budget.

In other resolutions the association opposed increases in gasoline taxes, reduction of the number of taxicabs, and the proposed transfer of the District morgue from Maine avenue southwest to a site near Gallinger Hospital.

Dies Wins 25,000 Copies of Report

The House voted yesterday to print 25,000 copies of the report of the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities.

After Representative Dies conferred with Speaker Bankhead, Majority Leader Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, and Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, of the Rules Committee on his resolution to continue the committee and give it $50,000, Rayburn said it had been determined the Rules Committee would hold a hearing on the resolution today, report it tomorrow and take it up in the House not later than Friday.

$14,000,000 Suit Against Swiss Firm Won by U. S.

The Government yesterday won a $14,000,000 judgment in the Supreme Court against a Swiss corporation, and then prepared immediately to sue in the courts of Switzerland for the money.

The Supreme Court refused to review a lower court judgment favoring the Government.

The Swiss corporation—called Societe Suisse pour Valeur de Metaux—was paid $7,000,000, the Government charged, in fraudulent allowance of a claim, by former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty in 1921. In a counter suit against the company's claim the Government demanded $7,000,000 plus 6 per cent interest from 1921—a total of $14,000,000.

The Justice Department, it was revealed, intends to send attorneys to Switzerland in the next few days. Under Swiss law, an American judgment is recoverable if it can be shown that a Swiss judgment is enforceable in this country.

Motorist Parks, Returns, Finds '39 Licenses Gone

Nathaniel H. Johnson, 947 Twenty-first street northwest, yesterday became the first motorist here to lose his 1939 plates—although officially new plates are not necessary until March 1. He parked his car at Eleventh and E streets northwest—just for a minute. The tags were gone when he returned.

Scientists Produce 200,000,000 Volts Here, In N. Y. and Baltimore by Exploding Atoms

In three American and one European laboratory energies of 200,000,000 volts have been produced by cracking the atom, it was reported here yesterday.

The feat, seen by scientists as a major advance toward releasing the unbounded energy of the atom and welcomed as the first laboratory production of energies rivaling cosmic rays, was developed simultaneously in Washington, New York City, Baltimore, and Copenhagen.

Within the last week, scientists here said, laboratories in each city, working independently, have produced the tremendous energy by the same method—shooting high voltage particles of heavy hydrogen against lithium to produce neutrons, directing the flow of neutrons through a film of uranium oxide powder. In the last stage, from the uranium, heaviest of the elements, comes an occasional explosion, which smashes the uranium atom into two particles, each with an energy of 100,000,000 volts.

Although the explosions are too rare to make the energy practical, scientists expect it to be useful in their study of primary forces, hitherto carried on with cosmic rays.

The job was done at the terrestrial magnetism laboratory of the Carnegie Institution here Saturday, at the close of the scientific conference sponsored by Carnegie and George Washington University. Through the conference the theoretical picture of the atomic crack-ups was discussed, and the release of huge energy seen as a possibility.

After the last session, Dr. Merle Tuve, leading the Carnegie investigation, returned to his laboratory to learn that his assistants, Drs. R. B. Roberts and R. C. Meyer, had turned the possibility into a fact. Dr. L. R. Hafstad and Dr. M. R. Heydenburg had worked with them.

Dr. Tuve called Enrico Fermi, Italian scientist who had been working on the same problem at Columbia University, and Dr. Nils Bohr, who had started similar experiments in Copenhagen, to see the Carnegie atom smasher in action.

It was agreed to keep details secret until the work of all three could be checked against each other.

Yesterday Dr. Tuve and the others each learned that the work already had been checked. What happened at Carnegie Saturday was done at Johns Hopkins the same day, at Columbia by Dr. Fermi's colleagues Wednesday, at Copenhagen two weeks earlier.

Dr. Tuve explained last night the first person to split the uranium atom was a German chemist, Dr. Otto Hahn at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in Berlin. Dr. Hahn found residues of barium, and unable to determine the physical explanation for his results, asked the advise of a former colleague, Dr. Lise Mitner, exiled German scientist in Stockholm, and Dr. R. Frisch, of Copenhagen. They suggested the physical theory to explain Dr. Hahn's results. In turn the tip was passed to Dr. Bohr and Prof. G. Rosenfeld, and from them to Dr. Fermi and the Washington scientists.

Tired Hoyas Fumble Way To Defeat

Comparative Scores Proven False as G. U. Five Succumbs

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 30.—Fordham's aggressive band of basketball opportunists drubbed Georgetown's tired, fumbling team, 43 to 34, tonight on Rose Hill and thereby provided one more proof that comparative scores are not worth the paper on which they are printed.

Two weeks ago Syracuse smothered Fordham, 57 to 22, and last Saturday had to go all out to beat Georgetown on the same floor, 45 to 43. Tonight Georgetown could do nothing right, Fordham uncovered some latent scoring power and so the Hoyas became an "upset" victim.

It was a close if horribly ragged and sloppy game until Fordham settled the issue with an 8-point scoring sortie late in the last period.

Weil Leads Scoring

For a change, someone except Bob Hassmiller led the Ram scoring. Howard Weil, hitting with his peculiar hook shot, sank six field goals and added two free throws for the high count of 14 points. He had timely assistance from Carl Lewis and Red O'Brien, who were always coming through with a goal when it counted most.

Joe Murphy, the Georgetown captain, was the only visitor who could put the ball into the basket, and he did it despite vigorous guarding that at times threatened to decapitate him. He caged three field goals and six foul tries for 12 points. The rest of the Georgetown entourage could not have thrown the leather into the Atlantic Ocean.

Score Tied Three Times

The score was tied three times in the early stages before Fordham finally broke away into a lead that grew to 21 to 17 by intermission. The Rams, making a reasonable percentage of their pop shots while Georgetown was blowing the easiest of openings, kept in the van through the livelier second period. With seven minutes left, Georgetown pulled up to within five points of the home team only to go into complete eclipse as O'Brien and Weil collaborated in an eight-point spurt that sewed up the game.

Georgetown looked like a very tired team and obviously was capable of better ball. But the ball was not rolling for the Hoyas and when they began to press their luck went from bad to worse.

Rinaldi Quint Loses to McLean

McLean quintet earned the most difficult basketball victory in the triple-header played last night in the MacFarland Community Center. It clung to a 1-point lead in the late minutes of a game with Rinaldi Tailors to win, 28-27.

In the opener, Retail Clerks trounced Calvary, 41-32, and Sigma Alpha Kappa furnished the nightcap with a 41-27 whipping of Falls Church. The games were played in MacFarland Junior High gym.

Londos to Meet Wrestling Victor

Jim Londos, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, will meet the winner of Thursday night's bout between Tommy O'Toole, and Chief Little Wolfe, Promoter Joe Turner announced last night.

O'Toole, it will be recalled, lost to Londos in a spectacular struggle at the Arena several weeks ago, losing when an ill-conceived plunge through the ropes rendered him hors d'combat. Until he toppled to the concrete the handsome young Irishman was giving the champion a run for his pay check, and a host of fans believe O'Toole can throw him.

Thursday night's semifinal pits Joe Savoldi, one-time conqueror of Londos, and Nick Campofreda.

Cards Defeat Loyola, 41-35, To End Streak

Catholic U. Chalks Up Season's First Victory in Thriller

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Catholic University's seven-game losing streak hit a snag last night—Loyola University of Baltimore—and Coach Fod Cotton left the gym smiling for the first time this season as the Cards trounced the visitors, 41-35, in the Brookland gym.

Loyola held a 31-30 victory over C. U. in the first game of the season, that started the streak and it was only fitting that it should end it.

It may have been Lionel Stander, Hollywood celebrity appearing currently at a downtown theater, that brought the Cards luck. Stander tossed out the first ball. The game was one of the Paralysis Fund benefits.

From this point Catholic led for 39 of the 40 minutes of play, falling behind at 31 to 29 after a Loyola spurt midway in the final period.

Ambrose, Carrig and White led on offense that sent C. U. ahead, 13 to 4, after eight minutes of play, but the visitors rallied and brought the score to 22 to 20 before Ambrose and Pirro boosted the Redbird advantage to 27 to 20 at half time.

The half-time lead was apparently a miscue as Loyola lost little time in knotting the count at 27-all and 29-all, with high scorer, Ed Borczak, directing the rally. Cummings sent the Baltimoreans ahead, 31 to 29, but here C. U. took time out. Foul goals by Carrig and Pirro tied the score and Carrig, Miller, Pirro and Matikaitis responded with timely and somewhat sensational goals to insure a long-overdue triumph.

Wayne Ambrose, high-scoring ace of the Cotton crew, again lost scoring honors, although he left the game via the personal foul route after four minutes of play in the second half. Carrig was high with nine for the winners, Ambrose tying Pirro with eight each.

Borczak's seven field goals and a foul for 15 points easily topped the losers, Vic Bock, Loyola's sharpshooting guard, left the game with an injured ankle in the second half, playing only a few minutes. Cox and Cummings trailed with eight and six points apiece.

It was the ninth defeat against five wins for the visitors, who are in a current second-place tie in the Maryland Intercollegiate League, and who gave Georgetown two tough battles, although losing both.

Central-Tech Game Features Double-Header

Eastern, Anacostia In Other Half Today In Eastern Gym

Featured by the meeting of Central and Tech in the opener, the fifth interhigh double-header of the cage season takes place today at Eastern gym at 3:30. Eastern and Anacostia, at the top and bottom of the standings, respectively, furnish the nightcap.

Another double bill, involving only the interhigh team, takes place on the Roosevelt floor, where the Rider reserves mix it up with Washington-Lee High in the opener and the first team engages Maryland University's powerful Frosh in the finals.

The twin session was made necessary because of a schedule mixup.

Looking forward to a stand against Woodrow Wilson's zone defense in Friday's public school games, Coach Herman Littman chose to stack his first-stringers against the frosh, whose zone defense has brought them a highly successful season to date. The first game is at 3 p. m.

St. Alban's plays the first of three games this week, meeting Friends School on the Massachusetts avenue court, and Bethesda-Chevy Chase entertained Landon's green-clad basketers.

Last, but by no means least in interest, St. John's city champions of 1938, pick up their Catholic prep schedule in a game with Georgetown Prep in the Johnnie gym, starting at 3:30. St. John's already holds a victory over Gonzaga, the other member of the Catholic Prep triad.

Tom Galleher Sets District Pin Record

Dick Meyer Scores Five Consecutive Strikes, 194 Game, In Record Night

Scores of Duckpin Record

†Strike.
*Spare.

The fame that every duckpin bowler dreams of came to Tom Galleher last night as the 42-year-old member of the Hydrographic team, Navy Department League, marked up an all-time Washington competitive game record of 210 pins at the Arcadia Bowling Alleys.

Galleher's game was an untimely one for District Junior Golf Champion Dick Meyer, as the 18-year-old Dupont Circle team member in the Chevy Chase Commercial game posted a 194. Meyer, although falling 16 pins short of Galleher's record effort, neared local duckpin history by blasting five strikes in succession, in the last five boxes of his game. The Manor Club golfer strated with two spares, followed with a pair of ten boxes and a seven, before the strike spree.

No dub by any stretch of the imgaination, as his 113 league average eloquently attests, Galleher, nevertheless, had to pinch himself to make certain it was true when his unerring aim placed four consecutive "strike" marks on his scoresheet. He thought he was dreaming when a "spare" in the ninth mark sent his total zooming to 194, and hot beads of perspiration broke out on his forehead when another "strike" in the tenth box gave him a grand total of 210.

Surprised Himself

Not nervous at any time during the game, despite the enormity of his score and the realization that a record-breaking performance was within his grasp, Galleher, however, happily admitted he saw bowling balls of all shapes, sizes and colors dancing before his eyes when teammates crowded around to congratulate him on his effort.

"Being a mediocre bowler," he said after the game, "I feel great about that score. I really surprised myself, and had to pinch myself to see if it really was true when I got four strikes in a row."

But the realization that he was nearing a record did not unnerve him in the closing stages of the game. He was very calm, and points to his efforts in the last three boxes, which produced two spares and a strike, as proof of his control. He was still battering the headpin at the finish.

Galleher's record-breaking achievement started modestly enough with a 10-pin fall in the first box. Successive spares prodded his total to 29 and 49 in the second and third boxes, before he spilled the maples for the four strikes. At the end of the seventh box his mark stood at 155.

Off Form Second Game

A spare in the eighth box increased his figures to 174, and another in the ninth pushed it to 194. He was a cinch for a 200-total, but another perfect crack at the pins put him well above that figure, up to his 210 record.

Galleher's form suffered in the second game, which produced an anemic 94 total, but he struck his true stride in the third, finishing with a 416 set. His high game and the set, of course, were all-time records for the Navy Department League.

Galleher's game was responsible for his Hydographic team setting a season's record high game with 635, while Naval Air Station took team set honors with 1,679.

Meyer's 416 set was high by a wide margin in the Chevy Chase Commercial League play, while

'Father' of Basketball Offers Three Improvements

Blames Rules Body And Officials for Present Ills

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 30.—Hardy as the chill, squally Manhattan weather that greeted him, Dr. James Naismith, the originator of basketball, arrived in town today and in a clear, incisive voice which belied his 77 years told a group of coaches, officials and sports writers what could be done to make the game better.

Dr. Naismith, now director emeritus of physical education at the University of Kansas, aimed his criticisms chiefly at officials and the rules body as he pointed out that:

1—The rules today consistently penalize the offensive team.

2—Many officials are not interpreting or enforcing the rules properly.

3—Elimination of the center jump, in addition to penalizing the scoring team, actually slows the game and eliminates many clever plays which would add spice.

Declaring that in his opinion the rules of 1932, if they had placed a penalty on a team which wouldn't go out and get the ball, were just about perfect, Dr. Naismith said the fundamental error of the rules committee was in penalizing the wrong team.

"Basketball," remarked the stocky, ruddy-cheeked doctor with the gray-peppered hair and bobbed mustache, "is not a game of contact, and yet a rules interpretation, which penalizes a defensive man when a dribbler charges into him, makes for rough play.

"I talked over that variety of foul with E. C. Quigley not so many years ago. In the next game he called the foul on the dribbler. The crowd booed, and Quigley didn't do it again. The fans apparently are gainst anything which would handicap the team with a score in prospect."

Swan Slated To Succeed 'Pop' Warner

68-Year-Old Coach Quits Temple Post; Board 'Reluctantly' Accepts Resignation

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.—The name of Fred Swan, former Stanford football star and for the past six years assistant to Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, was mentioned most prominently today in speculation on the successor to the "Old Fox" as head football coach at Temple University.

Warner, 68-year-old gridiron strategist, announced his resignation last night at his home in Palo Alto, Calif. His three-year contract with the Owls would have expired at the end of this year.

Temple University's athletic council, through Director Earl R. Yeomans, said it was "reluctant" to accept Warner's resignation and telegraphed him it was "well satisfied with your efforts and appreciate the contribution you have made to Temple football."

Yeomans said both Swan and Backfield Coach Charles (Chuck) Winterburn, who signed three-year contracts at the same time as Warner, would be retained and that both would receive "deep consideration" for the head position.

A well-informed university source said there was little question Swan would be named and would be permitted to select his own assistants. He added, however, that Winterburn, also a Stanford graduate, was certain to be retained.

Swan is known to have been recommended by Warner. The 35-year-old assistant, who captained the 1926 Stanford team, has been line coach at Temple and served in similar capacity at Colgate and Wisconsin.

"Certainly I'd like the job," Swan said in commenting on the reports.

Yeomans indicated the position might be filled soon.

However, a date for a meeting of the football committee, which would name the coach, is indefinite.

Chairman Charles G. Erny is vacationing in Florida.

Temple, which won three games, lost six and tied one under Warner last season, faces an all-major opponent schedule, including games with Texas Christian, Carnegie Tech and Pittsburgh, this year.

Warner Won't Take Job Unless 'Tiny' Approves

Palo Alto, Calif., Jan. 30 (AP).—Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, who announced his resignation last night as head football coach of Temple University, said today he would consider joining the Stanford coaching staff only with the consent of C. E. (Tiny) Thornhill, present mentor.

Warner, who went to Temple from Stanford six years ago and was succeeded here by Thornhill, his former assistant, criticized what he said was "undue, unauthorized and misleading publicity concerning the possibility of his becoming an advisory coach here.

Tomorrow Deadline For Grid Ticket-Holders

Football fans who bought season tickets to last year's Washington Redskin games will be able to get the same seats if they apply at the Redskin offices before 6 p. m. tomorrow. The Redskins have six home games on the schedule this year. Headquarters are at 739 Ninth street and telephone number is District 6140.

Irish War Veterans Plan Softball Team

Irish War Veterans of the District of Columbia have decided to enter "big time" softball in the District of Columbia this spring.

The Washington Post, No. 17, I. W. V., last week voted to sponsor a team in one of the District of Columbia Softball Association leagues and voted to equip it with green uniforms trimmed in gold. Morris A. Bealle was elected to manage the Irish entry.

Cunningham Runs Again

Philadelphia, Jan. 30 (AP).—Glenn Cunningham, premier miler, will compete in the Pennac Mile, feature of the Penn Athletic Club's second indoor track and field meet on February 10, Lawson W. Robertson, director of the meet, announced today.

27 Nations Challenging For Davis Cup

Three More Than in 1938 Seek Trophy; Europe Lists 20

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 30.—Twenty-seven challenges have already been received for this year's Davis Cup play. The United States Lawn Tennis Association said today this is three more challenges for the cup, won by the United States in 1937 and successfully defended last year, than were received in 1938.

The European zone provided most of the challengers. Twenty nations challenged there, with six, led by the strong Australian team, challenging in the North American zone, and one in the South American zone.

Challenges received to date:

Gonzaga Whips Kendall Green Cagemen, 43-20

Freddy Rice and Councelman Pace Victors' Revenge

After dropping an important contest to St. John's last week, Gonzaga's basketball team wreaked vengeance on the Kendall Green five, 43 to 20, yesterday in the Gonzaga gym.

The first few minutes of the game left no doubt as to the eventual winner, the Purple rolling up a wide margin before Kendall started moving. At the intermission Gonzaga held a 12-to-4 edge, earned by Freddy Rice and Councelman, flashy guards. In the second half Bob Mulvihill joined in the scoring parade, adding 6 points to the Purple's 23-point victory.

Rep. Richards Is Named House Gymnasium Director

Sen. James M. Mead Is Made Honorary Member for His Work

Representative James P. Richards, former president of the South Carolina State College A. A., has been chosen director of the House gymnasium.

Senator James M. Mead was made an honorary member and accorded a vote of thanks for his constructive work in playing the gym on a sound basis.

Representative Lambertson, Kansas, and Representative O'Neal, Kentucky, former Centre College athlete, will assist Representative Richards.

The gymnasium has 67 active members and the membership is expected to reach the 100 mark this year.

Representative Lambertson has played in all Congressional baseball games, and was a member of the winning Republican team in 1933. Representative Richards, as pitcher with his State colleague, Representative Thomas S. McMillan, usually form the battery in partisan games for the Democrats.

Representative O'Neil was a member of a family team, comprising brothers and cousins, that played interstate baseball in the South.

JAMES P. RICHARDS

Peter Henderson, supervisor, was commended for his efficient work.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

(News Item: "St. Louis Cardinals ask waivers on John L. Martin, with no takers.")

That headline is not at all startling until we are reminded that John L. Martin is none other than Pepper Martin for whom baseball writers were busy inventing new superlatives back in October, 1931. In St. Louis they all but deified the swarthy little fellow who spread panic among Connie Mack's Athletics in the World Series eight years ago. Never had the city known such a baseball hero.

POVICH.

Among baseball men, that World Series will forever be known as "the Pepper Martin" series. As such it is easy to identify. "The Wild Horse of the Osage," Grantland Rice tagged Pepper Martin during that hectic week in which he all but won the championship for the Cardinals. It was an apt soubriquet. On the baselines he was absolutely untamed.

Pepper Martin was just another ball player in the Cardinals' line-up when Manager Gabby Street sent his team against the Athletics of Connie Mack. He was rated a fair outfielder, not much of a hitter. He was batting in sixth place, which was the tip-off on the esteem in which he was held. Outfielders ordinarily don't bat as low as sixth.

Came the 2d Game

The Cardinals lost the opening game, 6 to 2, but the outstanding performer on the field was John L. Martin. He didn't dally. On his first trip to the plate he whaled a two-bagger against the rightfield screen, scoring Frankie Frisch. On his next turn at bat, he bashed out a single. By the end of the sixth inning he had been to the plate three times, had made three straight hits. And on that last hit he stole second base.

But Pepper Martin wasn't exactly acclaimed after that game. Other players had made equally sensational debuts in World Series play. Pepper didn't figure to maintain that kind of a pace. He simply had a great day that afternoon.

But came the second game of the World Series, and what should happen but that the hero of that game again is John L. Martin. The Cardinals won it, 2-0, to even the series, and the man who figured in both of those St. Louis runs was Pepper. In the second inning, he was something to watch. He doubled to left, stole third base, and put himself in position to score on an outfield fly, which he did. In the seventh inning, he singled to left and promptly stole second. He scored from third on a bunt by Pitcher Hallahan, beating the throw to the plate with a headlong slide that created so much dust the fans were unable to tell for several seconds whether he was safe or out.

Eastern Fans Intrigued

The Cardinals and Pepper Martin moved to Philadelphia for the third game of the series. By this time the East was more than mildly intrigued by the exploits of the dark, unhandsome chap. Was he a flash in the pan? The betting was that he was just that.

Eastern fans took notice of him for the first time that afternoon of October 5 in Shibe Park as the two teams lined up for the third game of the series. They saw a fellow best described as a tough-looking egg, an oversized chaw of tobacco in his face and wearing a uniform that still carried the grime of his head-first slides at St. Louis. He had cut off the sleeves of his shirt above the elbows and displayed a brawny looking pair of forearms seldom found on a 170-pounder.

The chances are they were only mildly impressed with Pepper Martin that afternoon. The Cardinals won the game, 5 to 2, and Pepper made two hits and scored two runs. One of his blows was a two-bagger. But he didn't treat them to any of his fierce base running. In fact, he didn't attempt to steal a base.

But on the next afternoon, Philadelphia fans were too, too painfully aware of this guy Pepper Martin. The A's won, 3 to 0, behind the pitching of George Earnshaw, but it wasn't Pepper's fault. George Earnshaw that day made a bid to pitch the first no-hit game in world series history. What he did succeed in pitching was a two-hitter. The man who stood between him and the hall of fame was the irrepressible Pepper. Martin made both of the Cardinals' hits that day. And one of them was a double. And he had also stolen a base.

If there were any lingering doubts that Pepper was a spectacular sort of fellow they lingered no longer than the next afternoon, the afternoon of the fifth game. The score of that one was 5 to 1 in favor of the Cardinals, but it was better expressed as "Pepper Martin, 5; Athletics, 1." Pepper was the show. He grabbed for himself the most notable afternoon any player ever had in a World Series.

He drove in the Cardinals' first run with a fly, but he was only warming up. In the sixth inning, he was again at bat with Frisch on base. Even the hostile Philadelphia fans were hoping to see him get on base this time in order to watch him steal. He got on base, but he had no opportunity to make Catcher Mickey Cochrane look bad by stealing. Because this time Pepper Martin hit a home run. He wasn't through, though. He drove out a pair of singles before the game was over.

Before five games of the series had run its course, Pepper had tied the records for most hits in a World Series 12—and most runs batted in in a single game—4. When the series moved back to St. Louis for the sixth and seventh games, admiring citizens of that town toted Pepper to his hotel on their shoulders. He was Presidential timber along the Mississippi.

But that was eight years ago.

Capacity Crowd Expected to See Colonials Battle Toledo Tonight

Chuckovits, Nation's Top Scorer, Here

Rockets Boast a High-Scoring Five; Game at Tech Gym Starts at 8:30

By Jack Munhall.

The first turn-away crowd of the local college season is expected to lay it on the line at Tech Gym tonight to watch George Washington battle Toledo University, the basketball powerhouse that "Chuck" built.

The twin prospects of seeing basketball scoring history pass in review with every basket "Chuck" Chuckovits slips through the hoop plus the Rockets, undoubtedly one of the country's strongest teams, are the magnets which almost certainly will lure 4,000 cash customers through the turnstiles.

With the lanky, tigerish Chucker hot on the trail of Hank Luisetti's all-time record collegiate scoring average, the Rockets have swept to victory in 12 of 14 games, losing only to Ball State on a disputed one-point decision and to Long Island's apparently invincible Blackbirds.

Averages 16½ Points

Chuckovits, despite an "off night" against L. I. U. which held him to 11 points, is currently bombarding the hoops for 16½ points a game, which added to an even higher figure in his junior year has boosted his three-year average to 17.3, or more than one point better than Luisetti's four-year mark of 16.2, which skeptics claimed would never even be equalled.

The Colonials, barely above the .500 level in the midst of a disappointing season, have been drilling for weeks on a defense for the leaping, one-handed shots on which Chuckovits registers most of his baskets, and, according to Coach Bill Reinhart, may surprise that deadpanned young man.

Also, the George Washingtons of late have been showing a greatly improved offense, which rolled up 81 points to give Washington and Lee its first home loss of the campaign, and are prepped for their best effort.

Prospects of an individual scoring duel, no less attractive than the game itself, looms between the Chucker and George Washington's captain and ace forward, Bob Faris, pace-setter among the local point-getters.

Climaxing a spectacular three-year career with the Colonials, Faris, whose speciality is a set shot from the sidelines, which he seldom misses, is leading all District scorers both in total points and average. Consistently getting his quota of baskets no matter how the Colonial team fared, Faris has compiled 98 in eight games for an average of 12.25 per game, a figure slightly higher than Wayne Ambrose's winning percentage last year.

Borum May See Action

The assignment of guarding Chuckovits, success of which probably will decide the game, probably will be given the slick-haired Sid Sulkowitz, best defensive man on the G. W. squad. Rounding out the Colonials' line-up will be George Garber, right forward; Jack Butterworth or Bruce Borum, center, and Auerbach, at right guard.

Borum, a senior reserve who for three years has been threatening to break into the regular line-up may get his chance tonight, because of his excellent performance against Washington and Lee. Inserted in the fray against the Generals when Jack Butterworth turned up with a bad knee after the Army game, Borum delighted Coach Reinhart with his all-around efficiency, especially in retrieving the ball off either backboard.

Toledo's leading stars, other than Chuckovitz whose feats keep them pretty well obscured, are Swihart, high-scoring center, and a big sophomore forward, Carlson, who is credited with setting up many baskets for the Chucker.

The varsity game, starting at 8:30, will be preceded by a preliminary between the George Washington frosh and Dickinson Seminary at 7. Dickinson, a junior college in Williamsburg, Pa., turned out George Lentz, the G. W. trainer, and Staff Cassell, American University court coach.

Line-ups and numbers of the players for the G. W.-Toledo game:

| G. W. U. | Position. | Toledo. |
|---|---|---|
| (21) Faris | F. | Chuckovitz (22) |
| (9) Garber | F. | Carlson (28) |

Heurich League Games Added To Free Bill

Dapper Dan Plays Firemen and F. B. I. Meets Regal Team

Two Heurich Amateur Basketball League games will supplement the show to be offered Washingtonians free of charge at Heurich gymnasium tomorrow night.

In the 9 o'clock American Basketball League feature Heurich Brewers are to oppose the defending champion Jersey Reds.

At 7:30 o'clock D. C. Firemen have been paired with Dapper Dan, while Federal Bureau of Investigation is to engage Regal Clothiers at 10 o'clock.

A collection box will be placed at the entrance to the gymnasium and the audience will be invited to deposit donations which will be turned over to the President's Birthday Fund for the relief of infantile paralysis. Sponsor Chris Heurich emphasizes, however, that donations will be purely voluntary, and by no means compulsory.

Louis (Bozie) Berger, twice a former All-America at the University of Maryland and now utility infielder of the Boston Red Sox, yesterday had donated his services to Heurich Brewers and will appear briefly against the Jersey Reds.

Berger has refused repeated offers to play professional basketball within the past two seasons.

ADD GON—

Most of Kendall Green's points were tallied from near the center of the floor as the invaders found Gonzaga's defense too tight to penetrate. Rice and Councelman shared ponits honors with 10 apiece.

Bill Foley, Veteran Central Coach of Trackmen, Retired

Colorful Career Is Ended; Was Honored By King of England

One of the longest and most colorful sports careers in Washington comes to a close at the end of this week, when Bill Foley, coach of Central High's track team for the past 35 years, leaves the Mount Pleasant School because of ill health to retire to his New England farm.

Foley's place on Central's coaching staff will be taken by Artie Boyd, Eastern High's football coach, according to Dr. Thomas Gosling, of the school public relations department. Boyd will move to Central after duties of the semester are wound up at Eastern. He said last night "I am very glad to go to Central and quite certain I will get along fine."

Meanwhile, Central students and alumni alike joined in regretting the resignation of beloved Bill Foley. The veteran announced his retirement several months ago, to take effect February 1.

Before he came to Central, in 1904, Foley served as track coach at Georgetown University. He came to Georgetown from Vermont, where he settled on his arrival in this country from Ireland, his birthplace. For several years Foley was known throughout the country for his refusal to allow underclassmen to participate in track meets. He felt that the first three years of an athlete's high school career should be spent in training, and only the last in actual competition.

Even before his advent at Georgetown, Foley had gained wide recognition as a track coach. He was head of the Olympic squad that went overseas in 1898 to support the United States' claim to track superiority. While in England he was decorated by the King and Queen for his outstanding achievements in developing young bodies.

The moving of Artie Boyd to Central relieves the overcrowded physical culture department at Eastern. The school still boasts four of the finest athletic directors in the city—Charles (Chief) Guyon, John MacBride, Mike Kelley and Isaac Simons.

Abe Denner Signs For Arena Bout

Abe Denner, elongated New England featherweight, last night was announced as half of the feature attraction Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn is arranging for Monday night's fight card at the Arena. He will appear in an eight-round joust against an opponent yet to be named.

The list of prospective candidates Ahearn is seeking for Denner includes Pete Scalzo, Al Reid and Freddy Miller—all of whom have appeared here. Miller is the one who probably will be accepted.

League Meeting

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Bill Manley, secretary of the International Baseball League, announced tonight that the league's 1939 schedule meeting will be held in New York (Hotel Commodore) Saturday, February 4.

FBI, Delhuds Battle Tonight

The most important game in first half play of the Heurich Basketball League will take place tonight at Heurich gym, where league-leading Federal Bureau of Investigation five tangles with Delaware and Hudson in one-third of a triple-header. Hour Glass and St. Martins, and D. C. Firemen and PWA pair off in the other two contests, the first of which starts at 7:30.

The Delhuds, formerly operating under the name of Regal Clothiers, will be on the short end of the odds, but by no means a cinch to lose. Akky Viana is one of the ace players Delaware and Hudson will bank on for a victory. FBI will depend on the Thompson brothers, Jim and Herb.

Hoyas, Cadets Play Tonight For Fund Aid

Georgetown Quintet Ends North Invasion At West Point

Georgetown University's basketball team concludes its three-day Northern road trip tomorrow, meeting an unusually strong Army team at West Point. Returning home, the Hoyas will rest until next Monday when they resume their chase of the Eastern Basketball Conference title in a clash with West Virginia.

This game, a return engagement between the schools, will be played as a benefit for the Infantile Paralysis Fund, H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown, has announced.

Georgetown defeated the Mountaineers in their first meeting at Morgantown, W. Va.

Maryland's ever-improving quintet, now firmly established as an outstanding contender for the Southern Conference championship, is drilling earnestly for a three-day road trip which will just about decide their chances for the title.

The Terps, second in the conference with five victories in six games, meet Duke Thursday, North Carolina Friday, and North Carolina State on Saturday.

Galleher's 210 Game Features Pin Records

Hangs Up City Mark At Arcadia; Meyer Scores Five Strikes

Stubox team's 595 game and Dupont Circle's 1,683 set were also best for the night.

Only once before did Galleher turn in a game up in the big figures, and that—a 165 effort in a special match—was a far cry from last night's efforts. He admitted he "never had dreamed" he could bowl such a high game.

His brilliant performance shattered the two-year-old record of Tony Defino, who chalked up a 208 game for Vincent's Barbers in the Columbia Heights League, also at Arcadia, in February, 1937. Galleher's mark also is a mere five pins short of the world record hung up by J. Wilson Dillon, at High Point, N. C., November 15, 1937.

There have been innumerable games rolled with higher totals, one of 225 turned in by Astor Clarke a couple of years ago, but never before in actual league competition has any District bowler scaled the heights Galleher attained last night.

FEDERAL MEN'S

Andy Kramer, Senate team in the Federal Men's League at Arcadia, topped the individual scorers with a 159 game and 349 set, while Senate also paced the teams with a 629 game and 1,751 set.

SAUTHERN RAILWAY

Walton House, a member of the Purchaisng team of the Southern Railway Clerks League, at Arcadia, rolled a 150 game but lost set honors to Al Gleason, who cracked out a 374 set. Gleason rolls for RFC. Real Estate posted team honors with 589 and 1,694.

GEORGIA AVENUE

Sanford's upset the league-leading Monument Electric team in the Georgia Avenue League at Silver Spring, two out of three, with Frank Weisner high with a 354 set. Petworth Pharmacy took the odd game from Frank Williams, paced by Earl Knott's 380.

Bob deMansi's 378 set led the Silver Spring Dyeing and Cleaning to a shutout triumph over Colesville Service Station, while the last-place Senate Lunch quintet upset Grotto Grill all three, with F. Miller's 316 best.

MOUNT RAINIER LEAGUE

Wilkin's Coffee won the odd tilt over MTN Market in the Mount Rainier League, with L. Miller's 141—388 best. Larry Fitzgerald led the losers with 142—385, boosting his league's top average.

Bob's Raw Bar won two from White Horse Inn, with J. Garilli's 133—353 high game and set.

TAKOMA CHURCH

Catholic broke the first-place tie in the Takoma Church League at Takoma Alleys with a shutout triumph over Emory, paced by Armond Cyr's 346. Presbyterian No. 2, led by Ralph Ergood's 371 set and Jim Goode's 359 game, won two from Knights, while Al Hooker's 149 game was high as Crusades won all three over Presbyterian No. 1.

TAKOMA LADIES

Federal Lithos tripped the league leading Corr's Sport Shop three games in the Takoma Ladies League at Takoma alleys, led by Joana Vanella's 296 set.

Georgia Tavern won three from Idas Department Store, with Ruth King high for the winners with 306 and Mrs. Simi best for the losers, 283.

JEWELERS LEAGUE

Galt Jeweler's topped the teams in the Jewelers League at Chevy Chase with a 585 game and 1,616 set, while Pearson's 142 game was the best of the night.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Spurgeon's 144 and 387 game and set totals paced the Chamber of Commerce League at Chevy Chase, while high team totals went to Wildcats, with 579 and 1,549.

Marine Barracks Beaten by 'Y,' 58-31

Y. M. C. A. basketers swamped Marine Barracks last night on the Central "Y" court, 58-31, in a Government League basketball game. Bausch, of the victors, and Ware, of Marines, tied for points honors with 12 points apiece. Y. M. C. A. led throughout, ahead 10-6 after one quarter, 22-12 at the half, and 45-14 after three periods.

District Pros Favor Match Play in PGA

FREDDIE McLEOD

Move to Change It Meets With Little Sympathy Here

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The present movement of the Nation's touring golf professionals, who completed their West Coast tour Sunday to change the National P. G. A. championship from match to medal play, finds few sympathizers among the District pros, who think most of the boys are just a little peeved by early beatings in the San Francisco Match Play championship.

The principal trouble with match play, according to several well-known members of the top-ranking pros, is that they are often eliminated in the short 18-hole matches by a guy named Joe, who, according to the big shots, doesn't belong in the same league.

They prefer to take their chances in a medal event, some favoring making the National P. G. A. 108 holes, where they feel sure their tournament experience and games are good enough to leave the little fellows far behind at the pay-off.

McLeod Favors Match

Fred McLeod, Columbia professional, the District's most experienced linksman in this matter, as he has won the open at medal play and been runner-up in the P. G. A. at match, believes the event should be left as it is played at present.

Fred was talking to Bobby Jones on the matter when the Atlantan was at the top of the golfing world, and Jones voiced the opinion that anyone could be beaten at match play in 18 holes. Freddie said, "If I were as good as you, I wouldn't care if they played three-hole matches." McLeod claims the tourney is just going to the man who is "hot" for the week, and should be left at match play, although he thinks a lot of the dissatisfaction lies in the stymie that is played in match events.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, pointed out that the match play event is not as successful from a financial and gallery standpoint, as the Sneads, Sarazens, Hagens and Revoltas may be eliminated the first day, and thus goes the tournament attractions for the remainder of the week. Spencer would prefer the event at 108 holes, medal, if there should be a change.

Larkin Likes Medal

Woodmont Pro Gene Larkin prefers medal play events, personally, but would rather see the P. G. A. at match play. He pointed out that Runyan, present P. G. A. titleholder, who ran up a streak of some 150 holes without missing par, would have also won the tournament at medal, with the scoring pace he was hitting the week at Shawnee. Sammy Snead, favorite in the P. G. A. and finalist, won the 108-hole Westchester Open, over a better field. Larkin cited Runyan's type as a medal play golfer, while he also holds two P. G. A. titles.

Al Treder would prefer to play the tournament at match, although from a gallery standpoint he can see how they prefer medal, as the stars would be in there all week long. If any change, the Manor pro feels all the matches should be at 36 holes, as the "name" players are afraid of the club pros, who really bear down over an 18-hole stretch when they would make the banner lines with a victory over Sammy Snead.

Tony Sylvester, Capital mentor, would rather have it at match play. Tony cites that a bad hole, a seven or eight in medal play, may cost one the tournament, while in match play it only loses the hole.

Jamison Wants Match Play

Al Jamison, Indian Spring professional, makes the vote in the District five out of six, of the pros questioned, for match play tournament, "Jamy" pointing out that the best players can win at 18-holes of dual competition, as well as 36 or more.

The list of P. G. A. champions, over the match play route, are more impressive that the National Open champions, at medal play, with virtually the same field of pros competing in both events. Although casting no reflections on the games of Billy Burke, Tony Manero or Sam Parks, it is hard to visualize them as P. G. A. champions, while they have won the Open. Tom Creavy, who was in a "hot streak" at Syracuse, is probably the least known of the P. G. A. champs, and he defeated Denny Shute, "match play king" in the finals. The champions of the two events since 1916:

Mount Rainier Five Beaten By Wilson

Haycock and Fugler Pace Victors; Losers Grab Early Lead

Woodrow Wilson's basketball squad, hopefully eyeing a title in the interhigh series, showed the extent of its improvement this year with a 38-24 victory over Mount Rainier yesterday in the President gym. It was the second meeting of the teams this season, the Mounts having plastered a defeat on the Wilsonites in their earlier engagement.

The score after one period pointed to another nip-and-tuck battle, for Mount Rainier led 5-4. It took two minutes of the second quarter for Wilson to wipe out that advantage and accumulate an 11-5 edge, and from there in the game was all Wilson's.

Mount Rainier's Jack Glynn, nursing an injured arm, was forced to retire midway of the game, leaving the inexperienced Mounts without one of their most important cogs. "Chuck" O'Connor, lanky forward, turned in a total of 12 points for high point honors, but the effort was not enough.

Responsible for the victory were Wilson's speedy forwards, Tommy Haycock and Bart Fugler, and the eagle-eyed Charley Findley, center. They put the game out of Mount Rainier's reach before the opening of the last period, and then retired to allow a complete new team to take over. Fugler was high point scorer for Wilson, runner-up being Don Maloney, guard.

Badminton Team Named for Play

The four lady racquet wielders who will defend the District's honor in the second annual District Open badminton tournament which starts Friday at the Kensington National Guard Armory will be Kay Baker, Margaret Graham, Mary Ryan and Polly Norment. Announcement of the selections was made yesterday.

Mrs. Baker and Miss Norment will team up for doubles while the others will take part in singles only. The District contingent of men will be Joe Baker, Fred Doyle, Max Farrington and Bill Shreve. There will be two men's doubles teams, Farrington and Baker, local champions pairing in one team and Doyle and Shreve on the other.

A preview to the week-end of badminton warfare will be given tonight at the Y. M. C. A., where Mrs. Baker, local lady's champ, meets the titleholder from Baltimore, Elinore Abbott. The event starts at 8 p. m.

Luisetti and Chuckovits—Here's Your Equal

Chet Jaworski, Star Of Rhode Island State Team, Sets Fast Pace

By Richards Vidmer

New York, Jan. 30.—A year ago Hank Luisetti had the basketball world all agog when he toured the country with the Stanford team and was hailed as the greatest player between two oceans. On the return trip to the coast, his teammates decided to give Hank a party against Duquesne, fed him the ball all evening and he scored 50 points for some sort of a record, Intercollegiate perhaps.

VIDMER.

And a couple of weeks ago, Pick Dehner, a tall, rangy young man from Illinois created a mild sort of stir in this vicinity when he tossed in 25 points against Manhattan for a new college record at Madison Square Garden, tying the all-time mark made by a young man named Tom Evans, of the Wilmerding Y. M. C. A., during the Olympic tryouts in 1936.

Then last week Chuck Chuckovits came in with the Toledo team hailed as a great scorer, but he was held to a mere 11 points by Long Island U. and departed with something of a deflated reputation as far as local fans were concerned.

But all this time a scoring fool has been on the rampage around New England and I respectfully invite your attention to a little bow-legged basket-shooter named Chet Jaworski, of Rhode Island State, and, in fact, to the whole Rhode Island team as long as scoring is being discussed.

Jaworski scored 441 points last year in 21 games for an average of something better than 21 points a game. This year he has scored 266 points in 11 games, averaging better than 24 points a game and with ten more contests in which to toss the ball through the hoop the New England collegiate record he established last season obviously is doomed.

But what is most impressive about Jaworskis scoring record this year is that he has averaged almost as much as the record for the Garden on a single night.

In six of the 11 games his team has played this season Jaworski has equalled or bettered the Garden mark. Once, against Arnold College, he scored 44 points. He made over 30 against both American International and New Hampshire, and he tossed in 25 or 26 against Northeastern, Maine and St. Anselm's in turn.

Of course the opposition Rhode Island has been facing may not be the best that the Eastern College ranks can produce, but you still have to get that ball through the hoop in order to score, and getting it through the hoop is the thing that Frank Keaney, the coach seems to emphasize.

Opposition Hasn't Been Strong; Mainly Nearby Quintets

He frankly admits that he teaches strictly offensive basketball and doesn't bother with any plays. The point that he tries to drive home is to get the ball, shoot as often as possible and miss as small a percentage of shots as you can.

It may not be highly technical basketball, but it gets results and no arena in which Rhode Island has played this season has been large enough to occommodate the crowds that swarm to the games. Which proves the popularity of high scoring in any sport. The New York Yankees attract more people than any other team in baseball, you constantly hear the cry of "we want a touchdown!" at football games, and so it goes.

Nicholas S., Paying $64.70, Wins at Hialeah Park

Two Jockeys Suspended By Stewards

Blacky Bee and Modest Queen Are Beaten Out in Feature Event

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Nicholas S., a failure in four previous attempts confounded the form followers here this afternoon when he won the 6-furlong fifth race, best offering on a featureless program, and paid his comparative few backers $64.70 for a $2 ticket. The gelded son of Supremus drove up on the outside to score by a head in a blanket finish. B. N. Kane's Blacky Bee was second, another head before Snow White Stable's Modest Queen. Apprentice C. Charlton earned his second long shot score of the day astride the victor, he having piloted My Crest home in the third contest at odds of $17.30 for $2.

Failed in Last Race

Nicholas S., in his last start, came up an alleged "good thing," facing other non-winners. He could not make the grade on that occasion. Today he kept close to the pace and completed the journey in 1:13 1-5, after being pushed to the limit.

Learner was a slight favorite over Chance Watch. The former showed one of her old traits. She broke and then quickly ducked in. The filly never could reach contention, while Chance Watch was outrun. Modest Queen made the running by a narrow margin over Blacky Bee, with Nicholas S. nicely rated behind them. The latter responded willingly to Charlton's strong riding when the important test came. Blacky Bee barely beat out Modest Queen.

Jockey C. Critchfield was suspended for five racing days, effective February 1 to February 6, inclusive, for disobedience at the post astride Sure Hour in the second race.

Seabo Also Set Down

The stewards issued their second jockey ruling of the afternoon after the sixth event. They suspended George Seabo 20 racing days, effective Wednesday, February 1 to February 23, inclusive, for repeatedly striking another mount, Blacky Bee, with his whip during the running of the fifth race. Seabo rode Modest Queen in the event.

The long shot Busby outran five other platers over the mile and a half of the seventh race, only to be disqualified after lengthy consideration by the stewards. Busby finished first by a neck and Apprentice Charlton apparently had scored a triple, but Busby's number was taken down and the purse awarded to Foreign Legion. Our Teddy was given the place and Manhattan the show.

Although Foreign Legion was a 3-to-1 favorite, there was some booing of the disqualification. Busby, while leading Foreign Legion in the stretch, blocked the latter, then managed to last long enough to finish first, all to no avail.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAETRAN, $61.70, $25.50, $10.40; HI GOLD, $6.30, $4.00; BALLYHASTE, $6.00.

MAETRAN, away forwardly and racing straight the entire trip, maintained a short lead tenaciously under vigorous pressure the last quarter mile and outlasted HI GOLD. The latter broke well, settled into his stride rapidly and took a short lead in the run out of the chute. He continued gamely when the final test came, but Renick outrode Quintero. BALLYHASTE, slow to settle into his stride, gained rapidly in the final furlong and was wearing the leaders down at the end. LAST ROSE, a forward contender early, faltered in the stretch run. SWIFT SINGER, unruly at the post, went into the air at the start.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start bad from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:31. Off at 2:36½. Winner, C. W. F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLICKERING, $23.60, $9.10, $6.00; WORTHING, $3.80, $3.00; GRAND JESTER, $4.90.

FLICKERING, quickest to begin, displayed the most speed while being rated in front and saving ground the early running. She continued determinedly when placed to pressure and maintained her advantage to the end. WORTHING, a forward contender all the way, made a game bid entering the stretch, but then hung in the final drive. GRAND JESTER broke well, but, slow to find his stride, dropped out of contention the opening quarter mile. He gained steadily on the outside the remainder of the trip and wore down FUMBLE in the last strides. FUMBLE moved up on the inside coming into the stretch, but faltered in the final furlong.

Daily Double—Maetran and Flickering Paid $726.80.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-old fillies. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:03. Winner, Indian Lake Stable's dk. br. f. (3), by Challenger II—Greta II. Trained by R. McIlvain. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46 1-5, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY CREST, $17.30, $5.50, $3.50; HUSKIE QUEEN, $3.50, $3.00; LADY VAL, $4.00.

MY CREST, going forwardly under light restraint, moved up steadily on the outside in the final quarter mile and, closing courageously, wore HUSKIE QUEEN down in the final drive. HUSKIE QUEEN held her opposition safe for speed was rated in front until straightened into the stretch and then opened up a good lead, but faltered suddenly in the last sixteenth mile. LADY VAL slipped through on the inside all the way and finished with good courage under punishment and was gaining at the end. FAIRY VALE, well handled and securing clear passage, had no excuses.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:31. Winner, Valdina Farm's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RANGE DUST, $15.60, $9.10, $4.60; BANNER GIRL, $11.00, $3.80; RACEAWAY, $3.30.

RANGE DUST, going forwardly on the outside the early running, raced RACEAWAY into submission on the stretch turn, drew clear when straightened into the stretch, but was ridden out energetically to maintain his advantage. BANNER GIRL improved her position gradually and was gaining on the winner at the end. RACEAWAY began fast, displayed high speed while saving ground, but faltered when challenged, yet held the others safe. FAST WORK, prominent early, retired in the last quarter mile.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:00. Off at 4:03. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. s. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NICHOLAS S., $64.70, $22.90, $9.60; BLACKY BEE, $8.60, 6.60; MODEST QUEEN, $6.60.

NICHOLAS S., going in improved form, followed the leaders well up under light restraint in the early stages. He closed gamely on the outside when the final test came and outlasted his opponents. BLACKY BEE, a logical factor from the start, made a game effort when placed to a drive, but could not get up. MODEST QUEEN took command at the start, held the field safe for speed and saved ground throughout, but faltered slightly in the stretch run. SHOOTING SCOUT made up ground through the stretch and wore LEARNER down. The latter broke a trifle slowly, but lacked speed and never was a serious threat.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PANORASCOPE, $7.00, $5.80, $3.80; SUN MICA, $6.40, $3.90; CRIUS, $3.70.

PANORASCOPE broke well, saved ground rounding the first turn, followed the leaders under restraint until leaving the backstretch, bettered his position gradually on the outside, wore SUN MICA DOWN and won going away. SUN MICA began fast, showed good speed while being rated and saving ground, but was no match for the winner when challenged. CRIUS, away tardily, made up ground steadily in the final 3 furlongs while on the extreme outside and outlasted JEZREEL. The latter broke from outside of the stalls. She raced into contention rounding the last turn, but faltered from her early effort in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:06. Winner, L. †Disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOREIGN LEGION, $6.00, $2.80, $2.30; OUR TEDDY, $4.10, $2.70; MANHATTAN, $2.70.

BUSBY assumed an easy lead in the run out of the chute, was nicely rated in front and responded gamely under punishment through the stretch, outlasting FOREIGN LEGION. He blocked MANHATTAN at the half-mile pole, for which he was disqualified. FOREIGN LEGION, well up on the outside all the way, made a game effort when placed to a drive and was wearing the winner down at the end. OUR TEDDY, in the thick of contention throughout, held on well when the final issue came, but could not keep pace with the leaders through the stretch. MANHATTAN moved up strongly along the inner rail after going a mile. He was compelled to pull up sharply.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:43. Off at 5:43. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DIAVID, $11.50, $5.20, $4.10; BIG VICTORY, $3.50, $2.90; COLOR SALUTE, $5.80.

DIAVID, steadied off the early pace until midway down the backstretch, moved into contention when called upon, then followed the leaders under restraint to the last furlong. He closed fast when placed to pressure, wore BIG VICTORY down and won going clear. BIG VICTORY went in nearest pursuit of COLOR SALUTE from the start, assumed command through the stretch, but could not stave off DIAVID'S bid. COLOR SALUTE, hustled to the front, showed good speed, but then faltered in the final furlong. LATER ON, well handled, lacked his usual burst of speed when called on entering the stretch.

Swope Suggests 3 Reasons Why Horses Break Down

HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 30.—Too hard tracks, too much speed from starting gates, and too many short-distance races, cause the early breakdown of American horses, in the opinion of Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the New York State Racing Commission.

Swope, in disclosing today the result of a study he made, said he considered English horses which seem to train on to maturer years better than horses in this country.

"Busting" away from the starter in short scrambles where there is no time to steady and snug the horses work havoc with their legs, concluded Swope.

He suggested longer races, some for 2-year-olds, would have a slowing down effect and lengthen the racing life of the American thoroughbred.

Bill Bennings

At the Post

Dear Al:

The Woolford Farm's Lawrin, winner of the 1938 Kentucky Derby and candidate for the $50,000 Widener, is chewing his oats and hay on the left side of his mouth these days. In a workout the other morning, he suffered an accident that cost him his 4-year-old lower right tooth. While the bridle was being taken off, part of the equipment caught in Lawrin's tooth and the colt pulled away from his attendant. Trainer Ben Jones said that the mishap would not effect the training schedule of the speedster, Jockey Wayne Wright has taken over War Admiral. He is appearing in the saddle in all of the Glen Riddle star's workouts. The latest move of the Admiral was a mile in 1:39 1-5 breezing. By the way, that good 3-year-old, Get Off, will go in the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes on February 25. He is a stablemate of War Admiral and has some of his handlers believing that he will take down the Derby this year. Bert White, 68-year-old foreman for Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, is dead. He passed away after a siege of heart trouble. White had been with Fitzsimmons for 18 years and was around the tracks for 45 years. He originally came from the Cape Cod section of Massachusetts. Trainer R. E. Potts hopes he can have Carlisa ready for the Flamingo. The gray flash from the Bomar Stable pulled up lame after winning the Hialeah Stakes. An X-ray revealed a bruised heel. Potts is keeping his fingers crossed with the wish that the injury will not prove a serious one. Carlisa was a surprise winner of her stake and, if she stays in shape, should collect many purses for the Detroit-owned stable this year. Bill Constantine, an assistant starter here, suffered a badly sprained left arm the other day and Tommy Ryan will replace him until he is ready. Clocker Mike is swinging into action again tomorrow. He will play $5 across the board on Billabong in the seventh race. BILL.

First race—Inscolad may be the right one in the day's hop, skip and jump for juvenile maidens. This son of Insco has worked well and could win a heat of this sort. Abbaside, with Steffen up, promises to be prominent. Chief Counsel may go well from the No. 1 position.

Second race—Blue Marvel is the class of this field, and young Charlton will do the booting. I'm going to string along regardless of price. Candy Hero is in high company, but is improving. Blue Grotto should take down a piece of the money.

Third race—Wakita seems the best suited of these 3-year-olds, and with good handling by Jockey Roberts we may do a little cashing on this one. Oak Apple is returning to good form and will be in the thick of contention. Hunter L. has closing speed and could be close.

Fourth race—Mister Major, breaking off the rail and with Arcaro up, may take down the major portion of this purse and I'm going to string along. My Porter and Egress are good now, but those 120-pound assignments may slow them.

Fifth race—Loveday, another Arcaro mount, is likely to be prominent in this company. I believe this one can take it all and I'm voting accordingly. Espania, with Meade up, is a threat. Royal Pam may go well despite the heavy burden.

Sixth race—Roguish Girl appears to be a standout in this event for mares and fillies. She has worked in good fashion and Arcaro will take care of the saddle job. Fjoragina has all her speed and should make the top one step. Pretty Pet is in light.

Seventh race—Billabong may fancy the turf course. Looks as if I'm trying to make it an "Arcaro Day," for the popular Italian-American is aboard this one. Jean C. and Silent Witness for the place and show. If Murphy doesn't ride Big Ned, I'm going to take a flier with him.

Eighth race—Nipponese turned in a sweet second for us at long odds in that last. Seems fit enough to take the chief award in this field. U Demon and Mister Jacko for the other money positions.

Best bet—Blue Marvel.

Mountaineers Eye a Second Temple Victory

Face Owls Friday Night; Will Play Hoyas Next Monday

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 30.—West Virginia University's basketball Mountaineers move into Philadelphia, Pa., Friday night with high hopes of toppling the 1938 conference and national championship Temple Owls for a second time this season. It will mark the start of a three-game trip for the West Virginians with St. John's, of Brooklyn, N. Y., to be met Saturday and Georgetown University the following Monday in Washington.

In their game here a few days ago the West Virginians rode a blistering first-half scoring spree to their first conference victory of the season at Temple's expense. During the first half the Mountaineers outscored the Owls, 29-9, and literally coasted through the closing period, ultimately winning by a 42-33 count.

The Mountaineers, their lineup consisting of 6-footers, have made great improvement since the start of the season and may even surprise the Owls in their own ballwick where the latter have been almost unbeatable for the last few seasons. The kingpins of the West Virginia attack are Homer Brooks and Harry Lothes, both home-State high school products.

To date, West Virginia has won once and lost twice in conference competition. Carnegie Tech and Georgetown were the two teams successful in repulsing the Mountaineers.

The season's record

Homes Lead Building Here In Past Year

Total Is $44,452,000 November Peak Month January Is Lowest

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Leading item in construction activities of the Washington metropolitan area during 1938, was residential building according to H. A. Johns, local manager of the Dodge reports division of F. W. Dodge Corporation, in his analysis for last year. Contracts for erection of residential structures in the local metropolitan area of the District, Arlington and Fairfax counties, Virginia, and Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, Maryland, totaled $44,452,000 last year.

Peak month in the dollar value of residential contracts was November, with $6,422,000. October, the second highest, had an aggregate of $5,325,000. The third month was August, with $4,577,000. Bottom for the year was reached in January, when contracts amounted to $1,319,000. December residential contracts were under those in the same month of 1937, that month's totals being recorded as $2,321,000 in 1938, and $2,679,000 in 1937.

Comparisons

The summary explains that individual totals of residential contracts awarded here in five of the 1938 months were higher than they were in the corresponding 1937 months, but that last year, nonresidential building contracts did not reach the level established in 1937. In the order of importance the months of greatest nonresidential activity were June with $6,113,000, October with $3,253,000, and November with $2,750,000. The lowest contract total was $421,000 recorded for April.

December contracts for nonresidential building, $2,077,000, were 5 per cent ahead of the $1,984,000 awarded in the same month of 1937. Privately owned construction in and near Washington accounted for $54,434,000 of the 1938 contracts. This included a wide margin over $24,25,000, total value of the publicly owned projects.

Heavy engineering construction undertaken by the utilities and the various governmental agencies in 1938 had a total of $9,220,000. In 1937, the corresponding total was $7,799,000. The summary concludes with a grouping of all types of construction. The contract total for 1938 was $78,859,000.

A. B. A. Forecast

A generally optimistic forecast for business and recovery is noted in the monthly survey of Banking, official publication of the American Bankers Association, the advance from the stagnation of last summer having been uninterrupted, according to the publication. Wholesale markets reflect buying for spring at a volume well in excess of last year and all recent national meetings of retailers, wholesalers and business groups generally showing a cheerful outlook. While most of the forecasting is conservative, there is general opinion that the trend is upward.

The survey reports construction awards as being "chiefly responsible for the high points being reached by most indexes. In the march toward recovery the building industry continues aggressively out in front." The magazine's cross section index of business, obtained from a poll of 2,500 bank directors and business men in all sections of the country.

'Circle' Fares Let Travelers Visit Both Big Fairs

Sensationally low "grand-circle" railroad fares, affording an opportunity to see both the New York and the San Francisco World's fairs, as well as to visit many points of scenic interest throughout the country, will be inaugurated on April 28, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, announced yesterday. The new fares are the first of their kind and are substantially lower than standard rates.

Under this plan an individual can purchase a grand-circle coach ticket for $90, or a first-class ticket for $135 plus the regular sleeping or parlor car charges. Purchasers of grand-circle tickets may travel from any place in the United States to the World's Fair at New york, thence to the Golden Gate International Exposition at San Francisco and back to the starting point, without retracing of routes. Or the traveler may go to the Pacific Coast first, thence to New York and return to the starting point. Moreover, without exra cost, a choice may be made of many attractive routes, and stop-over privileges at all points will be allowed in both directions. Baggage will be checked as usual.

Gas Light Net Higher in Year, Off for Month

Larger Sales of Gas; Income Tax Cut Decreases Expense

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed with the Public Utilities Commission shows operating revenues of $840,026 for December, 1938, compared with $831,082 for December a year ago, an increase of $8,944 as a result of the greater volume of gas sold.

Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills, amounted to $560,314 in December, 1938, compared to $567,682 in December, 1937, a decrease of $7,368 occasioned by a saving in income tax as a result of charges in connection with bond refinancing

The net operating revenue was $279,712, an increase of $16,312. Non-operating revenues increased $4,813. Interest and amortization amounted to $108,438 this December compared with $79,230 in December, 1937, an increase of $29,208 due principally to interest charges continuing on the 5 per cent bonds during the call period while interest on the new 4's was also accruing. The net result for the month was a net income of $187,121 or $8,083 less than that for December, 1937.

The December earnings bring the net income for the 12 months ended December 31, 1938, up to $986,460 compared with $761,426 for the same period last year.

Gas sales for the month of December, 1938, were 1,251,377 mcf or an increase of 30,188 mcf. There were 154,049 meters in service on December 31, 1938, a gain of 4,595 over the same date last year.

C. & P. Tel Co.

Operating revenues of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for December were $1,008,088, and operating expenses for the same period were $726,644, according to Charles A. Robinson, general manager. In December, 1937, operating revenues were $971,685, and operating expenses were $715,069. Taxes for the month were $97,534, or 16,781 more than in December, 1937, and interest deductions amounted to $39,848, resulting in a balance before dividend of $144,456, as compared with $152,336 a year ago.

There were 239,688 telephones in service on December 31, 1938, which was an increase of 1,361 telephones over the previous month.

Prices Turn to Strength in Light Trading Hitler Speech Removes Apprehensions German, Italian, Japanese Bonds Firm

New York, Jan. 30.—The firmness of the preceding two days turned to moderate strength in today's stock market even though traders generally did only a small amount of trading. A gain of 0.89 point in the composite average carried virtually every group higher, including the public utilities which sustained a legal defeat when the Supreme Court handed down its long-awaited TVA decision. Even more important than this decision, however, was the scheduled speech of Adolf Hitler and the fact that this didn't start until just after 2 o'clock doubtless explains why trading was so dull, amounting to only 789,220 shares.

Excerpts of the speech came to the street piece by piece over the news tickers and throughout the financial district traders, bankers and brokers were listening on the radio to the words of the German ruler, or to the English translation. The speech was not carried in full but that part which was heard during the first hour, which was the final hour of trading, and the accounts carried in the press, convinced investors that they had been too apprehensive, at least for the moment.

Consequently the moderate strength of the early hours was increased and the list closed with gains of 1 to 4 points in a number of the speculative favorites. After the close of the New York market the buying was continued in Eastern stocks traded in on the West Coast markets and additional gains of fractions to a point were scored there.

While the speech and the TVA decision were the matters of greatest concern to the financial district, there were some favorable statistical information on domestic affairs which did their bit for the rise. Steel operations, for instance, improved to a degree which exceeded expectations. The rate is placed at 52.8 per cent of capacity, a gain of 1.6 points over a week ago.

Supreme Court and TVA

Had it not been for the scheduled address of the German Fuehrer it is probably true that more attention would have been paid to the Supreme Court's decision on TVA, which has been awaited for months. But today, while it caused a ripple of selling, the utilities soon regained their losses and moved along with the balance of the list. Investors have come to realize that the Government is in the power business to stay and that it will not be restricted by legal means. Whether Congress will continue to throw money into this particular field of enterprise is another matter.

The action of the tribunal flashed a green light for the Federal Government's power construction program but it should be realized that in dismissing the suit brought by 14 private companies it rendered no opinion on the constitutionality of basic issues involved. What it did rule was that the companies did not have "standing to maintain the suit." This amounted to a dismissal on technical grounds and is not surprising in view of the manner in which the court is being reconstituted.

Utilities were well represented among the day's most active stocks. Commonwealth & Southern being the only active one to lose ground. North American, whose stockholders approved a plan of corporate simplification, involving a $105,000,000 financing operation, was the second most active stock for the day and advanced ⅞ point. Columbia Gas, Consolidated Edison and United Corporation made fractional gains. Aviation stocks were strong, apparently on the assumption that no matter what Hitler may say, the nations of the world will continue their armament rush. Most active was Curtiss-Wright, up ½, and then Sperry, up 2¾.

Bonds Firm, Dealings Light

With the exception of a brief flurry of selling in utility bonds on announcement of the Supreme Court's decision in the TVA case, bond dealings today were dull with turnover shrinking to small proportions.

Both before and during the Hitler speech there was a firm tone in Italian and Japanese as well as German obligations and last prices in most of these issues were around the highs for the day.

Postal Telegraph bonds were slightly more active at firm prices on the court's approval, as equitable, of the company's proposed reorganization plan. Irregularity was observed in some of the second-grade carrier liens but high grades were steady along with corporate issues. Losses generally were small in such utilities as were offered. The decision had been generally expected to be in favor of the Government.

The Treasury bond section was strong but volume was light. The announcement that allotments on the recent offering of United States Housing notes had been made on a basis of 4 per cent of subscriptions was followed by dealing in the notes in over-the-counter transactions at ¾ per cent over par.

Commercial Loans Continue Decline

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board said today commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks continued to decline in the week ended January 25.

Banks in 101 leading cities reported their business loans dropped $24,000,000 to a total of $3,765,000,000 in the week. New York City banks, however, were responsible for $17,000,000 of the decline.

Danish Court Rules Against Gold Clause

Copenhagen, Jan. 30 (AP).—The supreme court of Denmark ruled today that interest on Danish government loans issued in the United States is not payable in gold.

Denmark authorized the subscription of loans of $30,000,000 in 1925 and of $55,000,000 in 1928 in the United States. The 5½ per cent interest on the first and the 4½ per cent on the second were payable in gold. All the bonds were sold in the United States except about $2,500,000 worth, which were purchased in the Netherlands.

Retail Advertising Edges Above Year Ago

Chicago, Jan. 30.—For the week ended January 21, retail newspaper advertising in 80 major cities was almost 1 per cent above the corresponding week of 1938, Advertising Age, reported today.

During that week newspapers in the reporting cities carried a total of 16,127,569 lines of retail display advertising, compared with 16,032,364 lines in the corresponding week of 1938, a gain of 95,205 lines, or 0.7 per cent.

DuPont 1938 Net $3.79 on Common

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., in a preliminary statement for 1938, today reported consolidated net earnings of $50,190,827 after charges, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $3.79 a common share.

According to financial manuals indicate the company's 1937 earnings totaled $88,031,943, or $7.25 a common share.

Milk Is Chief Item In Farm Cash Income

New York, Jan. 30.—Milk led all products as the largest single source of farm cash income in 1938 with a total of $1,430,000,000. This was only 6.5 per cent less than the 1937 figure of $1,530,000,000 according to the Milk Industry Foundation today.

"All farm cash income dropped 12.9 per cent, Government reports show, from $8,208,000,000 in 1937 to $7,150,000,000 in 1938, excluding Government payments," the statement said.

Business Failures

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Business failures in the United States during the week ended January 26 rose to the highest point in nearly a year at 301, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. In the preceding week they totaled 292 and a year ago 334.

U. S. Treasury Receipts

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury January 27: Receipts, $10,804,284.63; expenditures, $20,424,771.03; net balance, $2,939,997,921.96, including $2,298,772,374.89 working balance; customs receipts for the month $22,159,637.11.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $3,192,328,576.85; expenditures, 5,186,144,334.93, including $1,740,295,465.92 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures, $1,963,815,758.08; gross debt, $39,613,978,431.29, an increase of $2,255,177.53 above the previous day; gold assets, $14,643,643,883.96.

Wheat Rally In Last Hour Offsets Drop

First Time in 90 Years Bad Weather Delays Opening of Board

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—The wheat market reflected international nervousness today prior to the address of Chancellor Hitler, but closed with prices only a shade lower than Saturday.

Early declines amounting to as much as ⅞ cent were wiped out by a rally of a full cent, most of which was scored in the final hour. Most of the opening selling was in sympathy with declines of 1 to 1¼ at Liverpool and when this was exhausted the market rebounded more because of lack of further pressure than anything else. Buying was slow as most dealers awaited a cue from abroad.

For the first time in its history of more than 90 years the Board of Trade's opening was delayed because of bad weather. Heavy snow in Chicago resulted in the unprecedented delay and the market did not open until 11 a. m., an hour and a half later than usual. Crippled transportation facilities delayed most traders and clerks and inspection of carlot arrivals of grain.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¼ lower than Saturday; May, 69⅝@69¾; July, 69½@69⅝. Corn, ⅛ off to ¼ up; May, 51⅜; July, 52¼@52⅜. Oats, unchanged to ¼ down. Rye, unchanged to ⅛ higher. Lard, unchanged to 3 up.

New Crop Cotton Futures Advance; Old Crops Lower

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—New crop cotton contracts were given a moderate lift today coincident with reports from Washington that Agricultural Department officials and cotton belt Senators were considering proposals involving a return to growers of several million bales of the fiber held in the Government loan account. At the same time old crop positions weakened under switching and liquidation. New crop months closed 4 points higher in contrast with losses of 3 to 10 points in March, May and July.

Despite its narrow swings and generally listless action for several months, the market really has been on edge in anticipation of important shifts in policy at Washington in handling the cotton program.

Cottonseed Oil

The cottonseed oil market put a bullish interpretation today on Washington reports the Government planned to distribute 4,000,000 bales of cotton in return for an acreage cut next year.

Commission house demand left closing prices 4 to 6 points net higher on sales of 60 lots.

March closed 6.95@6.97; May, 7.06@7.11; July, 7.18; September, 7.23@7.24.

Employment Gains During December

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—The National Industrial Conference Board estimated today that 44,306,000 persons were employed in the United States in December, a gain of .3 per cent from November. As the employed total rose by 174,000 workers, the unemployed rolls were reduced by 76,000 to 9,952,000. The difference in the figures indicates new manpower available for employment.

Since the conference estimates include in its "unemployed" figures 3,398,000 workers in the Government emergency labor force, the men and women at work in the United States equalled in December the 47,885,000 employed in 1929 when only 469,000 persons were unemployed.

F. B. Turck Resigns From Am. Radiator

American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation today announced the resignation of Fenton B. Turck, jr., as vice president in order to devote his entire time to Holland-American affairs. Mr. Turck has been with the company over 15 years, having started as a molder in the company's Bayonne, N. J., plant in 1923, following his graduation from Yale, and becoming vice president of the American Radiator Company in 1928 at the age of 26.

Mr. Turck is president of the Holland House Corporation of the Netherlands, a trustee of the Holland Society of New York, and president of the Netherlands-American Syndicate. He will sail for Amsterdam on Saturday.

Warner Champion Adder

John Warner, Union Trust Co., was winner for the second consecutive time in the recent adding machine contest sponsored by Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking. Louis Corea, Riggs National Bank, was second, and Jack Ahalt, City Bank, third. These annual competitions are under supervision of Burroughs Adding Machine Co., each contestant being required to run 150 items correctly. Mr. Warner ran the list in 2 minutes 9½ seconds, and after the contest in 2 minutes flat. Mr. Corea's time was 2 minutes 47½ seconds, and Mr. Ahalts but 10 second slower.

D. C. Fire Insurance

It is reported by Washington agents that 1938 will go on record as being a satisfactory one for mutual fire insurance companies and their policyholders. The 2,423 mutual fire insurance companies in the United States closed the year with an all-time record peak for insurance in force. Premiums on this insurance were equal to or probably a trifle in excess of the record high mark of 1937. Agents report that loss ratios should be about the same as the previous year with perhaps a slight increase due partly to the New England windstorm.

Most of the legal reserve mutuals seem to favor a revision and standardization of fire policies now employed, believing they could be broadened and at the same time simplified.

One of Frankfurter's Professors Attends Ceremony

Associated Press Photos.

Postlude

If a poll of the audience had been taken to determine the relative popularity of the three artists presented by Mrs. Lawrence Townsend yesterday morning, one surmises that priority would have been awarded to Bidu Sayao. Such a verdict would have accorded with my own preference between the Brazilian soprano and her two French colleagues. The indubitable charm of her singing is compounded of an engaging personality, clarity of tone, expertise in vocal technique, and refinement of musicianship. In delicacy of phrasing, intonational finesse and rhythmic precision she shows an admirable control.

Her share of the program brought her before the audience thrice. In her first group were Marcantonio Cesti's "La Farfalletta" and Adolphe Adam's adaptation for voice, flute and piano of Mozart's piano variations on "Ah! vous diral-je maman." This sparkling piece, exacting in floriture, was introduced by Adam in his opera, "Toreador," and is occasionally used by sopranos in the lesson scene of Rossini's "Barber of Seville." Few can handle it as gracefully and easily as Bidu Sayao.

Her second group contained Liszt's "Comment disaient-ils," Omer Letorey's "La Fontaine de Caraouet," Arturo Buzzi-Peccia's "Colombetta," Landon Ronald's "Down in the Forest," and Vene's "The Rats." As an extra number, she offered in compliment to her sponsor, Natalie Townsend's "Chanson." At her final appearance she was heard in the aria, "Profitons bien de la jeunesse," from Massenet's "Manon," and Gounod's "Quand tu chantes."

Robert Casadesus and Rene Le Roy contributed to the recital two sonatas for flute and piano, the one by Handel and the other by Mr. Casadesus. The modern work, skillfully written for both instruments was distinguished by a consistent avoidance of tonality which held the auditor in a curious state of suspension. It was not until the last movement that the ear could come to rest upon a tonic chord. In both sonatas there was a good blending of crisp piano tone and the dulcet fluency of Mr. Le Roy's flute notes

In a solo group, Mr. Casadesus presented Chopin's G minor ballade and three of Debussy's preludes: "La Cathedrale Engloutie," "General Levin" and "Feux d'Artifice." His style of playing is virile and emphatic, although he commands a fine shading of tone when he chooses to employ it. Bravura forcefulness usually predominates over poetic interpretation, however, and the general impression left by his digital proficiency is that of a hard brilliance.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Jan. 30 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Domestic wools were very firm today on the Boston wool market at quotations prevailing late last week.

Sales were being closed right up to the end of last week, and buyers still were showing an interest in further quantities. Recent sales were largely on fine territory wools, but coarser grades were getting some business in fleece and territory lines.

Bids and Proposals

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals will be received by The County School Board of Arlington County, Va., at the Office of Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, Arlington, Va., until 2:00 P. M., Tuesday, February 7, 1939, for the construction of Arlington Junior High School, consisting of 12 classrooms, auditorium, cafeteria, library, plumbing, heating and electrical work, 2-story brick construction, at which time and place they will be publicly opened and read.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"In the tantalizing game of bridge it does happen that one has to contend with some rather irksome persons, as well as 'fretful' cards," writes H. C. A., who offers a hand in which one of these "rather irksome persons" was properly chastened.

He continues: "I happened to be visiting the Queens Bridge Club in Flushing, one evening, where I had the extreme pleasure of seeing one of these birds get his wings clipped.

"This player has an unpleasant habit of flaunting his alleged skill throughout the session, continually chatting about his 'deductions,' his card 'readings,' and so on; you know the kind.

"I had just cut out of the game and was enjoying the atmosphere of the Queens Club—it was my first visit—when I was recalled to the table by a loud double from his direction. He was sitting South."

The hand and the bidding are given in today's box. Five diamonds was made easily, declarer gaining the lead after the first trick by trumping the king of hearts, ruffing a low club in dummy and conceding a trump trick to South. East lost but a club and a diamond.

J. B. B. submits another exciting hand. Upon this one a small slam and, with a favorable opening lead and a squeeze play, a grand slam can be made. But played at rubber bridge, a part score of 60 points stands in the way of reaching a slam through the bidding.

"What is South's best response to insure arriving at six?" asks J. B. B. The cards:

♣ Q 4

WEST — NORTH — EAST — SOUTH

♠ K 9 4
♡ A K J 8
◇ K 9 7 3
♣ A 6

The bidding:

| West | North | East | South |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | Pass | 5 ◇ | Dbl. |
| Pass | Pass | Pass | |

Opening lead: A ♣

"The hand makes seven hearts with a diamond lead and the ten coming up, if either opponent holds both the diamond queen guarded and the king of clubs" says J. B. B.

"The North hand has a reasonable enough opening bid of one heart. South's response depends upon how North will interpret it with a 60-point partial. If North will take three hearts by South to mean a slam invitation and not think that in saying four hearts he is overbidding his hand, six can be reached. However, if it is known that North will not respond to three hearts without a more aggressive hand or one with more primary values, South must take the bull by the horns and leap to six hearts."

Taking no chances, we advocate a bid of six hearts immediately on the South cards or else a forcing bid (for one round in this situation) of three diamonds. As North's opening is not overly strong, he will undoubtedly pass South's jump to six. A bid of seven offers a gambler's chance, but theoretically it is a bad risk.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

THE President said in his statement concerning exceptions under the June 24 executive order might be released Monday; but civil service officials said on Monday that the more likely date for the statement is Tuesday (today). The statement on exceptions will be a fairly lengthy document; and if enough statistical work is done the exact number of persons who will get status through the June orders may be arrived at. The commission had guessed at 81,000. But the guess was made without precise knowledge of how many jobs the President would except under new schedules A and B. It still seems that the matter will be postponed in the case of the lawyers—and it is certain that Chinese, Japanese and Hindu translators will be excepted from status. Others interested must await the word from the White House.

RANDOM WRITING: A letter from pretty Jean Charters, research assistant to the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada, who says in part: "From the distant province of Chicago, I watched your contest for 'Miss Civil Service' and think it was a grand idea. It put a little bit of zip in the usual routine celebrations of National Civil Service Week . . . Miss Helen E. Walmsley retires from the Government service after completing nearly 32 years in the Navy Department. She began her career as a telephone operator on August 20, 1907, and transferred to the Record Division, Secretary's office, February 20, 1917.

THE 33,000 employes who work at the Veterans' Administration hospitals and facilities may have been heartened by the asked-for $1,000,000 in the 1940 budget to provide an eight-hour day. But the thought has occurred that the $1,000,000 may be an insufficient sum, and Gen. Hines has been asked by the U. F. W. A. to make an investigation to determine the exact costs of instituting the eight-hour work period in the hospitals and facilities. The men and women who are working 65 and 70 hour weeks will be profoundly interested in his inquiry.

MRS. WINFREE (room 1041 South Agriculture Building), who undertakes worthwhile efforts on behalf of the needy, now wants contributions of shoes, size 7½, and clothing, size 3, for a baby, which she will take to a distressed family.

CHAIRMAN McNINCH'S report on reorganization of the FCC, scheduled to reach Senator Wheeler today, won't get to him until Wednesday (as it looks at this writing), and when it does get there it will be plain that Commissioner McNinch had something to say.

PUBLIC Health Service shiftings: Second-year Dental Interne John F. Cody is relieved from duty at Washington and assigned to Hagerstown, Md., to establish headquarters in connection with child hygiene studies. Dr. Curtis Glenn Southard is appointed and commissioned as Assistant Surgeon, Reserve Corps, United States Public Health Service, for active duty at the Health Service Dispensary, Washington. # Bob Burns Says—

Last week I had a nearsighted actor friend of mine visitin' me from the East. He's been tryin' his darnedest, for years, to hit it big on the stage an' get his name up on the electric signs of Broadway. Well, one night I took him up on Lookout Mountain to show him the lights of Hollywood an' Los Angeles. You can drive your car right near the precipice in the dark an' get out an' stand there, lookin' off into space at the millions of red an' green an' purple an' orange neon lights blinkin' down below—a reg'lar color-blind man's nightmare!

My friend got so excited he grabbed my arm an' took a step ahead an' stepped right off the cliff. Luckily, I jerked him back just in time to keep us both from doin' a high dive. "Bill, for gosh sake!" says I. "Didn't you see you was near the edge?" "The edge!" he says to me. "You mean to say there ain't no fence up here or nothin' to keep a man from fallin' off?" "No," says I. "Where you almost stepped off is a fifteen-hundred-foot drop to where you see them lights below!" "Good grief!" he gasps, and his knees buckled under him. "Well, Bob—do you know somethin'? In all my theatrical experience, that's the closest I ever came to landin' in the lights!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The White Peril

Is all too often undetected.
—Peter Rabbit.

Jumper the Hare likes the snow. He is glad when it comes and sorry when it goes. You see, the snow is friendly to Jumper. That is because his coat is white. When everything is covered with snow Jumper can hide in plain sight. That is to say, he can sit in plain sight and not be seen. So Jumper likes the snow. It is easier, much easier, for him to escape his enemies when the snow lays deep in the Green Forest. It is not alone because of his white coat, but also because the lower branches of evergreen trees, bent down by the weight of snow, provide wonderful hiding places. Then, too, Jumper has snowshoes and can skip nimbly over snow through which some of his enemies must flounder.

But to Peter Rabbit snow is not so kind. Peter hasn't a white coat. The result is that against the white snow Peter shows up at a far greater distance than during any other part of the year. Peter has no snowshoes, so cannot get about as easily as his big cousin, Jumper. And lastly, there are at least two of Peter's enemies who dress in white and so are difficult to see as is Jumper in his white coat.

Peter had been sticking close to the dear Old Briar-patch since the snow came. It was the safest thing to do. You see the brambles are just as sharp in winter as in summer and just as ready to tear the coats of those too big to travel in Peter's private paths. So although Old Man Coyote and Reddy Fox could see Peter in the dear Old Briar-patch they knew it was useless to even try to go in after him. He could run about in there and just laugh at them. Yes, the safest place for Peter was right there in the dear Old Briar-patch.

But Peter was tired of staying in the Briar-patch. He wanted to go over to the Green Forest. He wanted to visit the Old Pasture. His long heels fairly itched for a run over to the young orchard Farmer Brown's boy had set out. Now that the snow was so deep it might be that he could reach above the protecting wire mesh around each tree trunk, and apple bark would be a welcome change in his bill of fare. He spent much time on the edge of the dear Old Briar-patch or just outside. Mrs. Peter knew the symptoms. She knew that sooner or later Peter would go. Nothing she could say would stop him. It wasn't that she minded being left alone in the Briar-patch. This didn't bother her at all. It was that she never could feel sure that she would ever see him again.

"You know very well that for you and me the safest place in the world at any time of year is the dear Old Briar-patch. No one with any sense at all would think of leaving it, especially now," said she severely.

"Why especially now?" asked Peter, pretending that he didn't understand just what she meant.

"You know as well as I do that with everything all white you can be seen from a much greater distance than at any other time," declared Mrs. Peter.

"But I can see others just as well as they can see me. They can't come sneaking up on me," retorted Peter.

"Just the same, you are safer here than anywhere else, and you know it," replied Mrs. Peter sharply.

Peter did know it, but wouldn't admit it. You have seen people like that, refusing to admit anything that might interfere with something they wanted to do. The world is full of such folks.

Snow is beautiful in its purity. To some of the little folk of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest it is friendly, protecting them from hungry eyes, enabling them to live with less worry and fewer frights. To others it is a white peril. One of these is Peter Rabbit. It needn't be if he would stay in the dear Old Briar-patch, but he won't.

New Witnesses Say Hines Saw Schultz at Bar

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 30.—Two witnesses found by the prosecution since the first trial of James J. Hines, Tammany leader charged with protecting the Dutch Schultz policy racket, testified today in the retrial of Hines that they saw the politician and slain racketeer conferring at the Embassy Club early in 1933. The witnesses, Edward Severi and Theodore Giles, said they were then, respectively, bartender and cashier of the club.

Their testimony that Schultz and Hines sat together several times was the outstanding new evidence presented by District Attorney Dewey.

The suicide yesterday of George Weinberg, star prosecution witness in the first trial, was not mentioned to the jury, though the name of Weinberg walked through the stories of witnesses throughout the day.

Judge Charles C. Nott, jr., called Dewey and Lloyd P. Stryker, chief defense counsel, to the bench to discuss the admissibility of Weinberg's testimony at the last trial, and the question of how the jury was to be informed of his death.

It was agreed no mention should be made in court of the fact Weinberg shot himself to death while under guard of police detectives, until the prosecutor attempts to read the gangster's testimony of last summer into the trial record. Judge Nott will rule on its admissibility then.

Figueras, Spain, Jan. 30.—"We do not intend to surrender, but will fight on to the finish." This is what Alvarez Del Vayo, foreign minister of the Spanish Republic, told John Elliott, special correspondent of The Post, today.

Optimistic and as undaunted as ever, Del Vayo seemed confident the harassed loyalist army would re-form its lines and hold the Province of Gerona, the only province remaining between it and interment in France.

"We have seen worse day," continued Del Vayo, "our position today is admittedly critical, but it was much worse in November, 1936, when Madrid was attacked. Then we did not have an army. Now we have an army, but we have no munitions. But our chief preoccupation at present is the question of refugees. They are congesting the roads to such an extent that it is difficult to bring up badly needed provisions and munitions to the army."

Court Upholds State Use Tax Proposed Here

The United States Supreme Court yesterday upheld the constitutionality of a use tax similar to that proposed for the District, but sales tax opponents immediately pointed out that the decision did not solve the practical difficulty of enforcement.

The Supreme Court's ruling was to uphold a California statute. Colin F. Stam, counsel of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, said the decision eliminated any doubts as to the legality of the tax.

The proposed District use tax would apply the 2 per cent retail sales tax to all purchases in excess of an aggregate of $25 in any one month made outside the National Capital by local residents to escape the tax.

Critics of the sales tax contend District officials could not enforce the use tax without "spying."

Warrings' Second Tax Fraud Trial Starts Tomorrow

Second trial of the Warring brothers on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government of income taxes will begin in District Court tomorrow before Justice Laws.

The first trial, which resulted from the three brothers' alleged activities in a $2,000,000-a-year numbers racket, ended with a hung jury.

Leo A. Rover will again defend Leo and Charles Warring, while Attorneys Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connell will represent Emmitt Warring. Gordon L. R. Sadur, income tax accountant, whom the Government charges showed the Warrings how to defraud the Treasury, will be defended by Former Assistant United States Attorney Irvin Goldstein.

Prosecuting the case will be United States Attorney Pine and Assistant United States Attorney Wilson.

Former Slave Recalls Saving Master's Ham From 'Yankees'

Retired U. S. Employe, 99, Tells Story Of Loyalty in Old South; Left in Charge Of Family When His Owner Died in War

A tale of devotion and loyalty rare in these hurried times was unfolded yesterday by Frank U. Whitted, 99-year-old colored man, born in slavery and now the second oldest person on the retirement rolls of the Civil Service Commission.

Retired from the Government Printing Office in 1922, after serving the Government for 28 years, he lives in a trim little house at 1753 Eighth street northwest, with his 76-year-old wife.

He has never worn glasses, appears about 25 years younger than his actual age and with the exception of a sereve cold last summer has not been ill in 40 years.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he was the property of Dr. Osborne Long, Hillsboro, N. C., physician, on whose estate he was born and raised. Dr. Long was the father of five daughters and one son, who was severely wounded at the Battle of Petersburg. The doctor went North to attend his son, became ill and died, leaving his home and family in the care of the young slave.

Whitted chuckled as he said, "We heard the Yankees were coming, so I packed all the gold, silver and china in a barrel, carted it down to the fields in a wheelbarrow and buried it. Next morning, real early, I plowed all around it, and those Yankees never got a thing from my folks.

"We heard that they were partial to hams, so I went to the meathouse and took all the hams out to a big pile of stones that we threw out of the fields when we were plowing. I buried them under the stones so the dogs on the place couldn't get at them, and sure enough, when those soldiers rode up I told them we had sold all our hams, and they didn't even touch the rest of our supplies."

He recalled that his master's eldest daughter, "Miss Maggie" Long, later married Gen. Barringer of the Union Army, and settled in Charlotte.

"I went down there about 15 years ago," he said, "and received a wonderful welcome."

Son of Lincoln's Undertaker to Be Buried Tomorrow

Services for Harvey A. Sands, whose father, Frank P. Sands, was undertaker for the burial of President Lincoln, will be conducted at 2 p. m., tomorrow at his residence, 1346 G street southeast. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Sands died yesterday at 82.

Services Held For Mrs. Rippey

Services for Mrs. Nina S. Rippey, 68, were held yesterday at her home, 116 Wooten avenue, Friendship Heights. Burial was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Rippey, the wife of Charles W. Rippey, District school teacher, died Friday after an apoplectic stroke. She was a past president of the Woman's Club of Friendship Heights and of the Elmira College Club of Washington, and a member of the Church of the Covenant.

D. C. Resident Would Help De Haven Heirs Collect $4,000,000 in Principal and Interest; Lender Died Poor, Grave Unmarked

Hope that he might collect more than $4,000,000 as principal and interest on a loan made to the Continental Congress in 1777 for the use of Gen. Washington's army at Valley Forge was expressed yesterday by William H. Graham, a Washingtonian with offices in the Woodward Building at Fifteenth and H streets northwest.

W. H. GRAHAM

Discovery of early papers of the Congress in the course of the general house-cleaning to which Government records are being subjected, Graham said, renewed his former interest in the old claim. Descendants of the original lender were said to have attempted to collect it from time to time ever since the Revolutionary War ended.

His own interest originally was aroused, he added, because his first wife was one of the 200 or 300 presumable heirs of the original lender who would have participated in the huge sum if it were paid.

Family History Tells Story

Graham produced a printed booklet on the De Haven family in substantiation of the claim, as well as correspondence from descendants of the family said to have supplied the funds and supplies for Gen. Washington.

These set forth that Jacob De Haven, who lived near Valley Forge, "among others, being appealed to for aid, nobly responded by advancing the Continental Government $450,000 through Robert Morris, the financier of the Revolution, at the head of the Government finances at the time."

The booklet tells of an effort to collect the claim that was made almost contemporaneously with the Spanish-American War, and another about 1905. Previous efforts had been made shortly after the Revolution, in the 1850s and in the 70s.

Government Couldn't Pay

The record compiled by Howard De Haven Ross, and cited by Graham, reports "The Government acknowledged the Revolutionary loan of Jacob De Haven at the time, and sometime afterward offered to reimburse him in Continental money (script) which he declined to accept because of the enormous depreciation of the currency.

De Haven failed in his efforts to secure a settlement during his lifetime because of the depleted condition of the National Treasury, the Government being unable for many years to meet even the interest on the public debt • • •"

Like Robert Morris, the account of the old debt records, Jacob De Haven died in financial distress. "The closing years of Jacob De Haven's life were passed in deep pecuniary embarrassment," it reads, "and he died of a broken heart in the year 1812."

Grave Is Unmarked

His remains lie in the old Swedes' burial ground, although no tomb or monument of any kind marks his resting place. The burying ground mentioned, it is pointed out, is near Swedeland, Pa., adjoining the old De Haven estate.

Whether it would be the intention of the De Haven heirs to place a suitable monument on the grave of the old patriot, should the Government finally discharge the debt claimed, with interest for more than a century, Graham yesterday was not prepared to say. It was a question in his mind whether he would even be entitled to share in the presumptive windfall. Nevertheless, he said, he was prepared to help the heirs get theirs.

GHA Friends Ask Rejected Contributors To Aid Hospital

The citizens committee for medical freedom yesterday urged Community Chest contributors whose conditional pledges of more than $10,000 have been returned, to send their rejected donations to Garfield Hospital.

During the Community Chest funds campaign, approximately 850 contributors complied with the plea of the citizens committee and attached stickers to their pledges making them invalid if the Chest allotted funds to any District hospital discriminating against physicians of Group Health Association.

During the funds drive G. H. A. doctors were banned from using District hospitals. Since then, however, Garfield Hospital has accorded privileges to five G. H. A. practitioners.

Walter Woehlke, committee president, declared yesterday:

"The committee for medical freedom and its sympathizers stand for a square deal for physicians and their patients based on merit alone.

"Garfield Hospital has now issued 'courtesy cards' to five doctors, elsewhere discriminated against, on merit, and thus opened up the prospect of fair consideration for other doctors, regardless of their affiliation with Group Health Association, our local medical co-operative.

"Garfield Hospital can therefore come before the people of Washington with clean hands in asking for financial support. Other hospitals which receive public support through the Chest's hospitalization fund can not."

Embargo Lifters Held Only Sham Backers of Spain

The persistence of the "Lift the Spanish Embargo" groups in the face of recent developments in Spain shows they are playing the "united front" game, Edward J. Heffron, secretary of the Keep the Spanish Embargo Committee, said last night.

Heffron told students and faculty of Catholic University that the "embargo lifters" are more interested in making a show of united front sentiment in this country in the hope of bolstering the sagging morale of the movement in France and Britain, than they are in aiding the loyalist's cause.

"There was at one time some plausible basis for their pretense that they were really interested in the loyalist cause," he said. "But the newspapers today are quoting military observers all over the world as saying that the loyalists haven't a chance.

Rep. Thorkelson Terms Health Plan Unconstitutional

By the Associated Press.

Representative Thorkelson (Republican), Montana, a physician, told the House yesterday President Roosevelt's proposals for an expanded public health program were "not only unconstitutional but will in the end destroy the medical profession and the ambitions of men who have unselfishly given everything within them to aid suffering human kind."

The Montanan described the health proposals as another attempt to "undermine the people's rights."

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, said in a radio talk that under the health legislation, the States would be "free to establish compulsory health insurance" if they chose to do so, but the Federal Government would not require it.

Gay Map Protests Zoning Change in Zoo Neighborhood

This map embellished with animals was submitted to the Zoning Commission to protest a request for a change in certain areas near the Zoo from residential to commercial. Dorothy Martin, a District employe, points to the disputed areas, which Col. David McCoach and Arno Cammerer, both of the Zoning Commission, inspected yesterday afternoon. The issue will be decided Wednesday. Opponents contend that animals at the Zoo will be the only residents to gain by the change

Dr. O'Malley, Psychiatrist, Dies in Buffalo

Former St. Elizabeths Clinic Director Was 1st Woman to Hold Post

Dr. Mary O'Malley, 72, nationally known psychiatrist, for 30 years clinical director of St. Elizabeths Hospital, died yesterday in Buffalo, N. Y., after a long illness.

DR. O'MALLEY

A native of Medina, N. Y., Dr. O'Malley was educated at the University of Buffalo Medical School, graduating in 1897. She served her internship at Sisters of Charity Hospital in Buffalo and was for seven years on the staff of Binghamton State Hospital for the Insane before coming to St. Elizabeths in 1905, first woman physician to be appointed to the executive staff of a psychiatric hospital.

Dr. O'Malley served as president of the American Medical Women's Association in 1933 and 1934. She was a member of the faculty and on the consulting staff of George Washington University and the consulting staff of Gallinger Hospital.

The author of many articles for the American Medical Journal, Dr. O'Malley was the delegate of the Women's Medical Association to the International Congress of Psychiatry in Geneva in 1928.

Surviving are a brother, John O'Malley, and two sisters, Ann and Margaret O'Malley, all of Buffalo. Funeral services will be held there on Thursday.

Mrs. Jane Francis Burial in Chicago

Services for Mrs. Jane Fuller Francis, 64, daughter of the late Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, were held yesterday in St. John's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest. Burial will take place in Graceland Cemetery, Chicago, this morning.

Mrs. Francis had lived in Washington as a young woman, and later in Paris, returning here a short time ago. She was the widow of Nathaniel Francis and a sister of the late Mrs. Hugh C. Wallace, of this city.

Say it with a Clear Skin

OUR SKIN frequently reflects how we feel. In business and social contacts we like our friends to tell us how well we look.

The laity now recognizes—as physicians and scientists have for years—the vital importance of rich, red blood, as the foundation of strength, energy, and a clear healthy skin.

for that tired-let-down feeling

It is well known how worry, overwork and undue strain take their toll of the precious red cells of the blood.

S.S.S. Tonic brings you new strength and vitality by restoring your blood to a healthy state, and its benefits are cumulative and enduring in the absence of an organic trouble.

Further, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite . . . foods taste better . . . natural digestive juices are stimulated, and finally, the food you eat is of more value . . . a very important step back to health.

Buy and use with complete confidence, and we believe you, like thousands of others, will be enthusiastic in your praise of S.S.S. Tonic for its part in making "you feel like yourself again."

At all drug stores in two sizes. You will find the larger size more economical.
